to the beginning of the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign, September 26th, 1921? 1801

A. Oh, yes, they were, I would say right off, not exactly knowing the length of time, but they were anyway with me some of them as high as nine months, some of them six months.

Q. 45. Had they sold Beech-Nut scrap through this Wisconsin territory under your directions?

A. Oh, yes, sure.

Q. 46. Now, tell us just how you proceeded to conduct this introductory campaign on Beech-Nut cigarettes in that Fox River Valley territory which was under your charge?

A. Well, we worked the cigarettes just the same as we worked the scrap department, you understand, on the strength of our past success on all of those different brands, that is, our success on our scrap tobacco. 1802

Q. 47. How did you proceed when you were introducing the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. We would go into a town and I assigned the men different territories of the town, and myself, I would alternate, working with one man and then with another man perhaps half a day or a day, going along with the men to see that their work was done properly. That was my work, to see that a town is properly advertised and to see that we have the proper distribution. 1803

Q. 48. What time did you start out in the morning?

A. Well, we left a call seven o'clock when there was just calling on trade, but if there was any missionary work to be done, any sampling, we left an earlier call, and if there were factories in the town and the consumer was going to work as early as five and six o'clock in the morning. All depends on what factories there were in the town. We not only sold goods but advertised and sampled.

1804 Q. 49. I understand you to say you would go with one of your men in this crew?

A. Positively.

Q. 50. Now, if you went into a store to introduce the Beech-Nut cigarette, what would you do, or what did you do?

A. Went into this store and introduced ourselves—my name.

Q. 51. How?

A. "Is the buyer in?" "Alright, my name is Mr. Marks", and if I had a deal with another man, "This is Mr. Zimlicka, we are representing P. Lorillard Com-1805 pany, the makers of the celebrated Beech-Nut Tobacco which I see you have on hand", or have had or haven't had, whatever the occasion might be. And, "We are introducing this brand" or whatever it may be, "on the strength of our other brands, Lorillard Tobacco Company being in business ever since 1760, one of the oldest concerns in the United States", we would present our article, whatever we had, for sale. That is about the only thing we would do, any more than talk on the merits of the goods, and insist and stay until we got an order.

Q. 52. What, if anything, did you carry with you when you went in there?

1806 A. We always carried the article, carried it for cash, that was the instructions always to carry the goods we had along for cash, that is, anything special we were pushing. Those goods were supposed to be sold to the dealer, put on a shelf, given a receipt for the same, and telling him that should he require any more of this particular kind of goods he can get it from his wholesale house, the jobbers, that all jobbers in the country handle our line of stuff.

Q. 53. On this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign when you went into a man's store what did you carry with you in connection with the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. We carried Beech-Nut cigarettes only, that is any commodity to sell, but we had advertising, we had two or three different sorts of posters and then we had metal signs and we had packages, they were regular packages same as the stock, what we called samples, but they were not samples, they were regular fifteen cent packages of Beech-Nut cigarettes. 1807

Q. 54. You had a carton of cigarettes, did you?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. 55. And you sold cartons to the man if he wanted to buy them?

A. Yes.

Q. 56. What I understand you to say, you gave him a receipt? 1808

A. We collected cash, that is the custom.

Q. 57. You collected cash and collected a receipt?

A. Yes. Distribution was what we were working on and we insisted on selling a man the first carton to get it on his shelf, we got a receipt always. The reason why I always insisted on giving a receipt was that my name—in fact, all division managers' names—is stamped on the bottom of each and every order, whether original or duplicate. This dealer was left this receipted bill with my name on there, in case of any misrepresentation on the part of any of the men or anything of the sort they would have my address and enter their complaint, and the P. Lorillard Company's name was on top of it and if they did not refer to me they could refer it to the New York office in any misrepresentation, or give us an opportunity to check up on the sales. 1809

(The witness produces an order slip consisting of three sheets, one a yellow sheet, one a white sheet and one a tissue paper sheet, with his name stamped on the white sheet and the yellow sheet, and it is agreed between counsel that as these order blanks

1810 are similar to the order blank Defendant's Exhibit No. 10 already introduced in the case, and that reference will hereafter be made to Defendant's Exhibit No. 10.

The witness: (Continuing) Now, in case this customer did not care to buy from us, they have their jobbers and deal with their jobbers. Then he signs this order and he gets the duplicate, whether he pays cash or gives the order through the jobber, the original is brought in to me each and every night and turned over to me and I take them to the jobber they are made out for the goods to be delivered.

1811

Q. 58. The carton of Beech-Nut cigarettes which you have brought into the store and would sell to the customers if he wanted to purchase, was it like this carton of ten packages of cigarettes which is here before you and which is also in this case as Defendant's Cross Exhibit No. 9.

A. Positively the same; fac-simile.

Q. 59. And likewise the individual packages of cigarettes, are they like this plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1?

A. Positively the same thing. Our samples were all original stock. They were the original package, there 1812 wasn't any such thing as samples when we first started Beech-Nut cigarettes. The cartons we used as samples were the same as the stock, in fact they were the stock because I would get these packages and charge myself up to the amount of packages I got and credit the jobber I got them for.

Q. 60. Now, you stated that you took some advertising matter into the store when you called on a customer. What did you do with the advertising matter in that store?

A. We asked the storekeeper if we could place it on his window post and if they objected to it we asked him if we could put it up on the wall on the inside, and not 1813 only that, but we asked him to kindly allow us to take this carton of Beech-Nut cigarettes like Defendant's Cross Exhibit No. 9 here, and place it open on the counter, and in each and every carton of this cigarette there is a little yellow carton card bearing the words "Lorillard's Beech-Nut Perfect Cigarettes, 20 for 15 cents, greatest of them all." Inserting this in the end of the carton and placing it on the end of his show case.

Q. 61. I understood you to testify this manner of introducing Beech-Nut cigarettes to the trade during this campaign, was similar to the procedure you followed in introducing Beech-Nut scrap tobacco to the trade, is 1814 that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 62. You had taken part in a campaign introducing the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco in this Wisconsin territory, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. Johnson: Objection to the leading questions.

Q. 63. (By Mr. Cavanagh) And have you had the same men with you in that introductory campaign on 1815 the Beech-Nut scrap you had with the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 64. So that they were familiar with the manner of introducing the Beech-Nut scrap?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 65. What instructions did you give them in introducing the Beech-Nut scrap in connection with the campaign of the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco, if any?

A. Well, sir, instructed them that on the strength of our past success with Beech-Nut tobacco, and Lor-

1816 illard being in business since 1760, one of the oldest and largest concerns in the United States and at all times, I had instructed them in promoting the sales of scrap tobacco to always be careful in mentioning any other competitive brands. Now, my object in that was this, that my early training had been never mention any competitive brands as in so doing my superiors had always said we were advertising the other fellows tobacco and that has always been my strong point, to be loyal to P. Lorillard Company and not mention any other concerns. Loyalty, that was one thing we stuck by and always did insist upon, and that would apply to the ciga-
1817 rette just the same as it would to the Beech-Nut tobacco.

Q. 66. You say it did apply to the cigarette as well?

A. It did apply, and furthermore, that the section we were going to work is a very big Turkish section and P. Lorillard cigarettes were the leading Turkish cigarette in that section and it would be very well for them, and in fact I insisted on them mentioning the different Turkish brands of the P. Lorillard Company for the amount of prestige that we might get in placing the Beech-Nut cigarette, and I have always impressed upon them that the word "P. Lorillard" on tobacco was just the same as "Sterling" on silver, that they should be 1818 well proud of working for an old concern like that and such a large concern. And in not only selling goods, but also sampling the consumers our sale talk came in practically the same to the consumer. We were forever talking P. Lorillard Company, one of the oldest concerns of that kind in the tobacco business, and on the strength of them being the makers of the highest grade Turkish cigarettes in existence.

Q. 67. I understood you to testify you would go into a store with one of your salesmen in various towns during this campaign, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. 68. Did you work the towns of Green Bay, Manitowoc, and Appleton during this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign? 1819

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 69. You personally called on the trade in those towns?

A. With one of the men or the other, alternating.

Q. 70. Of your crew?

A. Of the crew.

Q. 71. Will you state whether or not you ever told anyone, or left anyone under the impression that the Beech-Nut cigarettes or the Beech-Nut scrap were made by the same concern that makes the Beech-Nut gum 1820 and the Beech-Nut food products, made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Did I ever insinuate anything like that?

Q. 72. Yes.

A. Absoltuely not.

Q. 73. Did you ever know any of your men to make any such statement to your knowledge?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. 74. Will you state whether or not if such a statement had been made by any of your men it would be contrary to your orders?

A. Absolutely, they know that. 1821

Q. 75. Will you please state whether or not you heard from any customer or consumer or purchaser any comments or inquiries or questions which would lead you to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut cigarettes and Beech-Nut scrap tobacco were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company or the concern that makes the gum or food products?

A. No, sir, the brand was too well established up there to do anything of that kind. Lorillard was too well established.

1822 Q. 76. About how many dealers or customers a day would you call on during this campaign?

A. Well, that would average from twelve to fifteen dealers, I would think, and it would be sometimes perhaps more and then again not so many. It all depends on whether it was in a scattered section or congested section.

Q. 77. And how long did you continue this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign?

A. Up until the third week in December of 1921, then we went on our vacation.

Q. 78. Did you ever have any meetings with your 1823 crew for instructions before they started out or at any time?

A. Do you mean on this Beech-Nut cigarette?

Q. 79. Yes.

A. Sure, I did.

Q. 80. How often did you have those meetings?

A. Well, I tell you, we didn't have any meetings because I was with the men all the time, we were with the men every night of the week.

Q. 81. Where were you with them?

A. At the hotel, I was right with the men at all times.

1824 Q. 82. Were the whole crew at the hotel?

A. Yes, the men that were in the town. Some men would be out a day or two, assigned to some town that they couldn't get back, but they were supposed to report.

Q. 83. You had them together frequently?

A. Oh, yes, you might say at all times I was in direct contact with the men, every night.

Q. 84. What instructions did you give them when you were together in connection with this Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. The only instructions I gave them was when we first started, as I have stated here, with regards to placing this Beech-Nut cigarette with the storekeepers on the same plan and ideas we did the Beech-Nut tobacco, on the strength of being one of P. Lorillard's brands. 1825

Q. 85. And that crew had already worked with you on this Beech-Nut scrap tobacco, as you testified?

A. Absolutely, there wasn't anything to instruct each and every night any more than finding fault perhaps because they hadn't put up enough posters on the man's windows or something of that sort.

Direct examination closed. 1826

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 85. Mr. Marks, when did you enter the employ of the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Well, sir, that was in November, 1914.

X-Q. 86. Are you in their employ now?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 87. Have you been with them ever since?

A. Ever since.

X-Q. 88. What line of work were you in before you joined them? 1827

A. Well, sir, I was selling goods, I was selling bottles and corks and labels.

X-Q. 89. Were you in the tobacco business at all before that?

A. No.

X-Q. 90. Where are you stationed now?

A. Green Bay, Wis.

X-Q. 91. In what position?

A. As head salesman.

1828 X-Q. 92. Of any department?

A. No. You see, we haven't got those separate departments any more since 1922.

X-Q. 93. You are head salesman for all of the Lorillard products?

A. The entire line of products.

X-Q. 94. And what is that district?

A. It is what we term the northern part of Wisconsin and the upper peninsula, that would be from Fond du Lac, Wisconsin.

X-Q. 95. And from Fond du Lac north?

A. Yes, not south, don't come south of Fond du 1829 Lac.

X-Q. 96. How do you speak of the district south of your district?

A. We call that the Milwaukee section or southern section, in other words, I guess.

X-Q. 97. I understood you to say that during the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign your crew consisted of four men beside yourself, is that right?

A. That is right.

X-Q. 98. And were these all men who had previously been in the P. Lorillard Company's employ before they entered this campaign?

1830 A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 99. How long had the newest man been with the P. Lorillard Company, do you know?

A. How long had the newest man?

X-Q. 100. Yes.

A. I would have to look up my records, I would be safe in saying six months anyway.

X-Q. 101. Which one was he?

A. Well, that was a fellow named Hanson.

X-Q. 102. How long was the oldest P. Lorilard Company man in the employ before that?

A. He had been with me since 1920, first of January, 1920. 1831

X-Q. 103. Which one was that?

A. Morris Miles.

X-Q. 104. Did you have these same four men with you right through the campaign?

A. On cigarettes?

X-Q. 105. Yes.

A. Yes.

X-Q. 106. I am speaking of the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign beginning, as you have stated, September 26th, 1921?

A. Yes, September 26th, 1921. 1832

X-Q. 107. And how long did that campaign continue?

A. That continued up until the end of the year, that is, the third week in December. We went on our vacations the same week.

X-Q. 108. Was the introductory campaign resumed after the vacation?

A. No, we worked our regular line.

X-Q. 109. Did you have any other men at all helping you in this special Beech-Nut cigarette campaign beside these four?

A. No, that was all.

X-Q. 110. None others hired temporarily? 1833

A. No, just my own men, that is all.

X-Q. 111. You didn't organize any special missionary crews?

A. No.

X-Q. 112. Are any of these four men who were with you then still with the P. Lorillard Company?

A. No, I don't think so, in fact, I know they are not.

X-Q. 113. Do you know when Mr. Hanson left the employ of the P. Lorillard Company?

A. No, I can't just recall that.

X-Q. 114. Just approximately?

1834 A. Oh, I should judge about a month previous to us going on our vacation that year, the third week in December, 1921.

X-Q. 115. Didn't you just say all of these four men worked with you on through this campaign to the end of it?

A. Yes, all except this Mr. Hanson.

X-Q. 116. Then Hanson left during the campaign, did he?

A. Yes, he left during the campaign.

X-Q 117. Why did he leave?

A. Well, I considered him kind of weak, and I didn't 1835 want to carry him over to the next year, and it is customary, understand to always get rid of any inferior material we have in salesmen always before the vacation not extend them that courtesy and he was not a strong enough salesman for us to carry over.

X-Q. 118. Did you watch his work during this campaign?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 119. Were you with him a good deal?

A. Yes I was with him, I was trying to develop him and he was slow to develop Some men develop very fast and others do not.

1836 X-Q. 120. Did you find that he was a little bit careless in presenting these Beech-Nut cigarettes to the dealers.

A. No, it was not that at all, he followed instructions to the letter, understand, there wasn't any fault in that. The only thing was he couldn't talk. I tried to develop him to approach the customer better but he was a very honest fellow and followed instructions to the letter as far as I ever knew anything about him, but he was not there when it came to putting up the argument. He didn't develop to talk the line of stuff, that was it. Had no conviction.

X-Q. 121. Did you and your crew do the town of Manitowoc and district during that campaign? 1837

A. I assigned men to each section, you understand.

X-Q. 122. Were you and your crew in Manitowoc for a while during that campaign?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 123. Was Mr Hanson with you then?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 124. Did he do a part of the town of Manitowoc for you?

A. Oh. yes.

X-Q. 125. Now, this Mr. Urban Zimlicka, did he stay with you right through the campaign? 1838

A. Yes.

X-Q. 126. When did he leave the employ of the P. Lorillard Company?

A. He left sometime during the following year, in 1922.

X-Q. 127. Do you know why he left the company?

A. Why, yes, I assigned some work to do and he thought it was a little bit—it didn't just appeal to him so I let him go. In other words I sent him out to put up some enamel signs and they were very heavy and some boys don't care to do some of that heavy work, so I found out he was complaining about it and rather than 1839 have any friction at all with any of the crew it is policy to get rid of a man like that.

X-Q. 128. What time in 1922 did you say he left?

A. Well I couldn't say as to that. I would have to look up my records.

X-Q. 129. When did Mr. Lloyd Whitney leave the employ of the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Lloyd Whitney left the employ—he resigned at Manitowoc, this same town.

X-Q. 130. When was that?

A. That was in 1921.

1840 X-Q. 131. What month?

A. Well that was in December too, right up until the last of the campaign.

X-Q. 132. Did he leave you before the campaign ended?

A. Well, right about the time of the end of the campaign.

X-Q. 133. He didn't stay with you then right through to the end?

A. Within a week, I guess.

X-Q. 134. Why did he leave the company?

A. Well, if I remember right, now, I don't know, he 1841 just wanted to leave, that is all. He resigned and I think his statement was at the time that he didn't like the idea of selling cigarettes, that his folks were objecting.

X-Q. 135. How long had he been with the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Well, he had been with me about seven months.

X-Q. 136. Had you been watching his work during this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 137. Had you been with him on his visits to the dealers?

A. Not a great deal. I couldn't be with anybody a 1842 great deal, understand, alternate, I was with one of the men each day.

X-Q. 138. But you were with him—

A. —as much as I was with any of the other men, with the exceptions of perhaps if I had assigned him—he had a car and instead of working the larger towns he would make the smaller towns, perhaps one store or two or three stores, little country towns.

X-Q. 139. This time he resigned in Manitowoc, is that the time you and your crew were doing the Manitowoc neighborhood?

A. Yes, we had finished. It was our second trip 1843 back into Manitowoc, brushing it up. We had finished the territory and were coming back brushing it up again with advertising posters.

X-Q. 140. Had you found he was careless in his manner of presenting these Beech-Nut cigarettes to the dealers?

A. Absolutely not, had no fault to find with Mr. Whitney, he followed instructions to the letter and he was very honest.

X-Q. 141. Did he visit the dealers in parts of Manitowoc?

A. No, he didn't visit any dealers in Manitowoc. 1844

X-Q.142. Are you sure of that?

A. Yes, I am sure of it.

X-Q. 143. Why was that?

A. Not any particular reason except he was assigned outside of town, it just happened to be his lot he was assigned on some outside stuff on account of operating a car. We didn't usually operate the car in the town when the crew was there, understand. We had two cars.

X-Q. 144. Did you keep records of the assignments of your men during your campaign trips?

A. Assignments? I don't just understand what you mean by "assigments." 1845

X-Q. 145. The assignment of districts from day to day, did you keep any records of where you assigned each man each day?

A. Yes, sure, I have those records.

X-Q. 146. You could check up on them, could you, if you were asked to?

A. Well, now, I don't know whether I could or not either. That is the time I was down here in Milwaukee, my headquarters, and it is possible those records at that time have been destroyed when we moved. We burned a 1846 lot of stuff when I moved here rather than carry it along, when I moved up to Green Bay to make my headquarters there.

X-Q. 147. Then during a part of this campaign drive you were not right with your crew, were you?

A. I was in direct communication with them, I was right with them and assigned them and they were perhaps out one day and back that same night.

X-Q. 148. But during this time at Manitowoc, this second time that your crew was in Manitowoc you have spoken of, you have said you were not with them. About how long was that that you were not with them?

1847 A. Did I say I wasn't with them in Manitowoc? I couldn't carry these records around with me. Understand, each and every week when I would come home I would have all of this accumulation to put on file here at home.

X-Q. 149. At Milwaukee?

A. Yes, at Milwaukee headquarters.

X-Q. 150. I want to understand about the second time your crew was in Maintowoc?

A. I was there with my men.

X-Q. 151. You were there with your men during the time they were working Manitowoc the second time?

1848 A. Yes, sir. That is the time Mr. Whitney resigned, understand. He came in and I got him on the phone sometime, I don't remember what phone it was, they were supposed to send in their reports, they got my routes, they are supposed to send in their daily reports for me to send in to the New York office, and I got him on the phone and called him in and when he came in that night he came in pretty late and tired and I suppose he was kind of peeved and one thing and another that is the time he resigned.

X-Q. 152. This Morris Miles, did he stay with you right through the campaign?

A. Oh, yes. 1849

X-Q. 153. When did he leave the employ of the P. Lorillard Company?

A. He left in the fall of 1922, because he was with me after I made my headquarters in Green Bay.

X-Q. 154. Why did he leave the company?

A. Well, Mr. Miles had applied for a position with some other concern and I got wind of it and thought if he was applying for some other position it would only be a question of time I would lose him, so to protect myself I discharged him.

X-Q. 155. Where did he go from the Lorillard Company? 1850

A. That I couldn't say, I can't recall.

X-Q. 156. Can you tell me again the present address, so far as you know, of Mr. Hanson?

A. As far as I know it is Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

X-Q. 157. And of Mr. Whitney?

A. At Marshfield, Wisconsin.

X-Q. 158. During this special Beech-Nut cigarette drive did you observe anything in the way your men were working the territory, or did you hear anything from the dealers that caused you to caution them about the way they presented these Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. I had no occasion to. 1851

X-Q. 159. You had no complaints of any kind about the way you were offering the Beech-Nut cigarettes to the market?

A. No, none whatever.

X-Q. 160. Then during this campaign their methods were your methods, were they?

A. Absolutely.

X-Q. 161. Didn't you have any other men at all than these four during that campaign?

A. No, that was all.

1852 X-Q. 162. Did you take part in the introductory campaign of the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco?

A. Oh, yes.

X-Q. 163. What district was that?

A. In Illinois.

X-Q. 164. Did you take part in the introductory campaign of Beech-Nut tobacco in Wisconsin?

A. Oh, yes.

X-Q. 165. What part of Wisconsin?

A. Southern part of Wisconsin, that is Kenosha, Racine and Beloit, Madison and the western part over there around Grant County and Milwaukee.

1853 X-Q. 166. Didn't you say on direct examination that you were assigned to the Fox River Valley in that campaign?

A. Yes, I did, but I am talking about the whole year, but I had the whole state and the upper peninsula.

X-Q. 167. On that Beech-Nut scrap?

A. Yes, but it was not until 1921 that I had charge of the state, you understand. I was in 1919 in the southern part of the state.

X-Q. 168. While you were in charge of the drive on Beech-Nut scrap tobacco in Wisconsin, did you call any meetings of your salesmen in order to warn them to be 1854 careful not to present this Beech-Nut tobacco or let it appear it was the product of any other concern but the Lorillard Company?

A. Well, yes, that has always been my instructions, but we had no special meetings, you understand, because I was with the men at all times in their crew work in this tobacco, same as the cigarettes, and my early training had always been to the point to never mention any competitor's name because we had reaped a whole lot of benefit, you understand, from these other tobacco concerns mentioning our commodity, they were advertising us and it has always been my early training to never mention it, only P. Lorillard Company, never 1855 mention any other concern, regardless of who, because it would be advertising their brands.

X-Q. 169. Can you name any particular time or instance when you talked to your men along that line?

A. Why, it is all of the time.

X-Q. 170. Can't you think of one particular instance, place an approximate time?

A. No, because that was every day's conversation, "Loyalty" never left it a minute. Never had any occasion to call any special meeting in that respect because my men were kept right up with those instructions at all times, never let them forget about it. 1856

X-Q. 171. Either before or during the Beech-Nut cigarette introductory campaign did you call any meetings of your salesmen?

A. I did on the cigarettes. Indeed I did, to outline the work in regards to the same outline we did on the scrap tobacco.

X-Q. 172. Did you particularly warn them to avoid doing anything in offering these cigarettes to dealers, to avoid appearing to present them as the product of any other company than your own?

A. No, not any more than to mention P. Lorillard Company's Beech-Nut cigarettes. 1857

X-Q. 173. Did you ever write your salesmen any letters warning them against that sort of thing?

A. No, I don't recall any.

X-Q. 174. Either during the Beech-Nut tobacco campaign or the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 175. You never wrote anything?

A. I never had any occasion to write my men because I am always with them, and the same today.

X-Q. 176. Is this Wisconsin district for the purpose of P. Lorillard Company sales and distribution, a part of any larger district?

1858 A. Well, now, I just don't get that.

X-Q. 177. Is this Wisconsin district a part of any larger district for P. Lorillard Company's sales and distribution? A part of some district, for instance, with headquarters at Chicago?

A. No. We have a sales manager in Chicago that has charge of this whole section. We are what you might term a local representative, sort of a head salesman.

X-Q. 178. Did you ever receive from this sales manager in Chicago, to whom I understand you report, any letters or circular letters instructing you and your salesmen to be careful in presenting either the Beech-Nut 1859 tobacco during the time of this campaign or the Beech-Nut cigarettes during their campaign, to be careful not to let them appear as being put forward as the product of another company than your own?

A. No, sir, never.

X-Q. 179. Never received any letters or circulars?

A. Never.

X-Q. 180. Did you receive any letters or circular letters of that character from the P. Lorillard Company home office?

A. Well, now, I got a great many instructions, circular letters of that sort, but I don't recall of ever 1860 receiving anything pertaining to that question you ask me.

X-Q. 181. You don't remember receiving any letter or written instructions from the P. Lorillard Company in regard to your manner of presenting the Beech-Nut tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, cautioning you to avoid letting them appear to be the product of any other company than your own?

A. Well, I don't recall ever receiving them.

X-Q. 182. In your district did you have any competition among your salesmen, special rewards for those who sell the most during a given length of time or anything similar to that? 1861

A No, sir.

X-Q. 183. Did you or the company offer any bonuses or special money inducements to your salesmen or the jobbers' salesmen to increase the sales during those campaigns?

A. Well, I don't know whether anything special. I think that went on our yearly bonus. You know, we work on a yearly bonus, but nothing special. That would come under the year's work out of the scrap department. We work under a sort of bonus proposition.

X-Q. 184. But I mean during these campaigns and having reference to your sales of the Beech-Nut tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, were there any money inducements offered as additional compensation or commission for the salesmen for sales made during this campaign? 1862

A. If I understand you right, you mean during this campaign for cigarettes, any special inducement?

X-Q. 185. Either one.

A. Only as a yearly bonus, a yearly bonus on increased business in that department, the scrap department.

X-Q. 186. Did you see any circular letters or circulars in your district offering some additional sum like ten cents or twenty-five cents a thousand to salesmen or jobbers' salesmen on the sale of Beech-Nut cigarettes during a given period? 1863

A. No. We never had anything like that.

X-Q. 187. During your experience in selling or conducting the sales of Beech-Nut scrap tobacco did you hear any questions at all or any comments about whether this Beech-Nut scrap tobacco is made by the same people that put out the Beech-Nut gum and Beech-Nut peanut butter and those other Beech-Nut products?

1864 A. Well, I will tell you, I don't just recall of any special place or anything of that kind, but I will be safe in saying I have had perhaps a mighty few ask me that question, but I cannot recall of having very many ask me that.

X-Q. 188. You didn't try to remember such incidents, I suppose, at the time?

A. No, because we really were not interested in anything about anybody else. The only thing, if I was asked that question, as near as I can remember, that I would immediately deny it, of course, and say that this was the P. Lorillard Company, that has always been our 1865 by line, understand, you know.

X-Q. 189. In regard to Beech-Nut cigarettes, did you ever hear any such questions or comments at all?

A. No, I haven't, because the section we worked on, Beech-Nut tobacco, understand, the P. Lorillard Company was so well represented, I can't see why anybody would ask that question. In fact, they never asked me or my men have never mentioned about anyone asking them about it.

X-Q. 190. Did you make any attempt to remember such comments and inquiries at the time?

A. Well, I don't remember of ever hearing and I

1866 don't remember of remembering it.

X-Q. 191. Were you ever asked to make any note of such questions and comments you heard?

A. No, sir.

Re-direct Examination

By Mr. Cavanagh:

R-D Q. 192. How does the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco sell in your territory, what kind of seller is it?

A. Well, it is the leading seller. 1867

R-D Q. 193. In what lines?

A. In what they term scrap tobacco.

R-D Q. 194. In your cross examination you used the expression, "This was the P. Lorillard Company, that has always been our by-line, you know." What did you mean by that expression?

A. I mean that has always been my early training instructions to use the word "Lorillard's" so there would be no misrepresentation, and we use the word "Lorillard" so they wouldn't associate Beech-Nut cigarettes or tobacco with anybody else but P. Lorillard Company. That is what I meant by that. 1868

R-D Q. 195. In other words, Lorillard is the big thing, is that it?

A. That is what I meant.

R-D Q. 196. Near the close of your cross examination you stated that Lorillard Company was so well represented in this territory. What did you mean by that?

A. Represented by the Beech-Nut tobacco and their Turkish cigarettes.

R-D Q. 197. You mean their representation was so well established, is that it?

A. Yes. 1869

R-D Q. 198. Now, these four men you have stated that you had in your crew, this Hanson, Miles Whitney and Zimlicka, are no longer with the company?

A. No.

R-D Q. 199. Will you state whether or not any of these men were discharged from the Lorillard Company on account of any failure to follow your instructions in the marketing of Beech-Nut cigarettes or Beech-Nut scrap tobacco?

A. No, sir, except this Zimlicka on account of resenting doing the particular work he was assigned to of putting up enamel signs.

1870 R-D Q. 200. Will you state whether or not you ever knew of any of your men disobeying your instructions as you recited them in your examination?

A. Never knew any of them to.

R-D Q. 201. What would have happened to them if they had disobeyed your instructions in that respect?

A. They understood we would discharge them.

R-D Q. 202. When were you introducing the Beech-Nut scrap in Illinois, which you referred to in your cross examination?

A. That started in the year 1916.

R-D Q. 203. When did you first do any work at all 1871 in this Wisconsin territory for the Lorillard Company?

A. Well, it was in the latter part of 1916, 1917, 1918 and 1919.

R-D Q. 204. You were up through this section of the country?

A. In the southern part, not up here, down around Racine, Kenosha and Beloit. We didn't come up here, there were other men in here.

R-D Q. 205. You were not up in the Fox River Valley during those years?

A. No.

R-D Q. 206. As early as 1916 you were not up in the 1872 Fox River Valley?

A. No, indeed.

(Re-direct Examination Closed.)

Re-cross Examination

By Mr. Johnson:

R-X Q. 207. When did you conduct the drive on Beech-Nut scrap tobacco in the Fox River Valley territory in Wisconsin?

A. In 1920.

R-X Q. 208. What part of 1920? 1873

A. Well in fact, the latter part of 1919 and all of 1920.

R-X Q. 209. When did that drive on Beech-Nut scrap tobacco commence in that territory?

A. 1919. Do you mean in Wisconsin?

R-X Q. 210. Yes.

A. 1919.

R-X Q. 211. What part of the year what month?

A. Well we came up in Wisconsin just about July and August, 1919.

R-X Q. 212. How have the Beech-Nut cigarettes sold from the beginning when you introduced them in Wis- 1874 consin?

A. Well, it is kind of discouraging, not very good.

R-X Q. 213. When were the sales the largest?

A. When they first put them out, when the jobber was placing them.

R-X Q. 214. Has the quality of the cigarettes proved disappointing?

A. No, I have never had any complaint about the quality of the goods. The only complaint we ever had all the way through was they were too mild, they were not strong enough. It seemed as if the consumer up here is used to Peerless, a stronger tobacco, and Beech- 1875
Nut cigarette in this market is too mild for them.

R-X Q. 215. How are the Beech-Nut cigarettes selling right now?

A. They are not selling.

(Re-cross Examination Closed.)

Re-direct Examination

By Mr. Cavanagh:

R-D Q. 216. What do you mean by "not selling", that there is not a package of them sold?

1876 A. They are just stagnant. There is still some of them being sold, here and there you find a store sells a package occasionally, understand, but there is nobody selling them in the terms of selling compared with any other commodity in the way of cigarettes.

R-D Q. 217. Was Beech-Nut scrap on the market when you first came to that Fox River territory in July, 1919?

A. Well, it was on sale, yes, but it was not 100%.

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties that if ALBERT MARKS, a witness who previously testified on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, were recalled, he would testify in connection with his previously given deposition as follows:

That the names of Roy Hanson and Urban Zimlicka were given by me by mistake, as members of my crew working the Fox River Valley territory from September to December, 1921, in the introductory campaign on 1878 Beech-Nut cigarettes. Instead of these names I should have given the names of John Dickens of LaCrosse, Wisconsin, and a man named Oldenberg of Linden, Wisconsin. John Dickens was employed by the P. Lorillard Company from about June, 1921, (right through the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign in Wisconsin) and was with them until some time in 1922 when he left to take a position selling insurance. He was not discharged. Dickens worked in my crew right through the introductory campaign on cigarettes from September to December 16th, 1921. I heard no complaints as to his work or his methods. I understand that his address is now La

of the P. Lorillard Company about six months before the opening of the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign in Wisconsin and left its employ somewhere around February or March, 1922, in order to go into a bank somewhere in Wisconsin I believe his address is Linden, Wisconsin. Oldenberg worked in my crew in the Fox River Valley territory, Wisconsin, during the introductory campaign on Beech-Nut cigarettes from September 26th to December 16th, 1921. I heard no complaints as to his work or his methods. The facts described in regard to the work and methods of my crew in this introductory campaign on Beech-Nut cigarettes apply to Dickens 1880 and Oldenberg as members of that crew, the same as previously given in regard to the names Roy Hanson and Urban Zimlicka. I simply got the names of Hanson and Zimlicka of the Beech-Nut scrap introducing crew mixed with Dickens and Oldenberg of the cigarette crew, but upon looking at a memorandum after finishing my examination I discovered the mistake.

FRANK HOPEWELL, a witness produced in behalf of of P. Lorillard Company, defendant, being first duly sworn, in response to interrogatories propounded 1881

A. I did.

Q. 24. Did you take any part in that campaign at all?

1889 A. I did.

Q. 25. Tell us what you did.

A. My territory was allotted me on the Beech-Nut campaign, the western half of the state. I had supervision of the salesmen that covered that section during this campaign..

Q. 26. So you did not work Milwaukee in this campaign?

A. I did not.

Q. 27. Will you name some of the principal cities that you did work in your western territory?

A. The larger points I presume you want, Madison, 1890 Janesville, Beloit, La Crosse, Chippewa Falls, Eau Claire, that would be the larger points.

Q. 28. How many men did you have under you in a crew?

A. In that crew I had six men, to the best of my knowledge.

Q. 29. And what city or point did you make your headquarters?

A. Madison, Wisconsin.

A. The latter part of September to the latter part of December, 1921.

Q. 33. Did you give this crew of yours, any instructions as to how they should conduct a campaign in the introduction of this Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. Yes, sir. The morning they started working on Beech-Nut cigarettes I had a little conference with all of them in the Cardinal Hotel at Madison, Wisconsin. 1892

Q. 34. What instructions did you give them?

A. I instructed them to carry so many cigarettes under their arms or on their person to sell for cash to the dealers that they called on.

Q. 35. How were these cigarettes put up or packaged?

A. They were packed two hundred in a carton with a yellow slip in each carton. The carton was to be torn open and the yellow slip inserted and put on the dealer's counter where they sold the merchandise.

Q. 36. Is the yellow slip you refer to like this one which is in this carton of Beech-Nut cigarettes, Defendant's cross Exhibit No. 9? 1893

A. That is the identical slip, sir.

Q. 37. Will you read the words on that yellow slip?

A. "Lorillard's Beech-Nut Perfect Cigarettes, twenty for fifteen cents, greatest of them all."

Q. 38. And that is the carton?

A. That is the carton and the yellow slip I was referring to.

Q. 39. How many of these cartons would a man carry out with him in the morning?

A. He would take ten cartons.

1894 Q. 40. And what other instructionns did you give him?

A. When he sold that cigarette he was, if possible, to get in advertising matter, and all the advertising matter in the dealer's store and on his windows that he possibly could.

Q. 41. Will you state whether or not he also carried advertising matter with him?

A. They did, sir.

Q. 42. Of what did this advertising matter consist?

A. At the time of our introductory work on Beech-Nut we were working very fast and did not want to 1895 spend so much time on elaborate window displays, we were putting up posters, we had a big white poster and a yellow poster.

Q. 43. Was anyone's name on this poster?

A. Yes, sir, there is a regular picture or reproduction of a package of Beech-Nut cigarettes on this yellow poster which said, "Lorillard's Beech-Nut Cigarettes," or the name "Lorillard."

Q. 44. How often did you have these meetings of your crew?

A. These meetings, I would work these men, for instance, I would give you an example, out in Madison, I 1896 would route them out in different ways so as to meet my boys in LaCrosse ten days after they had finished Madison. The salesmen were to each take smaller towns they were to cover and as soon as I would meet them in LaCrosse I would then hold another meeting with them and that would be continued at all of the larger points.

Q. 45. Did you go around or in company with any of the salesmen when they called on stores or the trade?

A. I did, sir.

Q. 46. Will you please state whether or not you gave them any instructions as to how to approach and introduce the cigarette to the storekeeper or purchaser? What did you tell them to say, if anything?

A. I told them to tell them that was a cigarette manufactured by the P. Lorillard Company, and we also manufacture other brands of cigarettes and tobaccos as Climax, Union Leader, Murad, Beech-Nut chewing tobacco, in fact we would pick out a brand of ours that was selling the best in that particular territory or town in which we were working, letting that good selling brand be our prestige in putting in this cigarette. 1897

Q. 47. You sold Beech-Nut scrap tobacco through that territory and here in Milwaukee?

A. I have, sir.

Q. 48. What kind of seller was that and what kind of seller is it? 1898

A. Beech-Nut chewing tobacco I would say, and in fact I know, to be the best selling chewing tobacco of that description in Wisconsin to-day.

Q. 49. Did you ever know of any of these salesmen of yours in that campaign or at any other time, in the sale of Beech-Nut cigarettes, to disobey your instructions as to approaching customers?

A. No, sir, not to my knowledge.

Q. 50. Did you ever hear of any comments or inquiries or remarks from customers or consumers of the trade which would lead you to think they were under the impression the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, the same people who make the Beech-Nut gum and food products? 1899

A. I did not.

Q. 51. Did you ever hear of any of your salesmen so representing to customers that the Beech-Nut cigarettes or the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, the manufacturers of Beech-Nut gum?

A. I did not, for one particular reason, they were instructed absolutely and under no circumstances to 1900 misrepresent at any time who made Beech-Nut cigarettes or Beech-Nut chewing tobacco.

Q. 52. What were they told to tell the consumer and the trade?

A. I had understood, in fact I had understood from Mr. Everett Meyer, who was my immediate superior in 1921, there was a little controversy between the Beech-Nut Packing Company and P. Lorillard Company relative to the name "Beech-Nut" and I took particular time to call the attention of the salesmen under my supervision to the fact that under no consideration were they to let a dealer be under the opinion the Beech-Nut chew-1901 ing tobacco or cigarettes were manufactured by any other than P. Lorillard Company.

Q. 53. Now, when you in this introductory campaign sold a carton of cigarettes to a purchaser did you give him any receipt or anything?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 54. Will you describe that receipt and what you did, just the procedure?

A. That receipt is a yellow copy of the one of our regular retail order blanks.

Q. 55. I show you some slips which are in this case as Defendant's Exhibit No. 10. Can you identify that 1902 and tell me what it is?

A. That is an order blank, a regular order blank we use every day in selling tobacco, that the salesmen use to take the order on.

Q. 56. Did you use such a blank during your campaign?

A. A blank identical to this was used through the campaign.

Q. 57. Just tell us how you operated it in your territory?

A. Well, sir, each division manager I expect—

Q. 58. (Interrupting.) Just what you did.

A. What I did and what all of my salesmen were instructed to do when he sold an order for cash was to put his date on, where it says "Jobber" he was to put in "Cash," the name of the dealer, his address and town and put sold such and such a number of Beech-Nut cigarettes, received payment so much, and then signed his name. He was to leave the white copy on a cash order with the retail dealer, retaining the tissue copy for his own reference, mailing or giving to me the yellow copy. 1903

Q. 59. And whose name appears on the white sheet and yellow sheet on that exhibit?

A. "P. Lorillard Co., Inc., 119 West 40th Street, New York, N. Y." 1904

Q. 60. As I understand from your testimony prior to the beginning of the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign, you were stationed here at Milwaukee?

A. Yes.

Q. 61. You were not selling cigarettes, is that right?

A. I was not selling cigarettes.

Q. 62. What kind of tobacco were you selling?

A. Plug and smoking tobacco.

Q. 63. Did you sell the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco?

A. Why, I did sell Beech-Nut chewing tobacco, but it was not under my supervision in 1921.

Q. 64. Just tell us how that happened? 1905

A. We sold all Lorillard Company products, regardless of whether under our supervision or not, anything manufactured by P. Lorillard Company that we could go into a store and take orders on, we took them.

Q. 65. Although it was not under your direction?

A. Although it was not under my supervision.

Q. 66. How long had you been selling Beech-Nut tobacco in this Milwaukee territory?

A. Just the Milwaukee territory or state of Wisconsin?

1906 Q. 67. State of Wisconsin.

A. I have sold it since 1916.

Q. 68. Did you ever sell any of it in such towns as Sheboygan and Manitowoc?

A. No, sir, that was a very poor scrap tobacco territory in those days, that was mostly sold in the southern part of the state.

Q. 69. Did you ever sell any up there?

A. Yes, I have sold it up there. The Prange Brothers at Sheybogan bought Beech-Nut scrap tobacco going back at least to 1918, and Reinken & Sons Company at Manitowoc, Wisconsin, bought Beech-Nut scrap, at 1907 least in 1918.

Q. 70. Now, just briefly, I understand that you have now consolidated under your charge both cigarettes, smoking and chewing tobacco, is that correct?

A. That is true.

Q. 71. When did that change or consolidation of these various subdivisions of goods take place?

A. January 1st, 1922.

Q. 72. So far the Milwaukee territory now you have charge of all of the tobacco products of P. Lorillard Company?

A. All with the exception of the Muriel cigar.

1908 Q. 73. That is, you do not include the cigars?

A. I include the little cigars.

Q. 74. But, I mean the larger.

A. No.

X-Q. 105. Mr. Buchanan, do you know when he joined the P. Lorillard Company?

A. About July, 1921. 1917

X-Q. 106. Was he with you right through the campaign?

A. He was.

X-Q. 107. Is he still with the Lorillard Company?

A. He is.

X-Q. 108. Whereabouts?

A. Eau Claire, Wisconsin, is his headquarters.

X-Q. 109. Mr. Knoebber, do you know when he joined the Lorillard Company?

A. He was.

X-Q. 111. Is he still with the company?

A. He is.

X-Q. 112. Do you know where?

A. Madison, Wisconsin, is his headquarters.

X-Q. 113. Mr. H. E. Buchanan was the newest man of that lot?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 114. Did you have any other men at all under you in that Beech-Nut cigarette campaign?

1919 A. Not in that Beech-Nut cigarette campaign, no, sir.

X-Q. 115. Or helping you in any way?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 116. Did you ever write any notice to your salesmen that were under you to meet for instructions in getting ready, or in conducting this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign?

A. Yes, I wrote them to meet me in Madison the morning we started out on this campaign. After leaving Madison I routed them so I would know what time they would get into these towns, and it was not neces-1920 sary for me to write to them to meet me at any certain point.

X-Q. 117. Have you copies of these letters in your files?

A. No, I haven't, sir.

X-Q. 118. Did you ever have any occasion to write to them during the campaign instructing them to be careful in presenting these Beech-Nut cigarettes in order not to give the idea they were a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. I had no occasion to write them on that.

X-Q. 119. Did you ever receive any letter or circular letter from the P. Lorillard Company yourself or your 1921 salesmen to that same effect?

A. I received none.

X-Q. 120. You never received any written instructions or warning at all from the Company in that regard?

A. I did not.

X-Q. 121. In regard to these order slips, I understand you have been a good many years now in the tobacco trade. Have you during that experience seen a good many order slips of the jobbers?

A. Yes, I have seen jobbers order slips.

X-Q. 122. Have you seen any jobbers order slips of 1922 a general character similar to these you have described of the Lorillard Company, with the name of the jobber at the top?

A. Yes, I have seen them, but it looks nothing like that.

X-Q. 123. I don't mean exactly the same.

A. It has the jobber's name at the top, true.

X-Q. 124. Have you gotten about the country in your district and about among the dealers to a great extent since the time that these Beech-Nut cigarettes were first put on in Wisconsin?

A. I have. 1923

X-Q. 125. Have you heard any questions asked or any comments at all about whether anyone was questioning who the maker of the Beech-Nut cigarettes was?

A. No. I never saw at any time where there was any confusion about who made Beech-Nut cigarettes.

X-Q. 126. But have you had any questions asked you by dealers or consumers as to whether the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people made the Beech-Nut gum and peanut butter?

A. I never had a question of that kind put to me by a consumer in my life.

1924 X-Q. 127. Or a dealer?

A. Or a dealer.

X-Q. 128. Did you make any attempt to remember such a thing?

A. I believe I would have remembered it if it had really happened.

X-Q. 129. You never heard one single question?

A. I never heard a dealer that ever asked me—

X-Q. 130. Or a consumer?

A. Or a consumer ever asked me if the Beech-Nut Packing Company made Beech-Nut cigarettes or Beech-Nut tobacco.

1925 X-Q. 131. Did you hear any discussion on that point?

A. Well, whether I have heard Beech-Nut gum discussed along with possibly my being interested in the sale of Beech-Nut chewing tobacco and cigarettes, yes, possibly. In fact, yes.

X-Q. 132. Can you remember any of those instances?

A. Why, yes, I can remember where dealers—not only dealers, but where I am well acquainted with the dealer, in his conversation he would say, "If this Beech-Nut cigarette of yours will sell as well as your Beech-Nut tobacco it will be a good seller" and he would go on and say, "Beech-Nut gum sells well too." There was 1926 no confusion with that dealer though, that they were made by the same company whatsoever.

X-Q. 133. Did the dealer in such a case tell you there was no confusion in his mind?

A. Why, no, I don't expect him to take particular time and attention to tell me. If there wasn't any confusion naturally he wouldn't tell me.

X-Q. 134. How do you know what was in his mind?

A. I wouldn't know what was in his mind.

X-Q. 135. Did you have any such questions asked or hear any such comments or discussion in regard to the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 136. In all your experience beginning from the time they were first introduced? 1927

A. No, sir, because in that country Beech-Nut chewing tobacco was selling before we introduced Beech-Nut cigarettes.

X-Q. 137. No, but I mean in regard to the scrap tobacco, did you hear any such questions or discussions as to whether they were made by the same company, that made the Beech-Nut gum?

A. I did not.

X-Q. 138. I don't mean in 1921.

A. I know what you mean.

X-Q. 139. At any time. 1928

A. At any time I have been selling Beech-Nut chewing tobacco, I did not.

X-Q. 140. In presenting these Beech-Nut cigarettes to the trade and the public did you emphasize the quality of the cigarettes?

A. Why, you possibly mean when I am sampling the consumer?

X-Q. 141. At any time.

A. Oh, we would naturally tell them it was a good cigarette and it was a cigarette that deserved our patronage.

X-Q. 142. Did you emphasize the word "quality"? 1929

A. No, sir, I never emphasized personally the word "quality."

X-Q. 143. Has the quality of the Beech-Nut cigarette proved disappointing?

A. Well, sir, we know that Beech-Nut cigarettes are not selling as they were in 1921 when we introduced them.

XQ. 144. Have you heard any remarks on the quality, or complaints?

A. I believe that every new cigarette ever introduced you will find so many people dislike them, and 1930 you will ask them why they dislike them and they have all their particular reasons why they dislike them.

Mr. Johnson: Please read the question to the witness.

(Last question read.)

A. You will hear some say they were too strong, some say they were too mild, others that they were too sweet, others say they parched their throat and burned their tongue.

X-Q. 145. Now, about the quality of the Beech-Nut 1931 cigarettes, that is what I am interested in.

A. I have heard all of those complaints on Beech-Nut cigarettes.

X-Q. 146. How did the sales go when the Beech-Nut cigarettes were first put on?

A. During the introductory period the Beech-Nut cigarettes were selling, everyone tried them, we advertised them extensively.

X-Q. 147. Did they increase for a time?

A. They increased for a time during the introductory work, naturally they increased.

X-Q. 148. For how long?

1932 A. They increased all through our campaign from September to December, 1921, because we were all on introductory work there.

X-Q. 150. And after that how did the sales compare?

A. They didn't show any increase after that.

X-Q. 151. Did you find you got many repeat orders?

A. Yes, we got repeat orders.

X-Q. 152. Did you find that in order to keep the business up you had to go out and get new trade to a large extent?

A. Yes. Understand, when we were putting on the Beech-Nut cigarettes at first we only worked towns for instance of eight hundred population or better. After covering those we went back and got the smaller towns, that is, of more varied distribution and all during that time naturally our Beech-Nut cigarettes continued to sell and sell very well. 1933

X-Q. 153. How are they selling now?

A. Well, I would say poor.

X-Q. 154. Are they selling in your district in any appreciable quantities, any considerable quantities?

A. No, I have no large buyers today on Beech-Nut cigarettes.

Re-direct Examination.

By Mr Cavanagh:

R-D. Q. 155. You testified on cross examination in substance that you recollect that a dealer said to you that if the Beech-Nut cigarettes would sell as well as Beech-Nut tobacco they were alright, or something to that effect?

A. Yes, that they would be alright.

R-D Q. 156. This dealer knew you were the Lorillard man, didn't he? 1935

A. Absolutely. In fact, there is very few dealers in that section didn't know me and have known me for years.

R-D Q. 157. You are pretty well known throughout that territory?

A. I am very well known throughout that section.

R-D Q. 158. I understood you to say that the scrap tobacco was a large seller throughout that section?

A. A very large seller.

1936 R-D Q. 159. That is the Beech-Nut scrap?

A. Beech-Nut chewing tobacco, yes sir.

Re-direct examination closed.

Re-cross Examination.

By Mr. Johnson.

R-X Q. 160. Have you been division manager in this Milwaukee district since the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign finished?

A. Yes, sir.

1937 R-X Q. 161. I mean, did you resume your duties at the end of that campaign in December, 1921?

A. Yes.

R-X Q. 162. Did you know an employee of the P. Lorillard Company named W. C. Jackson?

A. I did.

R-X Q. 163. Do you know when he left the P. Lorillard Company?

A. I cannot give you possibly the exact date, but I can give you approximately when.

R-X Q. 164. Just approximately.

A. That was about either May or June of 1922.

1938 R-X Q. 165. Do you know why he left?

A. Yes, sir.

R-X Q. 166. Will you please tell us?

A. I discharged him.

R-X Q. 167. For what reason?

A. Because I found him incompetent.

R-X Q. 168. What month was that?

A. It was either—I believe it to be either May or June, but without my records I cannot tell you, to be exact, but it was either the fore or middle part of 1922.

R-X Q. 169. In what way in general did you find him incompetent?

A. Well, sir, it is not my purpose to run down any man, I am not going to attempt to do it here, whether Mr. Jackson says it is or not. Mr. Jackson came to me with a very good recommendation and transferred over to me, but I found his work not at all satisfactory, that is, not up to my standards. He didn't work in a way I would have him work and his actions throughout the day were not as I would have them. 1939

R-X Q. 170. Did you find any instances of his not following your instructions?

A. I did.

R-X Q. 171. Did you know a man named Monahan in the employ of the P. Lorillard Company? 1940

A. I would have discharged him immediately.

Q. 5. What was your occupation there?

A. Same thing.

A. Oh, about a year and a half.

Q. 8. And have you handled Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 9. Do you know what company makes those two products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 10. What company?

A. Lorillard.

Q. 11. Do you handle Beech-Nut chewing gum? 1945

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 12. Will you state whether or not you were ever under the impression that Beech-Nut scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes were manufactured by the same company makes the Beech-Nut gum?

A. No, I was never under that impression.

Q. 13. About when was it that you first put in Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. I don't remember the exact date they came out. We put them out the first day they were distributed here, I don't remember what the day was. There was a certain time, they wouldn't sell them before that time 1946 and they all came out on the same day.

Q. 14. From whom did you first purchase Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Badger Tobacco Company.

Q. 15. Now, will you tell us briefly in your own words what occured when you put those cigarettes into your store?

A. Well, the Badger tobacco man happened to be here and he asked us if we were going to handle Beech-Nut cigarettes, and I had never heard of them, and he said they were going to be a big seller and that they were put out by the P. Lorillard Company and at that time he 1947 remarked they were going to have one truck which did nothing but deliver Beech-Nut cigarettes on that day. I don't remember just what day it was. That is how we happened to put them in over there.

Q. 16. Mr. Mosher, did that truck deliver the cigarettes to you?

A. Yes, but I didn't see the truck.

A. Yes, he asked us how they were moving and he put in the window display for us.

Q. 21. Will you state whether or not he made any remarks which could in any way be confusing as to who made the cigarettes?

A. No, he never made any.

Q. 22. Have you ever heard any remarks or comments or inquiries among your customers which indicated to your mind that any of them were under the impression the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes 1950 were made by the same company makes the Beech-Nut gum?

A. No, I have never heard such remarks. I will tell you where confusion might arise, a time when people might come and ask for Beech-Nut and you would ask, "Gum or cigarettes?" I don't know whether or not that would cause confusion. They may have asked us, "Beech-Nut cigarettes" too.

Q. 23. But you have never had any remarks which indicated confusion as to who made the respective products?

A. No, not as to who made them.

Q. 24. Will you state what you would think of a man who asked for Beech-Nut cigarettes, and wanting Beech-Nut cigarettes, would accept a package of Beech-Nut chewing gum in place of the cigarettes? 1951

A. What I would think of him? I would think he would be crazy or something or else he doesn't know what he wants, one of the two.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 27. Do you handle Ideal brushes? 1952

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 28. Will you state whether or not those two articles are made by the same concern?

A. No, they are not.

Mr. Johnson: Objection as hearsay, incompetent, irrelevant and further objection unless the labels or wrappers specified are introduced in evidence.

Mr. Preston: As has been several times stated on the record, samples of all of these labels are in the possession of counsel for Lorillard Company 1953 and will be introduced in evidence at a later date.

Q. 29. (Mr. Preston.) Do you sell Red Cross toothache drops?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 30. Do you sell Red Cross kidney plasters?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 31. Will you state whether or not those two articles are made by the same concern?

1954 Mr. Johnson: Same objection, and it is stipulated this objection will apply to each question and answer along this line without repetition.

A. No, they are made by different concerns.

Q. 32. (By Mr. Preston.) Do you handle Velvet tobacco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 33. Do you handle Velvet rubber goods?

A. Yes.

Q. 34. Will you state whether or not those are made by the same concern?

X-Q. 111. Do many people ask you that just for Beech-Nut?

A. Nine out of ten women will ask for Beech-Nut gum, men will probably say, "A package of Beech-Nuts."

1974 In fact, if a woman came in and asked for Beech-Nuts you would give her gum.

X-Q. 112. Have you had any remarks such as you have mentioned, as, "Are there Beech-Nut cigarettes too?"

A. No.

X-Q. 113. Can you think of any particular instances of such remarks as that from your customers?

A. No, I never heard them make those remarks.

X-Q. 114. Didn't I understand in your direct you to say that some people have made such comments as that?

A. I said there may be confusion in some people's mind, but they never expressed it to me. No doubt there may be confusion in some people's mind, but I never have run across anybody expressed it to me. 1975

X-Q. 115. How did Beech-Nut cigarettes sell when you first put them in?

A. Sold very good at first.

X-Q. 116. About how long did it continue?

A. About three months.

X-Q. 117 And about how many cigarettes a week did you sell during that time?

A. About one thousand.

X-Q. 118. How many are you selling now a week, Beech-Nut cigarettes? 1976

A. Don't sell five packages here.

X-Q. 119. How many in a package?

A. Twenty. As far as the cigarettes are concerned, some sell better in one locality and some better in another. Take over there, we never sold any Chesterfield cigarettes. Here it is one of the biggest sellers, so you can't tell by that.

X-Q. 120. You are not selling them in quantities?

A. Not here.

X-Q. 121. Do you know how it is over at the other store? 1977

A. No.

X-Q. 122. Have you heard any comments by people as to the quality of Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. At first when they came out I heard some comments about their being pretty good cigarettes, not lately I haven't.

By Mr. Preston:

R-D Q. 123. Mr. Mosher, I understood you to say on cross examination that the Lorillard man that called on you in connection with Beech-Nut cigarettes did not mention his name. Can you state positively that he did not mention his name to you?

A. I don't think I said he didn't mention his name. He asked me if I knew his name. He probably introduced himself when he came in.

1979 A-D Q. 124. You meant you didn't remember his name?

A. I don't remember his name.

R-D Q. 125. Did you ever know of a food products company that made tobacco products?

A. No, sir.

R-D Q. 126. Do you use any sort of tobacco products yourself?

R-D Q. 127. As a tobacco user would you prefer to have a tobacco product made by a straight tobacco company or one made by a company that made all sorts 1980 of food products as well as tobacco?

A. Well, I don't think that would make any difference, as far as that is concerned, although it would seem unusual they would make all kinds of products.

R-D Q. 128. I also understood you to say, Mr. Mosher, on cross examination, that consumers bought tobacco products because of the brand. Now, can you say that tobacco consumers don't know what company makes the brand of cigarettes they smoke?

A. No, I wouldn't say that.

A. Lemon drops.

R-X Q. 131. Where were they displayed with reference to your tobacco?

A. The tobacco was on this side over there and our candy goods over here (indicating). Of course, I believe you will find some stores like here, we have our chewing gum case and mints case on the tobacco counter. Of course, we keep our mints back here, but in some cases we have them on the cigar case, we don't have them like that over there (indicating). 1982

R-X Q. 132. Did you ever make a Beech-Nut window display?

By Mr. Preston:

R-D. Q. 79. Mr. Lindenbaum, will you state whether or not when you say it is the brand that sells the cigarettes you mean that people buy the cigarette because of its name? 2011

By Mr. Johnson: Object to that as leading.

A. They go according to the brand, they call for the brand.

R-D Q. 80. (By Mr. Preston.) Will you state whether or not you mean by that that a man buys a Camel cigarette because its name is "Camel?"

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Johnson: Object to that question as leading. 2012

R-D. Q. 81. (By Mr. Preston.) You use tobacco yourself, Mr. Lindenbaum?

A. Smoking?

R-D. Q. 82. Yes.

A. Yes.

R-D Q. 83. Do you smoke cigars?

A. Yes.

R-D Q. 84. What brand of cigar do you smoke?

A. I smoke almost every brand in the market. I am not so particular what I get, I simply smoke the cigar I get hold of. 2013

R-D Q. 85. You smoke a cigar because you like the name of the cigar?

A. No, sir. As I said before, I don't smoke one cigar, I just smoke all different cigars to find out the different tobacco that the people are putting in there, just to find out for my own experience.

R-D Q. 86. To find out what the quality of the cigar is?

A. Yes.

R-D Q. 87. Is the name of the cigar a matter of any interest to you?

2014 A. Yes, sir, of course, if there is a name that is well advertised, you certainly like to handle this brand because the public calls for it.

R-D Q. 88. I am speaking of your experience as a consumer, not a dealer. Do you smoke a cigar because you like the name of it or because you like the tobacco that is in it?

A. Well, as I said before, I don't stick to one cigar because I like the name of it, I like the tobacco in it, but the public when they get to like a cigar they call for this certain name, whichever they like. You couldn't go to work and give them anything else, he wants this 2015 brand and you have got to give it to him.

R-D Q. 89. Mr. Lindenbaum, is Beech-Nut scrap tobacco a good seller?

A. Yes, sir, I could say that is my fourth seller.

R-D Q. 90. Do you mean your fourth seller in scrap tobacco?

A. In scrap tobacco of the leading brands.

R-D Q. 91. It is the fourth?

A. Fourth seller.

R-D Q. 92. Has there ever been any doubt in your mind as to who made Beech-Nut scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes?

2016 A. I always know it is put up by the P. Lorillard Company.

A. No, sir, I don't handle the other brands.

R-X Q. 95. Where do you display your Beech-Nut chewing gum for sale with reference to the Beech-Nut cigarettes and tobacco?

A. Well, I got all of the Beech-Nut gum put in one little case. That is entirely in a different place from the cigarettes or from the tobacco, because I don't put the chewing gum and the tobacco together.

R-X Q. 96. About how far in number of feet is that from where the Beech-Nut cigarettes are? 2018

A. About six feet.

R-X Q. 97. About how far in feet from where your Beech-Nut tobacco is?

A. About the same.

R-X Q. 98. Have you made Beech-Nut window displays at any time?

A. Beech-Nut cigarettes?

R-X Q. 99. Any Beech-Nut window displays?

A. Yes, I have had some window displays of Beech-Nut cigarettes and Beech-Nut tobacco, but they never made any displays of Beech-Nut chewing gum.

R-X Q. 100. Did you ever put any chewing gum or 2019 advertising matter concerning it in the window at the same time you had the other display?

A. No, because I will tell you the reason why, this gum we got to pay more money for it so therefore we are not displaying in any place where the public should see it because we have to pay more money for that and we get the same price we get for Spearmints and Juicy Fruits and the other brands of gum, so most of the time I am trying to keep away from that because it costs more money and we get the same price as for the others, and 2020 I don't see why we should go to work and pay more money and get the same price for it.

By Mr. Johnson: Object to the last part of the answer as unresponsive.

R-X Q. 101. (By Mr. Johnson) Did you find the people demand the Beech-Nut chewing gum?

X-Q. 99. Do your customers ask for them by the brand? That is, do they ask for Camels or Beech-Nuts?

A. They ask for the brand, for the name, whether it is Camels, Lucky Strike, Chesterfields or Beech-Nuts, it doesn't make any difference what cigarette it is. A cigarette smoker as a rule asks for the name of the brand.

X-Q. 100. And does that same thing apply to chewing tobaccos? 2054

A. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 108. How long have you handled it?

A. About a year.

2056 X-Q. 109. Do you handle any other of the Beech-Nut Packing Company's goods, such as mints or hard candies?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 110. Did you ever handle any of them?

A. No, sir, not to my knowledge.

X-Q. 111. Did you ever handle any other Beech-Nut Packing Company goods besides the chewing gum?

A. I am not familiar with the Beech-Nut Packing Company's nor do I know of any of their products outside of the chewing gum, since you mention it.

X-Q. 112. Did you ever use any of the Beech-Nut 2057 products outside of the three you have mentioned, in your home?

A. Not to my knowledge.

X-Q. 113. How long have you known about the Beech-Nut chewing gum?

A. That is a mighty hard question.

X-Q. 114. Did you know about it before you stocked it?

A. It is possible that I have.

X-Q. 115. Have you seen advertising of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, such as Beech-Nut peanut butter, Beech-Nut jams, Beech-Nut bacon, Beech-Nut chewing 2058 gum, in magazines, newspapers and billboards, streets cars and such places?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 116. You know then that there are a great number of Beech-Nut products of the character I have just mentioned on the market, don't you?

A. My knowledge of the particular brands, such as "Beech-Nut" is very limited.

X-Q. 117. But you have seen this advertising?

A. I have seen one or two of the ads you mention.

X-Q. 118. Showing a varied line of goods put out under the Beech-Nut name?

A. Not a varied line, I say my knowledge is limited under those brands, of the brands that you mention I know of about two or three. 2059

X-Q. 119. When did you first put in the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco?

A. I have handled the Beech-Nut scrap for possibly three or four years. I have handled it in a little way previous to about two years ago. Not enough to really be noticeable.

X-120. Do you remember who first came in and sold it to you?

A. I don't know of any direct representative of any concern. It went in with the rest of the order to the jobber. 2060

X-Q. 121. Did any salesman ever come into your store before a year ago, offering to you Beech-Nut scrap tobacco or cigarettes?

A. Well, I should say that the Beech-Nut scrap is put to me in a more direct method, about two years ago.

X-Q. 122. What do you mean "a more direct method"?

A. By a more direct method I mean there was a certain amount of advertising, a certain amount of sampling being done on the scrap tobacco about three years ago which induced me to buy through the representatives, the order being placed through the jobber. 2061

X-Q. 123. Do you remember any salesman coming in at that particular time when you were seeing this advertising, at this time you have just mentioned?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 124. Offering you the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 125. Do you remember what he said?

A. No. I do not.

2062 X-Q. 126. Did I understand that that was about two years ago?

A. On the Beech-Nut scrap?

X-Q. 127. Yes.

A. Yes.

X-Q. 128. You buy from tobacco jobbers, don't you, Mr. Glasspiegel?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 129. Quite frequently?

A. Quite frequently.

X-Q. 130. Do they as a rule give you such an order slip or receipt, such as the slip you say Mr. Goldstein

A. The jobber doesn't issue any copy to me; in most cases I send my order in over the telephone.

By Mr. Preston:

R-D. Q. 131. Mr. Glasspiegel, will you state whether or not if you had heard remarks indicating that your customers thought Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by 2064 the same company made Beech-Nut gum, in any considerable number, you would have remembered it?

A. Yes, sir.

R-D Q. 132. Was this sampling of Beech-Nut cigarettes in our store done shortly after you first put the cigarettes into your store?

A. Yes, sir.

R-D. Q. 133. Do you remember whether at that time there was a drive on in Milwaukee putting Beech-Nut cigarettes on the market?

A. Yes, sir.

DISTRICT OF NEW JERSEY.

Beech-Nut Packing Co.,
Plaintiff,
vs.
P. Lorillard Company,
Defendant.

In Equity
No. 3056.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties that if FRED W. KEMP were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, defendant, he would testify as follows: 2072

Direct Examination.

My name is FRED W. KEMP, I am of lawful age, and am part owner of the Century Drug Store located in the business district of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, that is, on Third Street near Grand, and next to the Wisconsin Hotel, one of the leading hotels in Milwaukee. In this drug store we sell, besides drugs and medicines, cigars and tobacco and a great many other articles, and while employing a varied number of clerks at different times 2073 have at least eight clerks and a cashier.

We sell the Beech-Nut cigarettes and the Beech-Nut chewing gum. I have never heard any comments, remarks or inquiries to the effect, or which would lead me to believe, that customers or purchasers were under the impression that the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same concern that makes the Beech-Nut gum.

I am acquainted with Mr. Goldstein who formerly represented P. Lorillard Co. in Milwaukee. During the time that the introductory drive was on on Beech-Nut cigarettes in the fall of 1921 here in Milwaukee, Mr.

2074 Goldstein called at the store at least half a dozen times and talked with me about the cigarettes, for I had put the same in the store, having first purchased them from Mr. Goldstein. He told me Lorillard was the maker of the cigarettes and in no way whatsoever misled me on the subject or made any remark which I would construe as indicating that the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people made the Beech-Nut chewing gum. When he first put in the cigarettes he left certain advertising matter at the store and put up some posters advertising the Beech-Nut cigarette.

2075 On

he would testify

This is a large and very busy store. I am in the store the greater part of the time and wait on the customers myself when the other clerks are busy. I am so busy that I haven't much opportunity to hear what the customers at the cigarette counter are saying and I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, remarks or discussion in regard to whether the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut gum people, and I 2076 had no reason to do so. I knew Mr. Goldstein before the campaign on Beech-Nut cigarettes was started in the fall of 1921, and knew that the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the Lorillard Company before I ever saw a package of the cigarettes themselves.

On

Re-direct Examination

he would testify

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks in appreciable number or frequently, I would have remembered the same.

2077

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties that if ROBERT A. KIEFER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is ROBERT A. KIEFER, I am of lawful age, and am proprietor of the Kiefer Drug Company, 238 West Water Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, which is in the business section of the city.

In this store are usually employed at least half a dozen clerks. We handle the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco and the Beech-Nut cigarettes, and I knew, even before the introductory campaign on the Beech-Nut cigarettes in Milwaukee, in the fall of 1921, that the Beech-Nut cigarettes were a product of the P. Lorillard Company. 2078

I am acquainted with Mr. Goldstein, agent for the P. Lorillard Company, and knew that Mr. Goldstein was assisting in the introduction of the Beech-Nut cigarette in Milwaukee in the fall of 1921 on behalf of P. Lorillard Company. I have never heard any comments, remarks or inquiries from customers or others to the effect, or which would lead me to believe that the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same concern that manufactures Beech-Nut gum and the Beech-Nut mints. 2079

On

Cross Examination.

he would say:

I have a corner drug-store and have a good trade in drugs and many other lines, including tobacco and cigarettes. I am in the store most of the time and wait on 2080 customers along with my clerks. I am kept very busy and haven't much opportunity to hear anything that may be said by customers at the tobacco and cigarette counter. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, remarks or comments with regard to whether the Beech-Nut tobacco and cigarettes are made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut gum and mints, and had no reason to do so.

On

Re-direct Examination.

2081 he would testify:

If I had heard any such inquiries, remarks or comments in appreciable number or frequently, I would have remembered the same.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties that if RUDIE KORTBEIN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

2082

My name is RUDIE KORTBEIN, I am of lawful age, resident of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. I am the manager and buyer for the cigarette and tobacco department of the Economy Drug Company at 706 Oakland Avenue, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, which is a block or so from the grocery store of C. H. Beese located at 701 Murray Avenue, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

I handle Beech-Nut cigarettes and Beech-Nut chewing gum. I have always known that these products were made by different companies. I first bought Beech-Nut cigarettes from a tobacco salesman in the fall of 1921.

This salesman represented himself to be an agent for 2083 the Lorillard Tobacco Company and in his conversation with me made no remark which I would construe as indicating that the Beech-Nut cigarette was made by the company which manufactures Beech-Nut chewing gum. He had advertising matter with him at the time and put up some posters advertising Beech-Nut cigarettes in my store. I bought some of the Beech-Nut cigarettes from this salesman, ordering them to be sent through a tobacco jobber, and did not pay the salesman cash for this order. I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers which indicated to me that they were under the impression that 2084
Beech-Nut cigarettes and Beech-Nut chewing gum were manufactured by the same concern.

On

Cross Examination.

he would testify:

I am employed in a corner drug store in a residence district of Milwaukee. There is usually one other clerk in the store besides me. Our store handles not only drugs but toilet articles and many other lines, including 2085 candies and tobacco and cigarettes. The cigarette counter is near the front of the store, on the same side of the store with the candies. I wait on the counter and make sales to customers in all parts of the store. I am kept pretty busy and haven't much opportunity to hear what customers are saying, if anything, in the store. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, remarks or comments as to who made the Beech-Nut cigarettes, and had no reason to do so. When I say I have heard no such inquiries, remarks or comments, I mean I do not remember having heard any. I did not know the sales-

2086 man who came in to sell the Beech-Nut cigarettes the first time, and could not describe him. My store is on Oakland Avenue car line. I have never seen this same salesman since.

On

Re-direct Examination.

he would testify:

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks in appreciable number, or frequently, I would 2087 have remembered the same.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if J. E. BERNHEIMER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is J. E. BERNHEIMER, I am of lawful age, and I have four cigar stores in the city of Miluawkee, my main cigar store where I usually stay being at 414 East 2088 Water Street in the City of Milwaukee, which is in the downtown or business section of the city. I do a retail business exclusively in three of what I might call my branch stores, but in addition to a retail business I do a small wholesale business at the store above mentioned, that is, at 414 East Water Street.

I have handled the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco for the past four years, and it is the best selling scrap tobacco that I have. I always knew that it was made by the P. Lorillard Company. Mr. Goldstein, then connected with the P. Lorillard Company at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, introduced the Beech-Nut cigarette into my stores in the 2089 fall of 1921, during the introductory campaign on this cigarette. He stated that the Lorillard Company was putting out this cigarette and I ordered them through him. I knew Mr. Goldstein before the Beech-Nut cigarette ever appeared on the market, as he was the Lorillard salesman here in Milwaukee. Mr. Goldstein, when he introduced the cigarette, left with me certain advertising matter, including posters advertising his Beech-Nut cigarettes.

I knew the cigarettes were made by the Lorillard Company, and Mr. Goldstein made no remarks to me which would leave me under the impression that the 2090
Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard of any comments, remarks or inquiries on the part of customers or consumers which would lead me to believe that they were under the impression that the cigarettes and scrap tobacco were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, or the concern that makes the Beech-Nut gum.

On

he would testify: 2091

My main store at 414 East Water Street is a long and narrow room, the rear half of which is used for my wholesale trade and the front part for the retail. In this store I have one clerk beside myself. I am kept pretty busy and haven't much opportunity to hear what people are saying in my store. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, remarks or comments in regard to whether the Beech-Nut cigarettes and scrap to-2092 bacco are made by the same people make the Beech-Nut gum, and have had no reason to try to remember them.

On

Re-direct Examination

he would testify:

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks in appreciable number, or frequently, I would have remembered the same.

vs.
P. Lorillard Company,
Defendant.

STIPULATIONS.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if RAY P. FLEMING were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, defendant, he would testify as follows: 2096

Direct Examination

I am manager of a tobacco store at 231 Cherry Street, Green Bay, Wisconsin. We had the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco on sale, to the best of my knowledge, at least as early as May, 1917, and I make this statement because I went into the United States army in May, 1918, and we had the scrap on sale for a year before that. We had the Beech-Nut gum on sale before 1918, and we had the 2097 scrap tobacco on sale before we had the Beech-Nut gum on sale. This is the reason for fixing the date at about May, 1917, or prior thereto. I first bought the scrap tobacco from Johannes Bros. at Green Bay and it is the best selling scrap tobacco we have had, with Mail Pouch second. I know that the scrap tobacco is made by P. Lorillard Company and I never had any comments or inquiries from customers or consumers which would lead me to believe they thought the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco was made by the same concern makes the Beech-Nut chewing gum.

2098 On

he would testify:

I have a small store in which I sell tobacco, cigars, cigarettes and small confections exclusively. I have been in the tobacco business for a number of years. I do not remember what salesman first came in with the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco or first sold it to me. That was so long ago that I cannot remember the details except I got it from Johannes Bros. I look after my store myself and 2099 wait on customers. I am kept pretty busy. I have made no efforts to remember any inquiries, remarks or comments as to who made the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco and had no reason to do so.

On

Re-direct Examination

he would testify:

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks in appreciable number or frequently, I would have 2100 remembered the same.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if RAY VAN ROSMALEN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is RAY VAN ROSMALEN, I keep a tobacco store at 432 Monroe Avenue, South, Green Bay, Wisconsin. I know the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco and I know it to be a product of the Lorillard Company, as I had this scrap tobacco on sale for about two years before Mr. Marks' crew came through Green Bay on a drive on this Beech-Nut scrap tobacco in the year 1919. I have had the Beech-Nut cigarettes on sale since the campaign on the same in the fall of 1921, and so far as I know I believe I am the first one in Green Bay who put in these Beech-Nut cigarettes. I also have Beech-Nut gum for sale. I am acquainted with Mr. Marks and know him to be a salesman for the Lorillard Tobacco people. When the salesman or agent introduced the Beech-Nut cigarette in the fall of 1921 he also had certain advertising matter advertising this cigarette, with him, and put same up in my store. He made no misrepresentations to me which would lead me to believe or leave me under the impression that the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same concern that makes the Beech-Nut gum, which I also handle, as stated. I have heard no comments, remarks or inquiries from customers or consumers which would lead me to believe that they thought the gum and the cigarettes or scrap tobacco were made by the same concern. 2101 2102

On

he would testify:

My store is a small tobacco store. I have been in the tobacco business for some years. I do not remember who first sold Beech-Nut scrap tobacco to me or the accompanying circumstances. I did not know the salesman who first sold me the Beech-Nut cigarettes and could not discribe him except that it was not Mr. Marks, with whom I am personally acquainted. I take care of my own store and wait on customers myself. I am kept 2104 pretty busy and haven't much time to talk to customers. I made no effort to remember any inquiries, remarks or comments as to who made the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes and had no reason to do so. When I say I heard no such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean I do not remember any.

On

Re-direct Examination

he would testify:

2105 If I had heard of such inquiries, comments, or remarks in appreciable number or frequently, I would have remembered the same.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if A. G. VACLAVIC were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination

My name is A. G. VACLAVIC, of lawful age, and I am manager and buyer for the grocery and tobacco depart-
2106 ments of the Two Rivers Mercantile Company at Two Rivers, Wisconsin, and have been for a number of years past and was during the year 1921 and 1922 and am still the buyer in these departmennts. I do not do a big business in the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco as we do not do much of a tobacco business and we do not handle cigars or cigarettes.

I do not recollect any Lorillard men, or crew men calling at this store to put in this cigarette during the fall of 1921. The only time that I remember a Lorillard man coming into this store to sell the Beech-Nut cigarettes was in 1922. We did not handle the cigarettes and did 2107 not buy any, but this salesman gave us on exchange Beech-Nut scrap tobacco for Buzz tobacco, a Lorillard brand that was not moving, that was a very slow seller, in this store. He had advertising matter with him and he put some up. When he exchanged the Beech-Nut scrap for the Buzz tobacco it was plain to me that he was a Lorillard man and I knew him to be a Lorillard man. So far as I know tobacco is always sampled at my counter at the tobacco department, and I am the only man clerk there and I never said to a Beech-Nut Packing Company man, "Why don't you pass Beech-Nut cigarettes around instead of gum and mints". I have always 2108 known that the cigarettes were made by the P. Lorillard Company.

On

Cross Examination

he would testify:

The Two Rivers Mercantile Company has a large general store at Two Rivers, Wisconsin, handling clothing, kitchen supplies, small hardware, as well as groceries and many other things, and it occupies a large ground floor 2109 space. Its grocery department occupies a pretty good sized space at the rear. Our tobacco stand is small. We do not do much in tobacco and I haven't paid a great deal of attention to it. There are other clerks in the grocery and tobacco department and have been ever since the middle of 1921. We handle a number of Beech-Nut Packing Company's products, such as Beech-Nut peanut butter, Beech-Nut spaghetti and Beech-Nut jams and other Beech-Nut products.

The salesman from the Beech-Nut Packing Company comes in from time to time to take our orders and has 2110 been in a good many times since September, 1921. I have not necessarily been here in the store every time a Beech-Nut Packing Company salesman has been in. I have talked a good many times with the salesman for the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I cannot be sure whether their salesman, Mr. O. M. Wesling, has been in here or not. I may have talked to Mr. Wesling, but cannnot say for sure. I do not recall ever having made the remark, "Why don't you pass Beech-Nut cigarettes around instead of gum and mints", or a remark similar to that of Mr. Wesling or any other salesman, but I really can't remember.

2111 On

Re-direct Examination.

he would testify:

While I have said I really can't remember making such remark, the best of my present recollection is I made no such remark.

DISTRICT OF NEW JERSEY.

Beech-Nut Packing Co., Plaintiff,
vs.
P. Lorillard Company, Defendant.
In Equity, No. 3056.

STIPULATIONS. 2114

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if E. F. PETERSEN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is E. F. Petersen, I am a grocer by occupation and a member of the firm of Petersen Brothers conducting a grocery store at 421 North 8th Street, Manitowoc, Wisconsin, and am a brother of H. N. Petersen who testified as a witness on behalf of the Beech-Nut Packing Co. Some months before the Beech-Nut cigarette was introduced into the city of Manitowoc in the fall of 1921, I purchased an order of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco from a salesman who said he was from P. Lorillard Co., tobacco manufacturers, and put this Beech-Nut scrap tobacco on sale. He made no misrepresentations to me as to who was the manufacturer of this tobacco, and I never had any inquiries as to whether or not this Beech-Nut scrap tobacco was made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, the same people

2115

2116 that made Beech-Nut Food Products and the Beech-Nut Gum. I knew it was a product of P. Lorillard Co.

On

Cross Examination.

he would testify:

I do not know the salesman who first sold me the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco; the occurrence described took place so long ago that I cannot remember exactly, but to the best of my recollection it took place as I have described; that I do not recall ever having mentioned 2117 to my wife, Mrs. Amelia Petersen, or my brother H. N. Petersen, the first visit of this Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco salesman or what he said to me, or did, at that time; that when I am in my store I am pretty busy taking care of customers, and made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks made in regard to the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, and when I say I did not hear any such inquiries, comments or remarks I mean I do not remember having heard any.

On

2118 Re-direct Examination

he would testify:

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in appreciable numbers or frequently, such would have been impressed upon my memory.

2119

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if R. ZECHEL were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is R. Zechel, I am a druggist by profession and keep the North End Drug Store which is located on North 8th Street, Manitowoc, Wisconsin, about two blocks from the grocery store of Petersen Brothers at 421-North 8th Street, Manitowoc, Wisconsin. When the 2120
Beech-Nut cigarettes were first introduced into Manitowoc about the fall of 1921, a salesman called and I purchased a small order of these Beech-Nut cigarettes, paying cash, and this salesman put up in the store certain posters advertising these Beech-Nut cigarettes. He had these posters with him at the time. He stated he was from the P. Lorillard Company, and made no misrepresentations in this respect. Besides, since I got the cigarettes I have always known they were made by P. Lorillard Company because I saw the name of this concern on a pack of the cigarettes when they were first shown to me by the salesman.

I have never heard any comments, inquiries or questions as to whether these Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut Food Products or the Beech-Nut gum.

On

Cross Examination

he would testify:

My drug-store is on a corner of the main street of Manitowoc. I have a good trade for the size town; I 2122 keep one clerk to wait on the counter besides myself. I am kept so busy with my customers that I hadn't much opportunity to hear or remember whether any inquiries, comments or remarks about who made the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made in my store, and I made no effort to remember such things, if they occurred. I didn't know the salesman who first sold me the Beech-Nut cigarettes and cannot describe his appearance.

On

2123 he would testify:

That if there had been any appreciable or frequent inquiries, comments or remarks as to whether the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut gum, I would have remembered the same.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if H. A. LEVENHAGEN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defend-2124 ant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is H. A. Levenhagen, of lawful age, and I conduct a barber shop at #110 North 8th Street, Manitowoc, Wisconsin. In this barber shop I also sell Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, Beech-Nut Cigarettes and Beech-Nut Chewing Gum. I first bought the cigarettes from a salesman of a crew who were introducing the cigarette in the Town of Manitowoc in about the fall of 1921. He said he was salesman for P. Lorillard Company and he positively told me that the gum people did not make the cigarettes. He was perfectly open and above board about it. He had advertising matter relating to the Beech-Nut cigarette with him, and he put up some of these advertising signs in this barber shop here. My barber shop is about three blocks, on the same street, North 8th Street, from the grocery store conducted by Petersen Brothers at 421 North 8th Street, Manitowoc, Wisconsin. I have heard no comments, inquiries or remarks from people to the effect, or which would lead me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut cigarettes or Beech-Nut scrap tobacco were made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut chewing gum, all three of which products I handle in my barber shop. 2125 2126

On

he would testify:

I did not know the salesman who came in the first time with Beech-Nut cigarettes and could not describe him. We had some discussion about the Beech-Nut chewing gum and the Beech-Nut cigarettes and their relation or non-relation to each other. My place of business is primarily a barber shop, but I have a cigar and tobacco and candy stand in the front part of it. I run the barber shop myself and tend the counter in front when I am there. I have made no particular effort to remember inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut cigarettes and have never made any notes of such things. I mean, I do not remember any such inquiries, comments or remarks. 2127

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if JEROME MEYER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he 2129 would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is Jerome Meyer, I conduct a grocery store at 435 North 7th Street about one block and a half from the grocery store of Petersen Brothers at 421 North 8th Street, Manitowoc, Wisconsin. In the fall of 1921 a salesman called upon me to have me put in Beech-Nut cigarettes, and represented himself to be from P. Lorillard Company. He made no misrepresentations as to who manufactured the cigarettes and I gave him an 2130 order for a small quantity, as I remember it a couple of cartons of these Beech-Nut cigarettes, and these were to be sent me through my jobber, and they were duly delivered through the jobber. This salesman had advertising matter relating to the Beech-Nut cigarette with him and left some of it at the store. I also handle certain products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, such as the Beech-Nut gum and Beech-Nut Peanut Butter

I know that the Beech-Nut cigarette is made by P. Lorillard Company, and I have never heard any comments, inquiries, or questions from customers or consumers to the effect, or which would lead me to believe, 2131 that they thought that the Beech-Nut cigarette was made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut gum and the Beech-Nut peanut butter.

On

Cross Examination

he would testify:

I am the proprietor of the "Meyer Grocery" and deal in groceries, meats, bakery goods, notions, newspapers, candies, tobacco and cigarettes. My place of business 2132 is on a corner, and I keep one clerk besides myself. Both I and my clerk wait on customers in all parts of the store, including the tobacco stand. I haven't a great deal of time to listen to remarks or discussions that take place in my store and have made no particular effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut cigarettes. When I say I did not hear any inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean I do not remember hearing any such inquiries, comments or remarks. I do not know who the salesman was who first came in, selling the Beech-Nut cigarettes, and I cannot describe him. 2133

If I had heard any such comments, or inquiries or remarks frequently or in appreciable numbers I would have remembered the same.

2134 IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if ROBERT LILL were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is Robert Lill, of lawful age, and I conduct a small retail store and manufacture cigars at 821 South 8th Street, Manitowoc, Wisconsin. My retail store, or the place where I sell tobacco and cigarettes and cigars is in the front of the building, while I manu-2135 facture cigars of my own brand in a room in the rear of this little front room. I am in the tobacco business exclusively, and while I handle Beech Nut scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes, I do not handle Beech-Nut gum for my business is exclusively tobacco.

I have handled the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco certainly since 1917, and I am under the impression, but cannot say for certain, some time before that. My store is three blocks from the store of Petersen Brothers, grocery store, at 421 North 8th Street, Manitowoc, Wisconsin.

I bought Beech-Nut cigarettes of a salesman of a 2136 crew who were introducing the cigarettes in Manitowoc in the fall of 1921, and he represented himself to be a salesman of P. Lorillard Co., tobacco manufacturers. I know of the Lorillard Company and know of their products. This man left a lot of advertising matter including posters and big framed signs, one of which is a three panel wooden frame sign, and I still have this at the store. He had a lot of Beech-Nut cigarettes with him at the time. I have always known that Lorillard was the manufacturer of these cigarettes and of the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco. I know that Lorillard is an old established concern, and that it is the general custom for the Lorillard salesmen who call on me to say whom they represent and to name other of the Lorillard brands when they introduce the cigarette. I have never heard any comments or inquiries from customers or others to the effect, or which would lead me to believe, they thought that the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people make the Beech-Nut Gum or Beech-Nut Peanut Butter or other Beech-Nut food products. 2137

On

he would testify: 2138

I don't know the salesman who first came in to sell me Beech-Nut cigarettes, and I couldn't describe him except to say that it was not Mr. Marks of the P. Lorillard Company, whom I know. My retail shop at the front of my place of business is a small place and my cigar factory adjoins it in the rear. I am a cigar-maker and employ others in my cigar manufacturing in the rear room. I wait upon the counter in my retail shop myself. I have made no particular effort to remember any remarks, comments or inquiries as to whether the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut gum. When I say I did not hear any such inquiries or discussion I mean I do not remember hearing any. 2139

On

Re-direct Examination

he would testify:

If I heard any such comments, inquiries or remarks frequently or in appreciable numbers I would have remembered the same.

2140 IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if A. MCEVENEY were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is A. McEveney, I am of lawful age, and I conduct a grocery store under the name Central Grocery, at 10th and Franklin Streets in the City of Manitowoc, Wisconsin. For several years I have been selling and am now selling Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and know it 2141 to be a product of P. Lorillard Company. When the Beech-Nut cigarettes were introduced into this territory in the fall of 1921, I bought some of these cigarettes from a salesman who represented himself to be from P. Lorillard Company, and he had with him certain advertising matter relating to these cigarettes. I know, and have known for years, that the P. Lorillard Company are the largest tobacco manufacturers. This salesman said that Lorillard was putting out this new Beech-Nut cigarette, and that they were the same people made the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco and other cigarettes such as the Helmar's. I have never heard any comments or 2142 inquiries or remarks from customers or consumers to the effect, or which would lead me to believe, they were under the impression that the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco or the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people who make Beech-Nut gum and the Beech-Nut peanut butter and other food products. I know of the store of Petersen Brothers on North 8th Street, this grocery store being about six blocks or so from my place of business.

In my store I carry various commodities of different character bearing the same name. For example, Badger tobacco and Badger corn, Crescent Hominy and Crescent Mapleine, and I also carry White House Corn Syrup, and Black Diamond Bird Food, and Anchor

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel, that objection is made to that portion of the witness's stipulated testimony which refers to other named products, such as the "Crescent," "Badger," "White House," "Black Diamond" and "Anchor," aforementioned, on the ground that same is irrelevant and immaterial.

On

he would testify:

I am the proprietor of the "Central Grocery," which is on a corner, and do a neighborhood business. My store room is pretty good sized and I keep a general line of groceries and allied goods as well as tobacco, cigars and cigarettes. I have one clerk beside myself. I attend the counter myself. I have made no particular effort to remember any inquiries, remarks or comments as to whether the Beech-Nut cigarettes and scrap tobacco are made by the same company makes the Beech-Nut gum. When I say I never heard any such inquiries, remarks or comments, I mean I do not remember any. I did not know the salesman who came in the first time to sell the Beech-Nut cigarette and I could not describe him except to say that it was not Mr. Marks, with whom I am personally acquainted.

On

Re-direct Examination

he would testify:

If I heard any such inquiries, remarks or comments frequently or in appreciable numbers I would have remembered the same.

2149

WADE H. BROWN, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, P. Lorillard Company, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Cavanagh:

Q. 1. State your name, age, residence and occupation.

A. My name is Wade H. Brown; I live at 4808 West End Avenue, Chicago. I am district manager for the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company.

Q. 2. How long have you been employed by the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Well, I have been with P. Lorillard since July, 1912.

Q. 3. How long have you been district manager for the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Since the beginning of 1921.

Q. 4. And what territory have you for this company?

A. At the present time?

Q. 5. At the present time.

A. Well, I have from Madison Street south, the rest of Cook County, Illinois, straight west to the DuPage County line, and Lake County, Indiana.

2151

Q. 6. How long have you had this territory?

A. Well, I have had this territory since the beginning of 1922.

Q. 7. And what territory did you have before that?

A. Previous to that, the year of 1921, I had all of Cook County and Lake County, Indiana.

Q. 8. And when you had all of Cook County, in which Chicago is situated, and Lake County, what goods did you handle or species of goods did you handle for the Lorillard Company?

2152 A. In 1921?

Q. 9. Yes.

A. I had the tobacco department.

Q. 10. What do you mean by the tobacco department?

A. Well, I had the plug and smoking department. At that time the scrap tobacco was in a separate department, such as the scrap, chewing tobacco, etc.

Q. 11. Did you have any cigarettes under your control?

A. I had no cigarettes until September the 6th, 1921.

Q. 12. And then what did you have? Tell us in your own words, to shorten this examination.

2153 Q. 13. And what part did you take in this work?

A. We opened the State of Indiana on Beech-nut cigarettes September the 6th, 1921, and I worked twenty counties in Indiana from the 6th of September until the 26th of September of the same year; and on the 26th of September of 1921 we opened up the State of Illinois on Beech-nut cigarettes.

A. Of Indiana?

Q. 14. Of Indiana,—on this Beech-Nut cigarette.

A. Well, I took my crew of men which I had at the time, of six men, and we devoted all of our time to Beech-Nut cigarettes the balance,—that is, from Sep-

2154 tember the 6th until vacation period,—of that year, 1921.

Q. 15. When was the vacation period?

A. Well, the nearest I can say was about the 17th of December. I couldn't say just for sure.

Q. 16. So, to be brief, from September until about the middle of December?

A. Yes.

Q. 17. You were engaged in introducing the Beech-Nut cigarette on a drive or introductory campaign?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 18. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 19. And you did this with the aid of a crew? 2155
A. Yes, sir; six men.
Q. 20. Were you in charge of that crew?
A. I was in charge of that crew.
Q. 21. Now, in order to shorten this examination as much as possible, will you just give an outline or statement, in your own words, as to just precisely what practice or general scheme of work you did or follwed in introducing the Beech-Nut cigarette during this introductory campaign?
A. Well, I had each and every one of my salesmen to carry a thousand Beech-Nut cigarettes to sell for cash. In addition to the tin signs which we had at the time and 2156 posters and samples, each salesman carried one carton of Beech-Nut cigarettes, as you see, of ten packages, that is, two hundred cigarettes, to sample daily.

Mr. Cavanagh: The witness calls attention to a carton of Beech-Nut cigarettes.

A. Now, my instructions were to these men if they sold out the thousand Beech-Nut cigarettes they were carrying to sell for cash, to go in to the nearest jobber in their territory and pick up more and continue selling them for cash. In selling these cigarettes for cash they, 2157 of course, carried a retail order book, and they gave each and every dealer they sold a duplicate copy of the order. Now, if the retailer insisted on the cigarettes coming through the jobber, we took the order and sent the orders to the jobbers and they, in turn, filled the orders. And their instruction was, which they followed out at the time, there was a little card that said "Beech-Nut," a little advertising on it, and they opened the carton up and set it on the counter of every store they sold these cigarettes in that we sold for cash; and put up posters, tin signs in front. In other words, put all the 2158 advertising we could display in that man's store and in his window.

Q. 22. I call your attention to some blanks which are fastened together,—there is also a piece of tissue paper,—and which are in this case as defendant's exhibit No. 10 and ask you if you recognize those blanks, and, if so, tell me what that exhibit is.

A. Well, this is the original order and there is a tissue we place in between the yellow and the original copy.

Q. 23. How did you work with that thing, what did you do?

A. We used a carbon in between.

2159 Q. 24. What did you have it for?

A. Take the orders for Beech-Nut cigarettes on this order blank.

Q. 25. Who did you take the orders from?

A. From the retailers.

Q. 26. Did you leave him any part of that?

A. We left him this yellow duplicate here. The salesman retained the little tissue. It remained in the order book, the white slip, where they was sold for cash, this original ordinarily was destroyed. We had no more use for it. But where the order went through the jobber, this is the order that the jobber received and the 2160 retailer received this (indicating), and the little duplicate remained in the order book,—the tissue.

Q. 27. You have referred in your examination to giving instructions. Just what instructions did you give and how? Just describe the procedure.

A. My instructions to the salemen were, when they went into a store, to represent themselves as being with the Lorillard Tobacco Company, and then take out their cigarette and begin explaining the quality. For instance, we would say: "This is a Burley Virginia and a little Turkish tobacco in this cigarette, which makes a very mild blend of a cigarette, and there is no doubt but what you will like the cigarette because we are winning on the mildness of the cigarette." And in sampling we tell the consumer that we are representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company, just the same as we would tell them we were representing them in calling on the trade. 2161

Mr. Johnson: Objection by Mr. Johnson to this line of testimony as to what the salesmen would do, on the ground it is hearsay evidence only.

It is stipulated that this objection shall apply to all questions and answers along this same line without repetition.

The objection is to the witness' testimony as to what the salesman for Lorillard would do or say. 2162

Q. 28. Now, how often did you give instructions to your salesmen?

A. Well, on an average of twice a week.

Q. 29. Under what circumstances? Just tell us how you did it.

A. Well, I would call them together and just tell them —give them a little talk on Beech-Nut cigarettes, and tell them to sample them thoroughly, advertise and put up their posters wherever they could possibly get them up, and by all means always to put the carton on the counter, display them up where the consumer can see them. 2163

X-Q. 30. Did you personally visit any retailers, or what we might call the trade, and sell any of these cigarettes for cash?

A. Yes.

Q. 31. And when you went in to introduce the cigarette yourself, what did you tell the retailer as to the cigarette, what was your method of introduction?

A. My method, if I was not acquainted with that retailer—I am acquainted with a lot of them—I would say:

2164 "Brown is my name. I am representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company. We are introducing a new cigarette, Beech-Nut, a very fine quality cigarette made of Burley Virginia, and a little Turkish tobacco." And I would explain to them about the drive and the way we were sampling thoroughly and advertising throughout the country and that the brand I had heard so far in the eastern states was going very big, and that we expected to make that brand just as big a brand as we had our Beech-Nut chewing tobacco.

Q. 32. Did you ever take part in any drive or ever personally sell the Beech-Nut chewing tobacco to the 2165 trade?

A. Not when we were introducing it, because it was in a separate department.

Q. 33. Who had that department?

A. A party by the name of August Meyer.

Q. 34. Where were his headquarters?

A. Chicago.

Q. 35. Will you give me, if you can, the names of the men who constituted your crew when you were introducing the Beech-Nut cigarette in what I call the fall of 1921?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Dagen, Mr. Rehder, Mr. Browning, 2166 Mr. Burgeson, Mr. Bartel and Mr. Adams.

Q. 36. As I understand, you have just a part of Cook County and Chicago now for the Lorillard tobacco and cigarettes; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 37. And at the present time, since 1922, you have been selling tobacco and cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir, beginning of 1922, I have sold all scrap tobacco, Beech-Nut chewing and Beech-Nut cigarettes.

Q. 38. Did you sell any Turkish cigarettes?

A. No, I never sold any Turkish cigarettes; that is in another department.

Q. 39. Who has the other part of Cook County here? 2167
A. Mr. Gay; Mr. J. Gay, Jr.
Q. 40. Where is he located?
A. 414 Rush Street.
Q. 41. Have you heard any comments, inquiries or remarks from customers or consumers to the effect or which would lead you to believe that they were under the impression that the Beech-Nut cigarettes or the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco were made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut chewing gum, Beech-Nut peanut butter and other food products?
A. Well, when I first began introducing the Beech-Nut cigarettes I had possibly a half a dozen dealers that 2168 asked me if we made the Beech-Nut gum and I told them no, we did not; that the Lorillard Tobacco Company made the Beech-Nut cigarettes, Beech-Nut chewing tobacco, Climax, Murad, Helmar and brands of that kind, and that we were in the tobacco business and not the gum or food business.
Q. 42. When was it you heard these inquiries that you referred to in your last answer?
A. Well, that was during the first of our campaign. That was in,—from September, I would say, from September the 6th,—between September the 6th and December, middle of December, December 17th, at which 2169 time we went on our vacation.
Q. 43. Prior to starting the Beech-Nut cigarette drive in September, 1921, did you attend any conference or meeting with any of the officials or employes of the Lorillard Company here in Chicago?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. 44. Tell us just what took place at that and under whose auspices it was held?
A. Mr. Fitzsimmons, who was in charge of the scrap department at that time all over the United States, and Mr. Edward Meyer who had charge of the plug depart-2170 ment and the smoking department. Would you want the territory he had?

Q. 45. You can just state in your own words. Make it as brief as you can.

A. Well, he had Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois as far south as Bloomington, Wisconsin, Minnesota and South Dakota. That was all.

Now, in this little conference I remember very distinctly Mr. Fitzsimmons making this remark: "There shouldn't be any trouble in the world of getting a wonderful distribution on Beech-Nut cigarettes at once, because Beech-Nut chewing tobacco is a well known brand 2171 throughout nearly all the United States and a big seller, so we ought to get a thorough distribution in a very short while."

Q. 46. When you were introducing the cigarette, the Beech-Nut cigarette, with this sales crew, will you state whether or not you ever accompanied any of the members of that crew into the stores where you were attempting to sell cigarettes?

A. Absolutely. I worked with each and every one of my retail men I had on the Beech-Nut crew. I would go out and pick up a man on the streets that we had assigned him, to a certain street to work, and work with him a 2172 half a day or maybe I would work with him a whole day occasionally and instruct him and work right with him as to just how to market this cigarette.

Q. 47. How did you find he followed your instructions when you were absent?

A. When I was with these men they carried out my instructions a hundred per cent., and I checked these men up. I would go out and check behind them to see if they were putting up the advertising and doing their work as they should.

Mr. Cavanagh: Direct examination closed.

Cross Examination. 2173

By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 48. How long have you been with P. Lorillard Company, Mr. Brown?

A. I was with them ten years last July.

X-Q. 49. Will you give, just briefly, an outline of what positions you have held with them and in what part of the country?

A. Well, from the time I was employed by Lorillard in July, 1912, I was a retail salesman for them until—Now, I can't give you the date on this. 2174

X-Q. 50. Just approximately.

A. Yes. Approximately up until, well, I would say 1916; and from 1916—

X-Q. 51. In what parts of the country during that time?

A. I was working under Edward Meyer and he had charge at that time of just Wisconsin and Illinois as far south as Bloomington, northern Pennsylvania and Michigan at that time.

X-Q. 52. Yes.

A. And up until 1916 I worked a little territory out here in the northwest corner of Illinois of eight counties, 2175 and I was promoted to be his assistant, I will say in 1916; and from then until the first of 1921 I covered that entire territory as his assistant, working with retail men who were stationed in those different states and having so many counties to work in.

X-Q. 53. And what department?

A. In the plug and smoking department at that time. And the first of 1921 I was in charge of this territory, the Chicago territory, which includes Cook County and Lake County, Indiana. At that time Mr. Meyers was transferred to Boston.

2176 X-Q. 54. How long did you hold that position?

A. As his assistant?

X-Q. 55. No. As head of the—

A. Department?

X-Q. 56. Yes, sir.

A. Well, from the first of 1921 until right now, the present date. Now, the first of 1922 they split this territory and gave Mr. Gay the other part of Cook County.

X-Q. 57. Previous to the beginning of this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign, had you handled cigarettes at all?

A. No. Never handled cigarettes. That was in a separate department, cigarettes were.

2177 X-Q. 58. In regard to this crew that you have named of six men, Mr. Dagen, can you give me his initials?

A. Yes. Frank C. Dagen.

X-Q. 59. Do you know when he joined the Lorillard Company, approximately?

A. Yes. In July, 1916. But now the others I can't give you the correct date on, but I remember his because I looked it up this morning.

X-Q. 60. Let's take them in order.

A. All right.

X-Q. 61. What department had he been in?

A. Well, he had been in the plug and smoking de-
2178 partment.

X-Q. 62. Had he been working with you?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 63. Is he still with the Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 64. Mr. Rehder, what are his initials?

A. L. O. Rehder.

X-Q. 65. Will you go back to Mr. Dagen? Do you know what his address is now?

A. His home address?

X-Q. 66. Yes.

A. No.

X-Q. 67. Does he live here? 2179

A. Yes, he lives on Wrightwood Avenue, Chicago. I have a record of that over at the office.

X-Q. 68. Do you know when Mr. Rehder joined the Lorillard Company?

A. That I cannot say because he had been with them ever since the dissolution, and that was in the fore part of 1911, I think.

X-Q. 69. He had been with them—

A. He was with them longer than I have.

X-Q. 70. A number of years?

A. Yes, a little longer than I have been with them.

X-Q. 71. What department had he been in? 2180

A. In the plug and smoking department.

X-Q. 72. Had he been working with you?

A. Oh, yes.

X-Q. 73. Is he still with the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 74. Do you know his address now?

A. He lives on Maple Avenue; I do not know his address.

X-Q. 75. What town?

A. Chicago.

X-Q. 76. Do you know Mr. Browning's initials?

A. J. F. Browning. 2181

X-Q. 77. Do you know when he joined the Lorillard Company, just approximately?

A. Well, I would say he has been with us about two years, I would say he joined us—

X-Q. 78. You mean two years before September, 1921?

A. No, two years back; I would say he joined us in August or September, 1921.

X-Q. 79. Did you take him on special for the cigarette campaign?

A. No; no. I hired him for the plug and smoking department.

2182 X-Q. 80. Before the campaign?

A. Oh, yes.

X-Q. 81. Is he still with the Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir, he is still with me.

X-Q. 82. Does he live in Chicago?

A. He lives in Chicago.

X-Q. 83. Mr. Burgeson, what were his innitials?

A. P. L.

X-Q. 84. Do you know when he joined the Lorillard Company?

A. He has been, I would judge Burgeson has been with us about four years, we will say. He was with us 2183 previous to the campaign.

X-Q. 85. In what department?

A. Plug and smoking department.

X-Q. 86. Was he working with you?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 87. Is he still with the Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir; he was transferred to Mr. Gay when this territory was split up the first of 1922.

X-Q. 88. Are the first three still with you in your district?

A. What is that?

X-Q. 89. The first three men we have already named, 2184 are they still with you in your district?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Burgeson was transferred to Mr. Gay the first of 1922 and is still with him.

X-Q. 90. What are Mr. Bartel's initials?

A. N. Bartel. His first name was Nick.

X-Q. 91. Was he with the Lorillard Company before September, 1921?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 92. About how long before?

A. Well, I would say about eight months.

X-Q. 93. In what department?

A. In the plug and smoking department.

X-Q. 94. Was he working with you? 2185

A. He was at the time.

X-Q. 95. Is he still with the Lorillard Company?

A. No, sir, he is not with us.

X-Q. 96. Do you know when he left?

A. Yes. I can't give you the dates on it.

X-Q. 97. About when?

A. Well, it was in January of 1922. I am quite sure that was the month, January, 1922.

X-Q. 98. Do you know what he is with now?

A. No, I do not; I could not say.

X-Q. 99. Is he in Chicago?

A. As far as I know, he is; yes. He lives on Nelson 2186
Street, Chicago he did at the time he was with me.

X-Q. 100. Do you know why he left the company?

A. Yes, sir; I discharged him for not—I went out and checked him up and I found he was not going according to my instructions; he was not putting up as much advertising as I thought he ought to, and I talked to him and told him that I expected him to put up more advertising, more sign posters and tackers; and I checked him up the second time and found that he had not gone according to my instructions, so I discharged him.

X-Q. 101. Did you have any complaints or unfavorable reports of his work during the Beech-Nut cam- 2187 paign?

A. No, I did not.

X-Q. 102. Did you check him up to any extent at that time to see whether he was following your instructions?

A. Yes, I checked him the same as I check the other boys. I check every man that is working under my supervision at times. I make it my way to work with some of these men every week.

X-Q. 103. Did you find anything to make you question at that time whether he was following your instructions?

2188 A. No, I did not.

X-Q. 104. What are Mr. Adams' initials?

A. L. J.

X-Q. 105. Was he with the P. Lorillard Company before the cigarette campaign?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 106. About how long?

A. Well, I think I hired Adams,—I am not sure about that,—in May or June, 1921.

X-Q. 107. What department was he working in?

A. Plug and smoking department?

X-Q. 108. In your district?

2189 A. Oh, yes; yes.

X-Q. 109. Is he still with the Lorillard Company?

A. No.

X-Q. 110. When did he leave?

A. He left the latter part of January, 1922. He resigned.

X-Q. 111. Do you know what he is in now?

A. He is with some insurance company here in Chicago, either the Prudential or the Mutual, I could not say; he is with either one of those insurance companies, so I have heard.

X-Q. 112. In Chicago?

2190 A. Yes.

X-Q. 113. Was he under you at the time he resigned?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 114. Did you ask him to resign?

A. No, he resigned of his own request.

X-Q. 115. Did you have any dissatisfaction with him?

A. No, not a bit. I would hire him again tomorrow if I had the opportunity and had an opening.

X-Q. 116. About what percentage of cases would you say that you accompanied your salesmen into the dealers, was it a large percentage or small percentage of all their calls?

A. Oh, it would be a very small percentage because 2191
I had a great deal of detail work and things to do and see after, but the average man makes about twenty-five calls a day. Now, occasionally I would spend a day with a man, we will say we called on twenty-five dealers. Maybe the next man I worked with I would spend two hours with him; go on and pick up another man; if I don't have time that day, the chances are I would see him the next day and spend a little time with each and every one of them.

X-Q. 117. Well, roughly, could you say about what percentage of their work you were able to observe yourself? 2192

A. Well, I couldn't give you anything very accurately on it. It would be a very hard proposition.

X-Q. 118. It would be a small percentage?

A. Yes. You take six men and say each man calls on tweny-five a day; that is a hundred and fifty dealers a day. Well, that week I only spend one day working with these salesmen and call on twenty-five, why, it would not be over ten per cent., I shouldn't think, Mr. Johnson. But in the meantime I call on dealers here and there systematically, wherever I happened to drop in and see how our brands are going here and there, and so forth, have posters with me and put up a poster in a 2193 man's store wherever I could. In other words, do everything I could do to promote the sale of Lorillard's brands that I am working.

X-Q. 119. But from your actual observation, Mr. Brown, you really could not say, except of this small percentage of cases, as to whether your men followed your instructions or not, could you, from your actual own observation?

A. What other would I have? Now, I check up these men, Mr. Johnson, go in these stores to see that our 2194 cigarettes are displayed on the counter where the consumer can see them, and see our advertising up, posters and tackers and tin signs and window displays. So, naturally, you check a man and find a nice showing of advertisements and your cigarettes displayed nicely on the counter, and no complaints by any dealers that you drop in to see, you would take it for granted that work was satisfactory, wouldn't you?

Mr. Johnson: Objection by Mr. Johnson to the latter part of this answer as not responsive.

The question was: From your own actual ob-2195 servation, Mr. Brown.

A. Yes.

X-Q. 120. You could not say, except as to this small percentage of men, whether your men, from your own observation, did the things and said the things that you have described that they did and said when they went in to approach a dealer, can you, from your own observation?

A. That would be impossible to do that when I would not be with them.

X-Q. 121. Would these order slips which you have 2196 referred to on direct, which your salesman would make out for orders received on his rounds, have you seen slips, order slips of similar character used by jobbing firms, with the name of the jobber at the top, with the name of the jobber printed at the top?

A. Oh, yes, every jobber has these bills, but not of that particular type. They are larger bills.

X-Q. 122. But an order slip or a receipt for orders of a similar character, not just like that?

A. No. With their name and their address and 'phone number on it.

X-Q. 123. Yes. Did you hold meetings with your crew 2197 from time to time?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 124. About how often?

A. Well, about twice a week.

X-Q. 125. And where?

A. In the warehouse, in our offices, 414 Rush Street.

X-Q. 126. What was the purpose of those meetings?

A. The purpose was to instill a little more pep into these men and to impress on their mind that we wanted this cigarette or tobacco, whichever we happened to be working, put over and become a big seller.

X-Q. 127. Was this during the time of the Beech-Nut 2198 cigarette campaign?

A. That we held these meetings?

X-Q. 128. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 129. That is what you were referring to?

A. Yes, sir. Not only that, but during any time the head salesman with Lorillard has these little meetings with their retail men; it is quite a common occurrence to talk to their men.

X-Q. 130. Did you ever caution your men at these meetings about avoiding the appearance of presenting 2199
the Beech-Nut cigarettes as the product of the people who put out the Beech-Nut gum and Beech-Nut peanut butter, and so forth?

A. You mean at the time we introduced the cigarettes?

X-Q. 131. During these meetings, during the campaign.

A. No. Here is what I instructed my men, first, last and all the time: You are representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company, a firm that is well established all over the entire United States, and bring out the point and identify yourself with such brands as Beech-Nut chew-

2200 ing tobacco, Murad cigarettes, Helmar, Between the Acts little cigars, and along these lines, that you are representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company. But later on I heard,—I couldn't say where I heard this, but I remember there was some little friction on this name, so I had a meeting, which I was having, as I said, on an average of twice a week.

X-Q. 132. About when was that?

A. What is that?

X-Q. 133. About when was this that you called this last meeting that you have referred to?

A. Sometime—You mean after I had heard what lit-
2201 tle I have heard about this friction?

X-Q. 134. Yes.

A. Well, let's see. I couldn't say whether it was the last part of 1921 or the first of 1922; I could not say.

X-Q. 135. How long did this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign continue in your—

A. Department?

X-Q. 136. —district?

A. Well, it continued until the first of this year. That is now—

X-Q. 137. The first of what year?

A. 1923.

2202 X-Q. 138. You mean the special hard drive continued till the first of 1923?

A. Yes, sir. But now we didn't work last year, 1922, Beech-Nut exclusively. We worked in our tobaccos along with it. But I would say we devoted fifty per cent. of our time to Beech-Nut cigarettes during 1922.

X-Q. 139. What occurred at that special meeting that you spoke of calling after you had heard of the friction?

A. Nothing outside of the fact I told them I had heard there was a little friction, or, at least, the Beech-Nut Packing Company was trying to cause Lorillard some trouble on using that name, so I said, "Bring out your point very thoroughly that this brand is made by 2203

the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company in every instance." I always had done that, as far as that is concerned, in introducing this to a consumer, to even a sample consumer, "We are representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company," and the same thing with the retailer. "We are representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company."

X-Q. 140. Who is the sales manager for P. Lorillard Company immediately above you, who was at that time?

A. During the latter part of 1921?

X-Q. 141. Yes.

A. Mr. Edward Meyer.

X-Q. 142. Did you receive any instructions from him 2204 or any suggestions that you talk to your own men especially on that point—

A. No, sir, I did not.

X-Q. 143. —to caution them not to let these cigarettes go out as the product of the Beech-Nut Company that made the gum?

A. No, sir; because we made very clear to the retailer that we were representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company.

X-Q. 144. Had you ever received any instructions from anyone above you to that effect, asking you to warn your men not to let the Beech-Nut cigarettes be offered 2205 to the dealers as a product of the gum company?

A. No, I did not, but the Lorillard Tobacco Company would naturally think, if they had a man in charge of a division, would know, rather, that the man would represent himself to be the representative of the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company wherever he went, and his retail men would be instructed accordingly.

Mr. Johnson: Objection to the latter part of this answer as opinion only.

2206 X-Q. 145. Did you ever receive any written instructions or any circular letters from the P. Lorillard Company warning you to instruct your salesmen to be careful in that regard?

A. No, I did not.

X-Q. 146. Did you ever give the salesmen under you any written instructions to that effect?

A. No, I did not, because all of my salesmen were working out of the same office I was in, 414 Rush Street, and I would see these salesmen every morning.

X-Q. 147. Then you have never issued to salesmen under you, after receiving from anyone above you in the 2207 P. Lorillard Company, any written instructions; is that right?

A. No, I have not.

X-Q. 148. What was this friction that you heard about that you have referred to?

A. Now, Mr. Johnson, I could not tell you, because it would be impossible for me to come out and tell you what it was, and I don't remember really where I got it, to tell you the truth about the matter, I thought so little about it, I was not interested.

X-Q. 149. But you did think enough of it at that time to call this special meeting that you speak of and especi-2208 ally speak to your salesmen at that time; is that right?

A. But I did not tell them about these things. I just impressed on their mind more thoroughly to bring out the point of using the name, you are representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company and we are in the tobacco business and that makes these brands, Helmar, Murad, Mogul and Beech-Nut chewing tobacco.

X-Q. 150. In your instructions during the time of the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign to your salesmen, did you emphasize the quality of the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. Yes, I emphasized it the same as I would talk quality on Beech-Nut chewing tobacco. I think brands like Beech-Nut chewing tobacco stand for quality; brands 2209 that are tremendous sellers all over the country are bound to be quality.

X-Q. 151. Then in your instructions to your salesmen you told them to emphasize the quality of the Beech-Nut cigarettes in presenting them?

A. Absolutely.

X-Q. 152. Have you been disappointed in the quality of the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. No, I can't say that I have.

X-Q. 153. Have you heard any complaints or remarks from users of the Beech-Nut cigarettes as to the quality?

A. Well, I have heard complaints that the brand was 2210
a little mild. Perhaps it didn't burn just like it should, but those complaints you will hear on any cigarettes, regardless of what they are.

X-Q. 154. How did the Beech-Nut cigarettes sell during the campaign?

A. Well, they sold very nicely. Now, that is the first brand of cigarettes I ever worked, previous to that being in the tobacco department, but they took hold and sold pretty good.

X-Q. 155. In your own experience in placing these cigarettes have you found that you got many repeat orders? 2211

A. On Beech-Nut?

X-Q. 156. Yes, Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir; absolutely.

X-Q. 157. When did the sales of Beech-Nut cigarettes in your district reach their height, would you say?

A. Well, I would say they reached their height about April, 1922.

X-Q. 158. Were they growing up gradually to that height, were the sales growing gradually to that?

A. Yes, they grew up gradually.

X-Q. 159. How are they selling now?

A. Well, they are not selling as well as they did.

2212 X-Q. 160. Are they selling well at all at the present time?

A. Well, the brand is moving. I wouldn't call it a Camel or Lucky Strike in sales, but the brand is not dead by any means. I am taking repeat orders from the jobbers on the brand now.

X-Q. 161. How do the sales now compare with the sales in your district at the time they were at the peak that you have referred to?

A. I haven't got the figures on that, Mr. Johnson, I could not give you—

X-Q. 162. You can give a general opinion?

2213 A. Well, I would say Beech-Nut is selling twenty per cent as well as they were; twenty per cent as well as they were.

X-Q. 163. During this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign, Mr. Brown, did you move about a good deal among stores and about the streets?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

X-Q. 164. And how many inquiries, comments or remarks did you hear in regard to who made the Beech-Nut cigarettes and as to whether they were made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut gum?

A. Well, not over half a dozen retailers asked me

2214 that question, but here is what they asked: "Do you people make the gum?" Iwould say approximately six, half a dozen dealers.

X-Q. 165. Can you describe some of those instances where they occurred?

A. No, I cannot, Mr. Johnson; I could not.

X-Q. 166. Did you make any attempt to remember such inquiries, comments or remarks?

A. No; I just enlightened the man and told him we had nothing to do with the Beech-Nut gum; that it was the Lorillard Tobacco Company that made tobacco.

Mr. Johnson: Read the question, please. 2215
(The question was read.)

X-Q. 167. Did you make any attempt to remember such instances?

A. No, I did not.

X-Q. 168. Did anyone ask you to make a note or remember any such instances that might occur?

A. No, sir. In every instance where those approximately half a dozen occurred, I explained to them very thoroughly that Lorillard made Beech-Nut chewing tobacco, Murad, Helmar and those brands of tobacco; that we had nothing to do with the gum business; we were in 2216 the tobacco business, cigarette business, and not the gum business or food commodities or anything of that sort.

X-Q. 169. You were pretty busy during that time, were you not?

A. Well, I was, naturally, as I am busy now. I was busy; yes, sir, I was. I manage to keep busy all the time, Mr. Johnson.

X-Q. 170. When you say that you have heard a half a dozen of such inquiries or remarks, you mean you do not remember any more than that?

A. No, I cannot. I never heard any more than that. I say approximately six; in all, half a dozen. 2217

X-Q. 171. Can you give the names of any of those six parties who have asked?

A. Oh, no. As I have just told you, I did not pay much attention to it, and explained to the dealer we were in the tobacco business and did not make gum and explained to him thoroughly what we made. I didn't pay much attention to it.

By Mr. Bulkley:

X-Q. 172. I would like to ask you something about this friction which you say you heard about. Was it a matter of common talk among the salesmen or those connected with the Lorillard Company as to the friction?

A. No.

X-Q. 173. Wait a minute. This friction between the Beech-Nut Packing Company and the Lorillard Company?

2219 A. No, sir, it was not, by any retail men.

X-Q. 174. I guess you don't get the question.

A. Perhaps not.

Mr. Bulkley: Will you please, Miss Examiner, read the question?

(The question was read.)

X-Q. 175. I was not asking you as to the talk among retail men.

A. Yes.

X-Q. 176. But as to whether there was any talk among the Lorillard people with reference to this friction.

2220 A. Yes.

X-Q. 177. And was it a matter of general talk, quite a little talk about it?

A. No, it was not. As I said a minute ago, I couldn't tell you where I really did get it, but not from any of my retail men. I am quite sure. There would be no object in my telling you I knew where it come from, because I do not know.

X-Q. 178. You say you do know it was not from any retail men?

A. I say I am quite sure it was not from any retail man, but I can't tell you from where.

X-Q. 179. Did it come from somebody connected with 2221 the Lorillard Company?

A. My friend, I don't know.

X-Q. 180. You have no recollection about it at all; is that right?

A. I do not remember where it came from, but I heard there was some kind of a friction or something of the kind, and I couldn't tell you where it came from.

X-Q. 181. And was it because of what you heard that you were so cautious in instructing your salesmen to represent themselves as Lorillard people in the sales of that Beech-Nut cigarette; is that right?

A. I impressed it on their mind a little more thor- 2222 oughly. As I said, we were having these meetings about twice a week and in every instance bringing out the point: You are representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company. And until this date, as long as I am with the Lorillard Company, in sampling even, in sampling a man, if I offer a man on the street a sample, I say, "I am representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company," regardless of what else I say, bring out the name.

X-Q. 182. If there was any occasion to tell him you represented the P. Lorillard Company, you would tell him that, wouldn't you?

A. Yes, sir; certainly. 2223

X-Q. 183. And you would have told him that regardless of questions—

A. I did tell him right along.

X-Q. 184. Will you wait until I complete my question?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cavanagh: Don't break in on his answer.

Mr. Bulkley: Will you please read the question?

(The question was read.)

2224 X-Q. 185. What do you mean when you say you did tell them right along?

A. My instructions was to my retail men to introduce themselves as representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company. When you walk into a store or when you go to sample a man, introduce yourself as representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company. That is my first instruction to a man.

X-Q. 186. Did you tell that to these men at these triweekly meetings which you had?

A. I told that to my men ever since I have been a head salesman: When you sample a man, tell the man 2225 that you are representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company and we are interested in Beech-Nut cigarette or Beech-Nut tobacco or Climax, whatever brand we may be working, and to tell him that when you call on a retail man, when you go into the store, say: I am representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company.

X-Q. 187. You would have told them that, to represent themselves as representing the P. Lorillard Company, whether they were selling Beech-Nut cigarettes or not, wouldn't you?

A. I did tell them, I always did tell them that; yes, sir.

2226 X-Q. 188. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 189. So that you would find no occasion particularly in connection with the sale of Beech-Nut cigarettes to tell them that they represented the P. Lorillard Company, would you?

A. Not only that I would take the next meeting to impress on their mind a little more thoroughly to bring out the name Lorillard.

X-Q. 190. Now, you did this on your own initiative, did you?

A. Yes, I did.

X-Q. 191. Nobody told you to do it at all? 2227

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 192. And you did it because you said you had heard of friction between the Beech-Nut Packing Company and the Lorillard Company?

Mr. Cavanagh: The question is objected to as indefinite and we want you to refer to what portion, whether you are speaking of his general instructions to them which he gave since he has been with the cigarette company or the particular instance when he had that meeting.

Mr. Bulkley: Go ahead. Read the question. 2228

(The question was read)

X-Q. 193. Is that right?

A. Well, I did that at my meeting. I brought out this point: That you are with the Lorillard Tobacco Company. But that was nothing unusual to what I had been doing previously.

X-Q. 194. Well, what did you instruct your salesmen by way of special emphasis, having in mind the friction which you had heard about?

A. Well, I didn't say anything to them about the friction. 2229

X-Q. 195. You have said, as I understood, that in your instructions you laid special emphasis upon something?

A. Yes?

X-Q. 196. To be said or done by him in view of this friction?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 197. Which you had heard of. Now, what was that special emphasis that you resorted to in instructing your salesmen?

A. Well, I just simply told them, I says in my talk: Whenever you call on a man or sample a man, bring out 2230 that point, that you represent the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company. Now, that is what I told them.

X-Q. 198. And nobody told you to do that, did they?

A. No, sir, they did not.

X-Q. 199. Over how long a period did these tri-weekly conferences last?

A. Oh, they lasted—Still have my little conferences; I talk to my boys now.

X-Q. 200. At which conferences you laid emphasis on the instructions in connection with the sale of Beech-Nut, how long did they continue?

A. Well, they continued the greater part of last year, 2231 because we put fifty per cent of our efforts on Beech-Nut in 1922, I would say as a whole, roughly speaking, fifty per cent of our time was spent on Beech-Nut.

X-Q. 201. Did you have any talk with Meyer about this situation in connection with the trouble, at any time?

A. No.

X-Q. 202. Never said anything to him at all about it?

A. Mr. Meyer was transferred to Boston the first part of the year of 1922. I had no occasion to talk to him.

X-Q. 203. Ever talk to Mr. Gay about it?

A. Mr. Gay?

2232 X-Q. 204. Yes.

A. Well, since that time I perhaps have; yes, sir.

X-Q. 205. A good many times, haven't you?

A. I wouldn't say a good many times.

X-Q. 206. Did you ever talk to Mr. Gay about it at the time you had these conferences where you were instructing your salesmen with special emphasis?

A. Well, I couldn't say that I did.

X-Q. 207. Have you any recollection about it?

A. No, sir, I haven't.

X-Q. 208. Didn't you consider it a matter of some importance at that time?

A. Well, I didn't because Lorillard is so well known 2233 all over the country, the entire United States, and we have got such big brands, powerful brands, that we identify ourselves with these big brands, I couldn't see where we were connected in any shape, way or form where the friction could come, if there were any.

X-Q. 209. Now, Mr. Witness, I am trying to confine the cross-examination to the matter in hand here.

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 210. And I beg you to refrain from indulging in that which is not responsive to the question.

A. Yes, sir.

2234

Mr. Bulkley: The Examiner is requested to read the previous question to the witness.

(The record was read)

Mr. Cavanagh: This witness is instructed that he can answer his questions in any way he sees fit, irrespective of what Mr. Bulkley may or may not say. When Mr. Bulkley asks a question, you answer it to the best of your ability and as you see fit.

Do not be dictating to my witnesses how they shall answer the questions.

Mr. Bulkley: I am very glad to have that instruction on the record. 2235

Mr. Cavanagh: You are entitled to have it.

Mr. Bulkley: Read the question, please.

(The record was again read)

The Witness: I answered it, didn't I?

Mr. Cavanagh: Give him the fore part of it.

(The question was again read)

X-Q. 211. Didn't it seem to you rather an unusual thing at that time that there should be friction about the use of the word "Beech-Nut"?

A. Well, no. Beech-Nut is a nut, and I would think most anybody could use that name. I couldn't see how 2236 anyone could copyright and monopolize the name of a nut.

X-Q. 212. Well, now, what I am trying to get at with you is to ascertain whether this friction which you heard about didn't make some considerable impression on your mind at the time?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 213 It being an unusual circumstance.

A. No, sir, it did not.

X-Q. 214. Well, it made such an impression on your mind as to cause you to give instructions to your salesmen by way of emphasis, didn't it?

2237 A. Well, yes; perhaps a little bit more so. At these meetings we had been bringing that out right along.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

Mr. Cavanagh: That is all.

By agreement of counsel for the respective parties to the above entitled cause, the signature of the witness to the foregoing deposition was waived.

Whereupon a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p. m. of the same day.

JACOB GAY, JR., called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, P. Lorillard Company, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

2240

By Mr. Cavanagh:

Q. 1. Please state your name, age, residence and occupation.

A. Jacob Gay, Jr.; salesman for P. Lorillard Company; age, thirty-seven; residence, 3501 Greenview Avenue, Chicago.

Q. 2. How long have you been with the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Well, since the dissolution. I was with the old American Tobacco Company and went with the Lorillard Company right after the disintegration of the so called trust.

Q. 3. Will you state briefly at what places and in what connection you have been employed or associated with the Lorillard Company since you went with them in 1911 to the present time?

A. In 1911 I was in New Orleans until about the spring; I was a retail salesman. I was transferred to Houston, Texas, in that same capacity and worked in that vicinity about five months and was transferred to Dallas, Texas, in the same capacity the same year. I remained in Dallas until 1915, when I was promoted to head salesman and transferred to El Paso, Texas. I 2242 remained there until 1917. I was sent to St. Louis in 1918, where I remained until the second day of January, 1922. I was transferred to Chicago January 3, 1922.

Q. 4. As I understand you, you were in St. Louis from 1918 until 1922, up to the first of January, 1922?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 5. And in what capacity?

A. In the capacity of head salesman.

Q. 6. In what department, or what kind of goods did you handle?

A. I was selling the Turkish brands, the Turkish department, the Anargyros.

2243 Q. 7. Did you have a campaign on introducing the Beech-Nut cigarettes in St. Louis?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 8. When?

A. It began on September 26, 1922—1921, rather. I beg your pardon.

Q. 9. What, if any, active part did you take in that campaign?

A. Well, I had a crew of seven men and introduced the brand of Beech-Nut cigarettes in St. Louis and worked on it continuously until December the 16th of the same year, 1921.

2244 Q. 10. What territory did you work with that Beech-Nut cigarette on that campaign?

A. I worked St. Louis exclusively.

Q. 11. How many men did you say you had?

A. Seven.

Q. 12. Tell just what procedure or method you pursued in introducing the Beech-Nut cigarette during this campaign with this crew?

A. Well, on the morning that our campaign opened on Beech-Nut cigarettes, why, I naturally would call all my salesmen together.

Q. 13. Just what you did do. Not what you would do. What you did do.

A. I called all the men together and explained to 2245 them, brought out a carton of two hundred cigarettes, showed them the packing and got each man to smoke and enlightened them on the price, which was six dollars a thousand; and explained to each man that it was a blended cigarette and that we wanted a complete distribution of the entire city. Each man was given ten cartons of two hundred each and he was supposed to sell them for cash, and as he would do that he would get instructions to put them on the counter and place advertising matter on such dealers' places.

Q. 14. How often did you give such instructions?

A. Why, every day, as far as that goes; every day. 2246

Q. 15. What instructions, if any, did you give your crew as to the manner of approaching the customer in selling the cigarettes?

Mr. Johnson: Objection to that question as leading.

A. I instructed the men that the Lorillard Company was putting out the brand— You want sampling, too?

Mr. Bulkley: Go right ahead and answer in your own way.

A. The Lorillard Company was putting out the brand and we were going to give it all the publicity that we possibly could.

Q. 16. Did you sell any of those cigarettes yourself during that drive or campaign?

A. Yes.

Q. 17. Now, tell me just what you would do and what you would say when you went into the store to sell a carton of those cigarettes?

A. Well, I naturally would tell the dealer—

Q. 18. What you did do.

2248 Mr. Bulkley: Wait a minute. Let the witness answer the question.

A. I am representing the Lorillard Tobacco Company and we have got a brand of cigarettes that we are putting out on your market here, twenty cigarettes in a package, retailing for fifteen cents.

Q. 19. If this customer purchased a carton of those cigarettes from you, what did you do, if anything?

A. I would put them on the counter and put a carton card in the open carton and place a poster on the window.

2249 Q. 20. I show you some slips which are in this case as defendant's exhibit No. 10. Do you recognize those, and, if so, please tell us what they are?

A. This is a slip that is torn out of our retail order book.

Q. 21. Did you ever use slips like those, and, if so. how?

A. Every day.

Q. 22. What did you do with them?

A. Write up the dealer's order and then turn them in to the jobber.

Q. 23. Supposing the retailer paid you cash, what did 2250 you do?

A. Make a receipt on this and give him one and keep the other myself.

Q. 24. Will you please tell us which one you kept and which one you gave to the dealer or retailer?

A. I gave him the white slip, which is the original copy.

Q. 25. What did you do with the other slips? Just tell us how you used them.

A. Left them in the book. Just remained in the retail order book.

Q. 26. If a man did not pay you cash, what did you 2251
do with his order?

A. Mailed it to the jobber.

Q. 27. What jobber?

A. This jobber that he specified he wanted his merchandise through.

Q. 28. Who were these men you had on the crew at that time, can you name them?

A. I think I have a list here. I can't give the initials of all of them.

Q. 29. Give us what information you can.

A. O'Brien is one.

2252

Mr. Johnson: If you can, give his initials.

Mr. Cavanagh: He said he could not give initials.

A. Not all of them. I can give you O'Brien's initials.

Mr. Johnson: Whatever ones you have. It will save some questions.

A. W. P. O'Brien. White; I can't give his initials. Carsten, Rumpf, Quince, Imhoff. And there was another; I can't recall his name, but I think it was Andrews. 2253
However, he did not remain very long.

Q. 30. Did you personally accompany any of these salesmen when they called upon the retail trade in introducing this cigarette?

A. You mean did I go with any of them?

Q. 31. Into the stores; yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 32. Well, about how often?

A. Well, every once in a while I would work with the different men, say about every third day I would be with a different man.

2254 Q. 33. Did you ever hear of any comments or inquiries or remarks by consumers to the effect or which would lead you to believe that they thought that the Beech-Nut cigarette or Beech-Nut scrap tobacco was made by the same concern that makes the Beech-Nut gum, peanut butter or other food products?

A. No.

Mr Cavanagh: Direct examination closed.

STIPULATION.

2255 It is agreed that when the witness refers to a carton of cigarettes in his direct examination he is speaking of a carton of Beech-Nut cigarettes, of a pasteboard box of two hundred cigarettes and such as has been heretofore introduced in evidence in this case as Defendant's Cross Exhibit No. 4.

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 34. In about what percentage of cases, Mr. Gay, 2256 did you accompany your salesmen when they went into the dealers' stores to offer the cigarettes for sale?

A. Well, that is a difficult matter. I cannot answer that directly, because I am with them occasionally and I never keep any record of that.

X-Q. 35. But was it half the time?

A. No.

X-Q. 36. A quarter of the time?

A. No. I couldn't say—You mean any particular one salesman or with—

X-Q. 37. No, with reference to any of the salesmen, your entire crew?

A. I will say three days in a week I was with salesmen; that would give half of the time. 2257

X-Q. 38. But of all of the number of times they went into stores to offer Beech-Nut cigarettes for sale, was it a very large proportion of the cases that you accompanied the salesmen and saw what he was doing and heard what he was saying?

FRANK C. DEGAN, called as a witness on behalf of the 2274 defendant, P. Lorillard Company, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Cavanagh:

Q. 1. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. Frank C. Degan, 1106 Wrightwood Avenue, Chicago; forty-five years old; salesman for the P. Lorillard Company.

Q. 2. How long have you been connected with the P. 2275
Lorillard Company?

A. Seven years; 1916 was the year that I came with them.

Q. 3. And in what departments and what capacities?

A. In the plug and smoking department continuously.

Q. 4. As a salesman?

A. As a salesman.

Q. 5. Where are your headquarters at present located?

A. 414 Rush Street, Chicago.

Q. 6. And under whose supervision do you work? 2276

A. Mr. W. H. Brown.

Q. 7. Now, Mr. Degan, do you recall or were you directly connected with the introductory campaign of the Beech-Nut cigarette in the territory where you were working?

A. As a salesman; yes, sir. Distributed it, if that is what you mean; yes, sir.

Q. 8. When did you first start to distribute this Beech-Nut cigarette in an introductory campaign?

A. On the morning of September 6th or 7th. It was the morning after Labor Day in the year 1921. Labor Day was on Monday, whether it was the 6th or 7th, it 2277 was the next morning; Lockport, Indiana. We left here on the evening of Labor Day. That was a holiday; it was for us.

Q. 9. Did you work under the supervision of anyone and, if so, whose supervision?

A. I would have to stop and think a minute.

Q. 10. Who was in charge of your crew?

A. I was just thinking. There was a change about that time. Mr. W. H. Brown; yes.

Q. 11. Did you take part in any such introductory campaign in Chicago?

2278 A. Yes, sir.

Q. 12. When did you start that campaign and when did it end, as far as the active campaign was concerned?

A On September 26th, approximately, and ended the end of that year; ended December 15th or 16th, somewhere around there, when we went on our vacations for the holidays; that was the active campaign.

Q. 13. As I understand, you were a member of Mr. Brown's crew in introducing this Beech-Nut cigarette to the trade?

A. Yes, sir.

2279 Q. 14. Did Mr. Brown give you any instructions as to how to proceed with the introduction of this cigarette to the trade, and if so, please tell us, in your own words, just what those instructions were.

A. Why, yes, we were instructed to explain to the dealer it was a combination of the various domestic tobaccos with a sprinkling of Turkish, and, of course, I explained to start with that we always explained to the dealer when we went in the place that we represented the Lorillard Tobacco Company and we manufactured brands such as Murad cigarette, Union Leader, Climax, Beech-Nut Scrap; that was for the purpose of 2280 identifying ourselves, as far as the dealer was concerned. Our instructions always had been to give them to understand we were from the Lorillard Company. The purpose of that was, I imagine, that the dealer would not forget us. We wanted him to remember our faces and we wanted him to know that we represented the Lorillard Tobacco Company as distinguished from a great many other companies.

Q. 15. How often did you receive such instructions from Mr. Brown, how often would they be given?

A. There were salesmen's meetings, we might call them, I should say several times a week, yes, at least that.

Q. 16. Where were you when these instructions would be given or these salesmen's meetings held? 2281

A. At the warehouse or depot, 414 Rush Street.

Q. 17. At what time of the day would these meetings usually be held?

A. Always before we left in the morning.

Q. 18. What do you mean by "left in the morning?"

A. Before we went out on our territory.

Q. 19. Now, when you went to call on the trade in introducing this Beech-Nut cigarette during this campaign, did you carry any materials with you and, if so, what?

A. Well, we carried stock, if that is what you want to know. I believe we started with ten cartons of the cigarette and sold them for cash. We had posters also. Was it the yellow—yellow posters; yes; and later on a tin sign that we were required to carry. 2282

Q. 20. And what did you do with these cartons of Beech-Nut cigarettes that you carried with you? Did you sell these to the customer or what?

A. We sold those for cash, the cartons that we carried with us.

Q. 21. What did you do with the advertising?

A. Pasted them on the window where we could, and where that was not possible got the best possible location for them on the dealer's store front, of course. 2283

Q. 22. Now, when you called on a customer, say a retailer, in introducing this Beech-Nut cigarette, what sales talk did you give him or what did you say to him?

A. As a rule—I will use this carton to illustrate—

Mr. Cavanagh: Witness refers to a carton of Beech-Nut cigarettes on the table before him.

A. A great many of the trade I was familiar with. I would tell them: "Harry, this is a Lorillard Beech-Nut cigarette. You have heard of it." They had 2284 heard of it because they were placed pretty generally throughout the territory before they came into Chicago and the better class dealers had heard of them. "It is a combination of Burley and some Virginia tobacco. It is a well wrapped piece of goods. Miid, somewhat milder than the average run of the fifteen-cent cigarettes. It will cost you $1.12 a carton net." I always quoted the net prices where it was a cash proceeding. Otherwise it resulted in an argument on discounts. Now, there was a little yellow slip we had in all of them, I used to make it a practice to put in the end of the carton, just as this is (indicating), and set it up on 2285 the dealer's case as a rule. Now, that was the substance of what I told them, as far as the selling end of it was concerned.

Q. 23. Was that all you told them?

A. Well, there would be other— Sometimes there would be a little selling argument, Mr. Cavanagh. They might say sometimes they had no outlet for a new brand and in that case I would explain to them as far as I could that our brands were all big sellers and call their attention again to our Climax or our Union Leader and our Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco, and explained to them that there was every reason to believe that this 2286 would be just as good a seller as our other brands. That was the substance of it, practically.

Q. 24. I show you some slips which are pinned together, which are in this case as defendant's exhibit No. 10. Can you identify those slips and, if so, tell me what they are?

A. I can identify those as being the Lorillard order blanks. It should have a tissue in here, or two of them. These are the original and duplicate of the Lorillard Tobacco Company order blank.

Q. 25. Did you ever use slips like these in your business?

A. Yes, sir. 228

Q. 26. What did you do with them?

A. We would use them wherever we got an order.

Q. 27. How did you use them? Just tell us.

A. If it was a cash order it was: Mark the date and "Cash" in here (indicating), the man's name, the street address and the merchandise and the character of it. Two hundred Beech-Nut cigarettes, $1.12; down across the face of it "Paid, Degan." The dealer was given the yellow slip. That is the purpose of it, either as a receipt or memorandum of his order, either one of the two. That is what they were used for. There should be a tissue of that; that stays in the book. 228

Q. 28. Did you ever sell or are you now selling the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco to the trade? If so, tell us just about what you have done in this line.

A. I am selling it at present; yes; I have been since the beginning of 1922. What was the other question?

Q. 29. Had you sold any of the Beech-Nut scrap before this?

A. Before 1922?

Q. 30. Yes.

A. To the best of my knowledge, no. I think we got that brand at the beginning of 1922.

Q. 31. What department were you working in before 1922? 228

A. Plug and smoking. I might explain, previous to that time the Beech-Nut scrap department was a separate department of the Lorillard Company.

Q. 32. So you personally began selling the Beech-Nut Scrap in 1922?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 33. Now, have you ever heard of any comments or remarks or inquiries from customers or others to the effect or which would lead you to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut cigarette or the Beech-Nut 2290 Scrap tobacco was made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut gum or Beech-Nut peanut butter?

A. No, sir.

Q. 34. Are you still selling the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 35. Are you still selling the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco in your territory?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cavanagh: Direct-Examination closed.

Cross-Examination

2291 By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 36. What was your district, Mr. Degan during this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign?

A. We had no particular section. We were assigned to different streets or territories from day to day.

X-Q. 37. What was the whole district that you were engaged in working in?

A. In Chicago, you mean?

X-Q. 38. Yes. Anything outside of Chicago?

A. Lockport, Indiana; Peru; Rochester; Monon; Rensselaer.

2292 X-Q. 39. Was your territory the whole district of Indiana or some portion of Indiana?

A. We were sent to Lockport and while we were there we received a slip from Mr. Brown—I had another man with me—which gave us towns we were to make, and they were the towns I have mentioned. There were several more, if you will let me finish.

X-Q. 40. If you can remember them.

A. I think so.

X-Q. 41. The others that you can remember.

A. North Judson, Shelby, Hammond, I think that is all, to the best of my recollection.

X-Q. 42. Was that in addition to the district of 2293
Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 43. When you were working the district of Chicago, what portion of it was assigned to you?

A. Mostly the South and West Side.

X-Q. 44. South of any particular boundary street?

A. Madison and south.

X-Q. 45. Did you work that territory with other salesmen?

A. You mean in connection with other salesmen or in company with—

X-Q. 46. Were there other salesmen working that 2294 same territory during that Beech-Nut cigarette campaign?

A. Oh, yes.

X-Q. 47. Who were they, if you can remember?

A. No, I can't answer that question. There were so many of them and the most of them were strangers to me. They were men that had been put on at the time the campaign started.

X-Q. 48. Whose crew was that?

A. At that time they were under the general head of a Mr. Sherrock. I may be wrong about that, but that is the best of my recollection; and I worked under Mr. 2295
Brown. I think there were half a dozen others that were under Mr. Brown's direct jurisdiction in this work, and a Mr. Sherrock had charge of the Beech-Nut cigarette as a whole, but the plug and smoking department took the active part in it, in view of the fact that it was a Lorillard brand and they wanted to get as rapid and thorough a distribution as possible.

X-Q. 49. Was this Mr. Sherrock in charge of the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign for the City of Chicago?

A. I do not hesitate because I know—I can only explain that event this way: Presumably that after the 2296 campaign was over the Beech-Nut cigarettes were entirely under Mr. Sherrock's jurisdiction. We were then the plug and smoking department, but Mr. Sherrock was considered the head of the Beech-Nuts, as I understand.

X-Q. 50. Did he have a crew during this period of September 26th to the end of 1921 working on the South Side in the City of Chicago, at the same time you were working that part of the city?

The witness: Read that question.
(The question was read)

2297 X-Q. 51. That was during the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign in Chicago?

A. Yes, they were over the city in general. I can't say they were on the South-Side any more than the North Side, Mr. Johnson. We had no side, if I remember rightly, no side district. Now, his men may have had. Mr. Brown's did not, to the best of my knowledge. I may be wrong. This was a year and a half ago.

X-Q. 52. Mr. Sherrock had a crew of men out simply at the same time, did he?

A. Yes, sir.

2298 X-Q. 53. You say these men were not old Lorillard employes?

A. My recollection is that the majority of them were not old Lorillard employes.

X-Q. 54. Were they men hired just for the occasion?

A. That is to the best of my recollection.

X-Q. 55. Can you remember the names of any of that crew of men of Mr. Sherrock's?

A. Well, we have in the smoking and plug department two of them at present.

X-Q. 56. Who are they?

A. A. Winkelman.

X-Q. 57. How do you spell that? 2299

A. W-i-n-k-e-l-m-a-n.

That answer is wrong. I should have said one. We had another one, but he was transferred to Denver.

X-Q. 58. Do you know whether Mr. A. Winkelman was employed by the Lorillard Company for the first time for this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign?

A. To the best of my knowledge, that was the first time he worked for Lorillard.

X-Q. 59. What is the name of the man who went to Denver?

A. Arthur Mayburn. M-a-y-b-u-r-n, I think that is.

X-Q. 60. Do you know whether he was hired for the 2300 first time by the Lorillard Company to engage in this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign?

A. That is my recollection.

X-Q. 61. Have you ever heard any discussion at all, or any questions asked as to who made the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. You mean the dealer?

X-Q. 62. Anybody.

A. That question is rather broad, Mr. Johnson. I wouldn't know just how to answer that. I would have to answer it in blanket no.

X-Q. 63. Anybody on your rounds as you have gone 2301 about the City of Chicago or your Indiana district?

A. Oh, I heard once or twice, not over that, I don't think, they would ask or make the comment: "This is not made by the people that make the gum, is it?" I have had that occur to me once or twice. They seemed to take it for granted that it was not.

X-Q. 64. Can you describe where or when such incidents as that occurred?

A. No, I cannot. I attached no importance to them at the time at all; none whatever. I had made a practice of giving the dealer to understand that I was from the Lorillard, the Climax and the Beech-Nut Scrap house.

2302 That was, as much as anything, because I wanted him t. remember me. I wanted him to remember me.

X-Q. 65. You have heard a few instances of that kind of questions and discussions, have you?

A. No discussion. It was just a casual remark: "This is not made by the gum house." I have heard that once or twice; I do not know where or when.

X-Q. 66. Did you make any effort to remember such incidents, if they occurred?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 67. Did anyone ever ask you to make a note of them or remember them?

2303 A. No, sir.

X-Q. 68. When you say there were only one or two such remarks that you heard, you mean you do not remember any more than that, do you not?

A. Certainly. Certainly. It seems to me if there were more I might have had in mind where they occurred. That is why I say one or two.

X-Q. 69. Were you under Mr. Wade H. Brown during this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 70. Did you ever receive any written instructions from Mr. Brown covering your work in connection 2304 with this campaign,—any written instructions?

A. Not that I remember.

X-Q. 71. In offering these Beech-Nut cigarettes for sale, did you emphasize the quality of the cigarette?

A. Not more than I would any other one of our brands, I don't think. I made it a practice to speak quality in practically everything that Lorillard manufactured. I have, I think, good reason to believe that is a good selling argument with us and we use it. The fact that our brands are sellers as they are would indicate that quality has something to do with it.

X-Q. 72. Have you heard any complaints or remarks 2305 from people who have used the cigarette as to the quality of the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. Yes, I have.

X-Q. 73. Of what nature?

A. They varied. Occasionally I would find a man that said they were too strong. Another man said they were too mild.

X-Q. 74. How did they sell at first?

A. You mean the outlet?

X-Q. 75. In your experience, how did they sell after the campaign opened?

A. Well, it was an intensive campaign and they sold, 2306
I think, as good as could be expected. I can't answer your question any further than that.

X-Q. 76. Did you make comparatively large sales?

A. No, I did not. I did not make any comparatively large sales personally.

X-Q. 77. Would you say they sold pretty well at the start?

A. For a new cigarette; yes.

X-Q. 78. Did the sales increase as the weeks and months went by?

A. I had no figures.

X-Q. 79. This is your own experience? 2307

A. They held about even, I should judge, I imagine they did, while we continued our advertising.

X-Q. 80. How are they selling to-day?

A. They are not selling as well, due to the lack of advertising, I think. We are doing no work in an advertising way.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

2308 Re-direct Examination.

By Mr. Cavanagh:

R-D. Q. 81. If you had heard any appreciable or frequent number of remarks as to whether or not the Beech-Nut cigarette was made by the same people as the Beech-Nut gum, you would have remembered the fact?

A. Oh, yes.

R-D. Q. 82. As I understand it, when you started the Beech-Nut campaign, you started it about September 6, 1921, in Indiana, did you not?

2309 A. Yes, sir.

R-D. Q. 83. And then you subsequently came to Chicago about September 26, 1921?

A. Yes, sir.

R-D. Q. 84. And you were loaned from the plug and smoking department for this campaign, were you?

A. Yes, sir.

R-D. Q. 85. Now, you have stated in your direct examination that you received word from Mr. Brown as to what cities to cover in Indiana. Were those written instructions, do you recall?

A. Mr. Brown came to the hotel in Lockport and we 2310 wrote down, he and I—who don't know, which of us,—the names of those cities that Mr. Brown wanted me and the other salesmen there to make.

Mr. Cavanagh: That is all.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

By agreement of counsel for the respective parties to the above entitled cause, the signature of the witness to the foregoing deposition was waived.

2311

PHILIP LUDWIG BURGESON, called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, P. Lorillard Company, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Cavanagh:

Q. 1. Please state your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. Philip Ludwig Burgeson; I am twenty-nine; 3802 North Paulina Street, Chicago; salesman for the P .Lorillard Company.

Q. 2. How long have you been connected with the P. Lorillard Company?

A. It will be three years April 17, 1923; that is, since April, 1920.

Q. 3. What department of the Lorillard Company did you start with and where?

A. I started in the plug and smoking, with Mr. Edward Meyer.

Q. 4. Where?

A. At Kinzie Street; the office was at that time on Kinzie Street, Chicago.

2313

Q. 5. Did you take part in any introductory campaign of the Beech-Nut cigarette in the Chicago territory?

A. Yes; both in Chicago and Indiana.

Q. 6. When?

A. We started in October—or September 6th.

Q. 7. What year?

A. That is 1921. We started in Indiana. I started it in South Bend, Indiana.

Q. 8. How long did you work in India on that campaign?

2314 A. About four weeks in Indiana, three or four weeks.

Q. 9. And when and how long did you work it in Chicago?

A. Oh, we worked it in Chicago from the 26th of the same month, we worked it until Christmas time of the same year, for introductory work is what I mean.

Q. 10. Under whose supervision did you work?

A. Under W. H. Brown.

Q. 11. Now, in connection with this campaign I understand you worked as a member of Mr. Brown's crew?

2315 A. Yes, sir.

Q. 12. Did you receive any instructions from Mr. Brown as to how to do your work in this campaign or present the Beech-Nut cigarettes to the trade?

A. Yes, sir, we did receive instructions about two or three times a week how to sell and advertise the brand.

Q. 13. Where were these instructions given to you?

A. Given right at the office, 414 Rush Street.

Q. 14. What time during the day?

A. Well, from eight o'clock until—between eight and nine in the morning, just before we went out on our 2316 territories.

Q. 15. What instructions did you so receive from Mr. Brown? State in your own words.

A. Well, we received instructions—we received our advertising and our cigarettes and then also how to sell and advertise the brand.

Q. 16. What did he tell you in respect to selling and advertising the brand?

A. Well, for instance: "We are with the Lorillard Company," as Mr. Brown always would state to us the Lorillard Company. "We are putting on a new cigarette called Beech-Nut. Perhaps a lot of dealers have heard of it, of course." Then, of course, if we did not 2317 sell the dealer we would put up our advertising and also mention our other brands such as Murads, Helmars, Deities; also Climax. Then we would never forget to mention our famous brand, Beech-Nut chewing tobacco.

Q. 17. You refer to the Beech-Nut Scrap?

A. Yes, Beech-Nut chewing. We do not call it scrap any more, Mr. Cavanagh; we call it chewing.

Q. 18. Now, when you called on the dealer to introduce the cigarette, after receiving these instructions, what selling talk did you give the dealer, what did you say to him and what did you do? 2318

A. Well, I would come in and say I represented the Lorillard Tobacco Company; that we were putting on a new brand of cigarettes and he perhaps had heard of them; that they were called the Beech-Nut cigarettes. Then we would talk about some of our other brands I would say, "I suppose you know we also manufacture the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco and the Climax, and so forth." Ask him how our other brands were going; also state that they were also made by the P. Lorillard Company, all these brands.

Q. 19. What did you do with the advertising that you took into the store? 2319

A. The advertising, we would try to get some inside and some outside, wherever there was a space for it, we would ask the dealer's permission in order to put it up. Always that is our biggest point, advertising; we have got to get advertising.

Q. 20. When you went into this dealer's place you took some of the cartons of cigarettes with you, as I understand?

A. Yes, sir, I sold off a car so I always carried a big supply on the car with me; I always did.

Q. 21. If the dealer made a purchase, what did you do, what procedure would you follow?

2320 A. We would have an order blank just like that (indicating).

Mr. Cavanagh: Witness refers to Defendant's Exhibit No. 10, order receipt.

A. We would make out the order to the amount sold and then we would give him the yellow sheet and keep the white one ourselves, and if it was sent through the jobber,—sometimes the dealer did not want it direct,—we would give him the same one, the yellow one, and send the white one to the jobber and keep our own 2321 record on the tissue sheet.

Q. 22. Have you ever personally sold the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco for P. Lorillard Company to the trade?

A. I have in the last year, from the first—the year before 1922—from the first of the year, when the Beech-Nut was tranferred over to the plug and smoking. Before that time it was a separate department.

Q. 23. Now, have you ever heard of any questions or comments or remarks from customers or any other person or persons to the effect or which would lead you to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut cigarettes or the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco were made by the same people 2322 that make the Beech-Nut gum or Beech-Nut peanut butter or food products?

A. Well, I have perhaps as high as two or three times. A dealer would say, "Do you also make the Beech-Nut gum?" Of course, it would not be our big dealer that would say that; it would be some of the peanut stands, as we would say, that would say that. Two or three times at the highest.

Q. 24. What was your answer on those occasions?

A. "We only make smoking articles." Always say Beech-Nut gum is a food product and we do not make food products. We make eighty-five of the Turkish brands that are on the market. We do not manufacture any food products whatsoever. 2323

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 25. You did, then, Mr. Burgeson, hear some questions and discussion as to whether the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the gum people?

A. Yes, naturally I would, on account of being the same name, but not as much as we did expect.

X-Q. 26. Can you describe any of those incidents? 2324

A. No, I can't; I can't remember.

X-Q. 27. Can you say where they took place?

A. No, I cannot remember that. That is impossible. We paid no attention to it. I do not remember.

X-Q. 28. You did not try to remember such incidents as they happened, you did not try to remember them?

A. No, I did not.

X-Q. 29. Did anyone ever ask you to remember them or make a note of them?

A. No; not to make a note of them.

X-Q. 30. You had no reason then to try to remember them? 2325

A. No, I did not.

XQ. 31. When you say there were only two or three such instances then, do you mean that there were only two or three that you remember?

A. Well, I wouldn't say that no. It may not be that many, but I remember of hearing some. I couldn't exactly say whether it was two or three, one or two.

X-Q. 32. During the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign, did you go around any of the time with another salesman?

A. At the time I took part of Indiana and another man took the other part of Indiana, a few counties. I 2326 had one man with me, but never with me on the same car. He was never with me. I told him where to go. I had South Bend and a few other towns.

X-Q. 33. That is what I mean, you did not go into the same stores?

A. No. That is just what I am trying to explain.

X-Q. 34. Then when you said on your direct testimony, "We would do this and we would do that," you mean you, yourself?

A. Me, myself, of course. I did not mean—When we talk about our company we say "we," of course. We do not say "I."

2327 X-Q. 35. But you cannot say, can you, what the other salesmen said and did when they went into the stores?

A. No, I cannot. Everyone uses a different line of sales talk, of course. We are all instructed the same, but finally drift into our own.

X-Q. 36. Can you give the names of the Indiana towns that you worked during the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign?

A. Give the names of what?

X-Q. 37. Of the towns?

A. No, I can't. I remember I worked South Bend
2328 and Benton Harbor, but there was a lot of small towns, maybe only two or three dealers in. I have got the records of it, if you want it, but I can't remember.

X-Q. 38. Can you remember any more than that?

A. It is hard to remember those little burgs, you know, as we call them. We put it all on record when I have seen the dealer and I have forgotten all about them towns and everything. I am through with them.

X-Q. 39. When you were working the Chicago district, what part of Chicago did you yourself work in?

A. Both the North Side—

X-Q. 40. I am speaking of the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign.

A. Both the North Side and the South Side. We worked streets, of course, take street after street, and we are assigned to a different street every morning. 2329

X-Q. 41. Did you work mostly the South Side or mostly the North Side?

A. That I could not say; just about the same, I think.

X-Q. 42. Were there any other crews out besides this crew of yours under Mr. Brown?

A. Why, that was only at the time we were out in Indiana that we were split up in small crews. Otherwise we would work directly under Mr. Brown.

X-Q. 43. But I mean besides Mr. Brown's crew, do you know of any other crews who worked the City of Chicago during this Beech-Nut cigarette campaign? 2330

A. No, only Mr. Brown's crew worked here at that time.

X-Q. 44. In offering these Beech-Nut cigarettes to the trade, did you emphasize the quality of the cigarettes?

A. Yes. Told them it was a very mild cigarette and it was cheaper than the other cigarettes and giving them just as good quality as the others we sold at higher prices.

X-Q. 45. Did you hear any complaints as to the quality of the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Yes, we did. We always heard it was too mild, didn't suit the people; too mild. That is the complaint we heard all the way around; that is why we never made a success of Beech-Nut cigarettes. 2331

X-Q. 46. Did they sell pretty well at first, in your experience?

A. Yes, at first they sold fairly well.

X-Q. 47. About how long did they continue to be a good seller?

A. Well, that is hard to say; perhaps about two or three months they were good sellers.

2332 X-Q. 48. How are they selling now?
A. Not very good.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

Re-direct Examination.

By Mr. Cavanagh:

R-D. Q. 49. If you had heard any appreciable number or frequent inquiries as to whether the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut gum, would you have remembered such in-2333 stances?

A. I would not have remembered where it was, Mr. Cavanagh.

R-D. Q. 50. Would you remember the fact?

A. Yes, I would.

R-D. Q. 51. You said on your cross examination that Mr. Brown had the one crew here in Chicago; is that right?

A. That is at the time when we put on the cigarettes, but later on Mr. Gay was transferred over here. That was in 1922.

R-D. Q. 52. Was there a Mr. Sherrock here?
2334
A. I did not work under Mr. Sherrock.

Pardon me. I made a slip there. Mr. Sherrock was here too.

R-D. Q. 53. For information, what is Mr. Sherrock's position here, what is he?

A. He is not here any more.

R-D. Q. 54. What was he at that time?

A. He was head salesman for the Beech-Nut cigarettes. Of course, we were in the plug and smoking and also assigned to work Beech-Nut cigarettes at the time when Beech-Nut cigarettes were put out and everybody was put on them in the plug and smoking, out of the plug and smoking, were put on this Beech-Nut crew. 2335

Re-cross Examination.

By Mr. Johnson:

R-X. Q. 55. Then do I understand you now to say t during the Beech-Nut cigarette campaign in Chic there was another crew or other crews working the C of Chicago?

A. Yes, there was a Beech-Nut crew that had nc ing to do but with Beech-Nut cigarettes.

2336

R-X. Q. 56. Do you know how many of such other crews there were?

A. There was only one crew here that was charged under Mr. Sherrock.

R-X Q. 57. Did you know the men on that crew?

A. No; none of those men are left.

R-X. Q. 58. Could you name any of them?

A. Well, there was— No, I couldn't. I was never in contact with them, because we had our department and did not pay any attention to them at all.

R-X. Q. 59. Were they old Lorillard employes, do you know?

A. No, they were not. They were hired just for the present time, I guess, for the campaign.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

Mr. Cavanagh: That is all.

By agreement of counsel for the respective parties to the above entitled cause, the signature of the witness to the foregoing deposition was waived.

WHEREUPON a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p. m. of the same day.

IN THE
DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,

FOR THE DISTRICT OF NEW JERSEY.

Beech-Nut Packing Company,
Plaintiff,
vs.
P. Lorrillard Company,
Defendant.

In Equity
No. 3056

VOLUME II.

DEFENDANT'S RECORD.

ILLINOIS WITNESSES CONTINUED.

Chicago, February 8, 1923,
2:00 o'clock p. m.

Parties met pursuant to recess.

PRESENT: Counsel as before.

WILLIAM G. SUES, called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, P. Lorillard Company, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

839 Direct Examination.

By Mr. Cavanagh:

Q. 1. Will you please state your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. William G. Sues; age, fifty-nine years; residence, 3123 Broadway; occupation, cigar clerk.

Q. 2. For what concern and where are you employed?

A. Albert Breitung, 134 South La Salle Street.

Q. 3. Is that in the Corn Exchange Bank Building?

A. It is in the Corn Exchange Bank Building; yes, 840 sir.

Q. 4. How large is that store there, is it a small store?

A. Just an inside stand.

Q. 5. How long have you been employed at this stand in the Corn Exchange Bank Building?

A. About five years.

Q. 6. Regularly all that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 7. Are there any other clerks employed at that stand?

A. There is a relief clerk. I am the only regular clerk, but a clerk relieves me at the lunch hour. 234

Q. 8. As I understand it, this other clerk is only there during the lunch hour?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 9. And how long has that same relief clerk been working there, do you know?

A. Oh, he has been working there about six weeks.

Q. 10. Did you have any relief clerk before that?

A. Yes, sir; they keep changing them all the time.

Q. 11. But you are there steadily, all day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 12. You are the regular clerk? 234

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 13. At this stand did you ever handle the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 14. And Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco?

A. No; just the cigarettes. We do not carry much tobacco. It is a small stand.

Q. 15. Did you ever handle the Beech-Nut gum at that stand?

A. Beech-Nut gum; yes, sir.

Q. 16. And the Beech-Nut mints?

A. Beech-Nut mints; yes, sir. 234

Q. 17. Do you know who makes the Beech-Nut cigarette, what concern?

A. I do not know the concern's name, just called the Beech-Nut Company, I think. I do not know the people behind it.

Q. 18. I am talking about the Beech-Nut cigarette.

A. Oh, cigarettes! The Lorillard Company.

Q. 19. Do you know what concern makes the gum?

A. I do not know who the persons or the people are in the gum business.

Q. 20. How long have you known of the P. Lorillard Company?

2344 A. Oh, forty or fifty years.

Q. 21 Do you know what line of business they are in?

A. Tobacco manufacturers; cigarettes; tobaccos.

Q. 22. How long did you know the Lorillard Company to make the Beech-Nut cigarette, or to be the manufacturers of the cigarette?

A. The cigarettes? Just a couple of years.

Q. 23. While you have been at that counter did you ever have any relief clerks there for any extended period of time, such as three or four years, only for the relief work there, that length of time?

A. No, sir; they change them about every two 2345 months.

Q. 24. Your hair is gray, is it not, Mr. Sues?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 25. Now, it has been testified in this case by Mr. Darrell S. Boyd, on behalf of the plaintiff, that he made certain purchases of Beech-Nut cigarettes at the stand at the Breitung tobacco stand in this Corn Exchange Bank Building, and he testified, in substance, that he asked the clerk back of the counter, whom he had seen there for three or four years and who was a gray haired man about fifty years old, "if the cigarettes were made by the same company who marketed the Beech-Nut bacon 2346 and other well known Beech-Nut products", and that the clerk said it was; that they were products of the same company that got out Beech-Nut bacon and Beech-Nut candy and Beech-Nut gum and various other Beech-Nut products; and that he then called the attention of the clerk to the name "P. Lorillard Company" on the package of cigarettes and asked, "What does P. Lorillard on the label mean," and that this clerk said, "Oh, they are all made by the same company"; and that he said. "The P. Lorillard Company is not the company that gets out Beech-Nut bacon", and the clerk said, "No but they are all made by the same concern; the Beech-

Nut Packing Company owns and controls the P. Lorillard Company. It is all the same crowd." Do you ever recall having made such a statement? 2347

Mr. Johnson: Objection by Mr. Johnson to this question as grossly leading. Counsel for Beech-Nut Packing Company objects to the manner in which Mr. Cavanagh approaches this question in presenting this inquiry.

Mr. Cavanagh: This question is in the nature of rebuttal of certain testimony produced by plaintiff, and it is not seen how the question can be leading as, according to the rules of evidence, one is entitled to direct the attention of a rebuttal witness to the state of facts which he is called to rebut. 2348

A. No, sir, I never had such a conversation.

Mr. Johnson: I want to add to that objection our objection as to the manner in which Mr. Cavanagh approaches this question.

Q. 26. Has there ever been any reason for you to make such a statement?

A. No, sir. It would be ridiculous for me to make any such statement because Lorillards were the biggest tobacco concern in the country and Beech-Nut Candy Company wouldn't have any interest in that, to run that factory for P. Lorillards. 2349

Q. 27. And when you were handling the cigarette, the Beech-Nut cigarette, you knew what concern manufactured it?

A. Yes, sir; P. Lorillards; see right on the carton.

Q. 28. While you were selling the Beech-Nut cigarette at this stand, did you ever hear of any remarks or questions from customers to the effect or which would lead 2350 you to believe that they thought this Beech-Nut cigarette was made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut gum?

A. No, sir.

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Bulkley:

X-Q. 29. Did you ever have any conversation, Mr. Sues, with a customer in connection with Beech-Nut cigarettes sold by you?

A. No, sir.

2351 X-Q. 30. I understand you never had any talk with anybody concerning Beech-Nut cigarettes at any time?

A. Just when we want to sell them, I would speak up for the cigarettes because they were something new.

X-Q. 31. What would you say, as you now recollect it, when you talked to the customers about Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. I would say, "Here is some new cigarettes, P. Lorillard's got out; ought to try them; they seem to be taking well."

X-Q. 32. And that is the only conversation or the only kind of a conversation you had about Beech-Nut 2352 cigarettes with any customer?

A. With any customer; yes, sir.

X-Q. 33. During the whole of the time—

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 34. —that you were selling Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. During the whole of the time; yes, sir.

X-Q. 35. Did you tell the customers whenever you presented them with the new Beech-Nut cigarettes that they were manufactured by P. Lorillard?

A. They could see it right on the stand, that was right on the show case, set out just like that (illustrating); they could see the name on there. 2353

X-Q. 35. That is not what I asked you.

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 37. What I did ask you was whether you ever told the customer that these new Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the P. Lorillard Company?

A. I told them they was made by P. Lorillard Company; yes, sir.

X-Q. 38. And in every case that you told them that you wanted them to try a new cigarette, you told them that it was manufactured by the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir. 2354

X-Q. 39. In every instance?

A. Every case; yes, sir.

X-Q. 40. Do you remember what any of the customers said to you when you thus presented them with this new cigarette and advised them to purchase it?

A. They said they would try them.

X-Q. 41. Did they ever say they would not try them or didn't want to try them?

A. Said they would be used to some other cigarette; they would not want to change.

X-Q. 42. Why did you invariably, as you say, tell them that the cigarette was manufactured by P. Lorillard Company? 2355

A. I do in all cases with a new cigarette tell them who is the manufacturer of it; it takes better.

X-Q. 43. Don't you know that customers generally buy cigarettes without knowing who the manufacturers of them are?

A. Oh, no, they want to know who makes the cigarette. Any new cigarette comes out, they want to know who is the manufacturer of those cigarettes.

X-Q. 44. Have you found it to be most invariably the 2356 case if you do not tell them who manufactured the cigarettes they would not take them?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 45. Don't you think that those who purchase cigarettes are largely guided by the brand on the cigarette package in determining whether they want it?

A. They are guided by the manufacturer who makes the cigarette.

X-Q. 46. They are not influenced by the brand?

A. No, sir, not at all.

X-Q. 47. Don't you know the Lorillard Company puts out a good many cigarettes that do not have their name 2357 on them?

Mr. Cavanagh: I object to your constant effort to bulldoze this witness. This is not a police court.

Mr. Bulkley: You say this on the record?

Mr. Cavanagh: I call the attention of the court to the fact that Mr. Bulkley is leaning over this witness, a rather elderly gentleman, and shouting his questions at him in an unseemly manner, and this is not a police court. Counsel for Lorillard Company objects to that kind of examination. I want you to stop trying to bulldoze that man. Let him an-2358 swer things and treat him right.

Mr. Bulkley: Read the question.

(The question was read.)

A. They do not have to have their name because they have been in the market so long everyone knows the P. Lorillard Company is the manufacturer.

X-Q. 48. Do you think you could tell, if I gave you the names of cigarettes whether they were manufactured by the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 49. In every instance?

A. Pretty near all cases; yes, sir. 2359

X-Q. 50. I asked you whether in every instance you know?

A. Yes, sir, in all cases.

X-Q. 51. Now, who manufactures the Camel cigarettes?

A. Camel cigarettes?

X-Q. 52. Yes.

A. I can't call just the name now.

X-Q. 53. Sell a good many Camel cigarettes, do you not?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 54. About how many a week? 2360

A. Oh, it varies; different.

X-Q. 55. About how many a week, I asked.

A. Oh, about ten thousand.

X-Q. 56. Who manufactures the Mogul cigarettes?

A. P. Lorillards.

X-Q. 57. Do you know the names of any other brands of cigarettes manufactured by P. Lorillard?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 58. Will you state them?

A. Murad, Helmar, Deities.

X-Q. 59. Is that all?

A. All I just think of now. 2361

X-Q. 60. Do you know whether the name P. Lorillard Company is upon the package of Deities cigarettes?

A. I can't remember just now.

X-Q. 61. Do you know whether it is on the Beech-Nut Murad cigarettes?

A. I can't answer that.

X-Q. 62. Do you know whether the name P. Lorillard Company is on the package of Helmar cigarettes?

A. I can't tell you now.

X-Q. 63. Do you know who manufacturers a cigarette called the London Life?

2362 A. No, sir.

X-Q. 64. Did you ever sell any such cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 65. About how many do you suppose you have sold of those cigarettes?

A. Oh, quite a lot of them.

X-Q. 66. Do you still continue to sell them?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 67. Who manufactures the cigarette known as the Lucky Strike?

A. I couldn't tell you.

X-Q. 68. Do you know whether the Lorillard Com-
2363 pany manufactures them or not?

A. I couldn't tell you.

X-Q. 69. Do you know who manufactures the Fatima cigarette?

A. Couldn't tell you.

X-Q. 70. Do you know whether the Lorillard Company manufactures them or not?

A. I couldn't tell you.

X-Q. 71. Do you know who manufactures the Chesterfield cigarette?

A. I couldn't tell you.

X-Q. 72. You don't know whether the Lorillard Com-
2364 pany manufactures them or not?

A. I couldn't tell you.

X-Q. 73. Do you know who manufactures the Philip Morris cigarette?

A. I couldn't tell you.

X-Q. 74. And you don't know whether the Lorillard Company manufactures it or not?

A. I couldn't tell you.

X-Q. 75. And the Pall Mall cigarette?

A. I couldn't tell you.

X-Q. 76. Don't know who manufactures it?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 77. Or whether the Lorillard Company manu- 2365
factures it or not?

A. No, sir.

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 78. How long have you been in the tobacco trade, Mr. Sues?

A. Oh, about forty years.

X-Q. 79. Do you know Mr. Darrell S. Boyd?

A. No, sir, I do not. 2366

X-Q. 80. Whose office is in the Corn Exchange Bank Building?

A. No, sir, I do not.

X-Q. 81. Are you kept pretty busy at your stand?

A. Yes, sir, going all the time.

X-Q. 82. About how many customers a day would you say you had?

A. About nine hundred.

X-Q. 83. Do you have much time to talk with them?

A. Very few—very little.

X-Q. 84. Is any part of the day more dull time than others? 2367

A. No, it keeps going from the time I open up until I close.

X-Q. 85. Has anyone ever asked you who makes the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Beech-Nut cigarettes?

X-Q. 86. Yes.

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 87. No one has ever asked you?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 88. Have you made any effort to remember instances where people might have asked you who made 2368 the Beech-Nut cigarettes or whether they were made by the same people as the Beech-Nut gum?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 89. Have you had reason to try to remember such incidents?

A. No, sir, never had any conversation on that at all.

X-Q. 90. Have you made any attempt to remember such a question?

A. Yes, sir, I have got a good memory. I can remember away back.

X-Q. 91. But you are kept pretty busy at that stand?

A. Yes, sir.

2369 X-Q. 92. Very busy, in fact?

A. Oh, going all the time.

X-Q. 93. When did you first see a package of Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. That is about two or three years ago.

X-Q. 94. Can you tell a little closer than that?

A. No, I couldn't get any closer than that.

X-Q. 95. You can remember exactly, or even within a year of when you first saw them?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 96. Do you know when the Beech-Nut cigarettes were first put on the market in Chicago?

2370 A. I couldn't tell you.

X-Q. 97. Were you selling cigarettes at that time?

A. Yes, sir, we carry a certain amount, because this is a small stand we can't carry everything; get out anything new they send it over and we give it a try-out to see how it goes; put it on our show case so customers can see what we got, something new.

X-Q. 98. But you can't remember when the Beech-Nut cigarette first came on the market?

A. No, sir, I couldn't tell you.

X-Q. 99. When did you first hear of the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. When they sent some over to my stand to see 2371 what I could do with them, to see how they would take with the customers.

X-Q. 100. When was that?

A. Oh, it might have been about two to three years ago; I can't remember just the time.

X-Q. 101. Have you ever discussed with anyone who makes the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. No, sir, I did not.

X-Q. 102. Not even one person?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 103. How have the Beech-Nut cigarettes sold at your stand? 2372

A. At that time they were sold for fifteen cents.

X-Q. 104. I mean have you sold many or few?

A. It did take at first, but after while they didn't take so well, so we didn't keep them any more.

X-Q. 105. Did many people buy them the second time?

A. Quite a few bought the second time, but if a cigarette don't take well you take them off the stand. If you don't get rid of them, they get stale and dry up.

X-Q. 106. Have you heard any complaints as to the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. No, they said it was a good cigarette, but they 2373 rather have what they are used to. Pretty hard to change people on cigarettes.

X-Q. 107. How are they selling now?

A. I don't know what the price is on them now.

X-Q. 108. Are you selling any of them now?

A. No. The other stands are selling them. I haven't got any at my stand.

X-Q. 109. What do you mean by "the other stands"?

A. Breitung has twelve stands in all in the Loop. What takes in one stand won't take in another place. Lot of stands only have cigarettes and cigars and don't 2374 have to attend to any candies or anything like that; give more attention to it.

X-Q. 110. Do you sell many Beech-Nut mints?

A. Yes, have quite a trade on them.

X-Q. 111. Sell much Beech-Nut gum?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 112. Did you ever have anyone come to your stand and ask just for Beech-Nut?

A. No, sir. Always say they want the gum. When they seen the cigarettes on the show case, then they would call for gum, Beech-Nut gum.

X-Q. 113. Ever have anyone ask you just for Beech-2375 Nut?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

Re-direct Examination

By Mr. Cavanagh:

R-D Q. 114. Now, you have stated when they saw the Beech-Nut cigarettes on the show case they would call for Beech-Nut gum?

A. Yes, sir.

2376 R-D Q. 115. What do you mean by that?

A. So as not to make a mistake, hand them out cigarettes in place of gum, you see. Cigarettes right alongside the candy, right close to it, and the gum was right there, and they would say gum or cigarettes.

R-D Q. 116. So they would distinguish them?

A. Distinguish both kinds.

R-D Q. 117. Now, in your cross-examination you were asked by Mr. Bulkley as to what concerns made certain brands of cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir.

R-D Q. 118. What companies, and you said you did not know. While you were under that examination did you really make any attempt to try to remember who made those? 2377

A. No, I did not.

R-D Q. 119. You were upset by the manner of your cross-examination, were you?

A. Yes, sir.

R-D Q. 120. You are rather an elderly man?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cavanagh: That is all.

Re-cross Examination. 2378

By Mr. Bulkley:

R-X Q. 121. Will you now try to cast your memory about and see if you can tell us who are the manufacturers of those cigarettes to which I directed your attention on cross-examination?

Mr. Cavanagh: The question is objected to as indefinite. Let him mention the cigarette brand he wants to know about.

Mr. Bulkley: Will you read the question? 2379

(The question was read)

A. I could not answer that now.

R-X Q. 122. Can you tell us who manufactures the Fatima cigarette? And you may take all the time you see fit in order to give me the name of the manufacturer, if you can.

A. I cannot recall just now.

R-X Q. 123. Have you taken, do you think, adequate time in an effort to recollect the name?

A. I can't remember just now.

380 R-X Q. 124. How much time do you want to take in order to recollect sufficiently?

A. Well, I couldn't tell you now.

R-X Q. 125. How much time do you want to take in order to recollect sufficiently?

A. I couldn't tell you now.

R-X Q. 126. If I will give you more time to think about it, do you think you could recollect the name of the manufacturer of that cigarette?

A. No, not this afternoon.

R-X Q. 127. Well, now, take the Chesterfield cigarette and take what you deem to be adequate time in an 381 effort to remember who the manufacturer was.

A. No, sir.

R-X Q. 128. You can't tell?

A. No, sir.

R-X Q. 129. Well, as to the Helmar cigarette, taking sufficient time—

A. P. Lorillard.

R-X Q. 130. How does it happen that you can recollect who the manufacturer of those brands is, such as the Mogul and Murad, Helmar and Egyptian Deities, that they are manufactured by the Lorillard Company, and you don't seem to recollect who are the manufac-382 turers of these other conspicuous cigarettes? How do you account for that?

A. I never paid much attention to the others.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

Re-direct Examination

By Mr. Cavanagh:

R-D Q. 131. The P. Lorillard Company are large Turkish cigarette manufacturers, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

R-D Q. 132. And those are Turkish brands you have mentioned? 2383

A. Turkish brands; yes, sir.

Mr. Cavanagh: That is all.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

By agreement of counsel for the respective parties to the above entitled cause, the signature of the witness to the foregoing deposition was waived.

X-Q. 70. When you buy from jobbers, does the jobber usually give you an order slip or receipt?

A. Well, not the jobbers. We usually order through the telephone, but occasionally a company representative comes in here, we call that missionary work. If we buy an order through them direct, they give us a copy of the order and then they ship the goods through the jobbers.

X-Q. 71. Does such order sheet have the name of the 2406 jobber at the top?

A. Has the name of the company and then the name of the jobber. The name of the jobber will be on top and the name of the company on the bottom as a rule.

A. I believe I would; yes sir.

R-D Q. 73. Do you remember, Mr. Weiner, from whom you first bought Beech-Nut cigarettes, what salesman, that is?

A. Yes, quite a few would come back for more.

R-X Q. 78. But you didn't sell many after you stopped pushing them; is that right?

A. We don't feature an item for a very long time; just give it a start and let it take its natural course.

R-X Q. 79. Do you sell many of them now?

A. Sell a few; yes; not as much as when they first came out.

R-X Q. 80. About how many a week do you sell now?

A. Be nothing for us to sell five thousand.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

By agreement of counsel for the respective parties to the above entitled cause, the signature of the witness to the foregoing deposition was waived.

2435 WHEREUPON an adjournment was taken until Friday, February 9, 1923, at 9:30 a. m.

Chicago, February 9, 1923,
9:30 o'clock a. m.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

PRESENT: Counsel as before.

WILLIAM H. GETZELMAN, called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, P. Lorillard Company, having 2436 been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Preston:

Q. 1. Will you please state your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. William H. Getzelman; age, thirty-five; residence, 6204 Langley Avenue, Chicago; general manager for Albert Breitung.

Q. 2. What business is Albert Breitung in?

A. Retail cigar business. 2437

Q. 3. How many stores does he control?

A. We have eleven at present.

Q. 4. What part of the City of Chicago are they located in?

A. In the Loop.

Q. 5. And how long have you been manager of this chain of stores?

A. Four and a half years.

Q. 6. Mr Getzelman, could you give approximately the average of the number of customers you have in one of your stores a day?

A. In one store? 2438

Q. 7. How many customers do you have in all eleven of your stores, do you know that, approximately?

A. No, I do not. I could get that for you in a minute.

Q. 8. Could you make anywhere near an accurate estimate?

A. Well, you see, some of the stands run seven or eight hundred customers, and some of the stores run about twelve hundred. Of course, I could get the figures from the office.

Q. 9. I do not think that is necessary. Mr. Getzelman, do you handle Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco in your stores? 2439

A. Well, we handle it in—like where there is transient trade, that is, the corner stores, like you take the stands, they generally carry it. There is no demand for it.

Q. 10. In the stores where you keep Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco, is it a very good seller?

A. Very good seller.

Q. 11. Do you know of the Lorillard Company?

A. Oh, sure.

Q. 12. What business are they in?

2440 A. Manufacturers of cigarettes, scrap tobacco and plug tobacco, cigars.

Q. 13. Did you ever know the Lorillard Company to put out anything except tobacco products?

A. No.

Q. 14. Do you handle a good many Lorillard brands?

A. Why, we handle them all.

Q. 15. Would you name some of the more prominent Lorillard brands you handle?

A. Well, Murad cigarettes, Egyptian Deities, that is, you know, cigarettes, we sell a great number of them; we sell a lot of Climax tobacco, and Muriel cigars.

2441 Q. 16. Do you know what company manufactures Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco?

A. Oh, Lorillard.

Q. 17. Have you known that ever since you have been handling it?

A. Yes.

Q. 18. Do you handle Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Yes.

Q. 19. About how many have you handled of them?

A. Well, we were the first people in Chicago to put Beech-Nut cigarettes on the market. Now, I think that is a couple of years; I wouldn't say for sure.

2442 Q. 20. When Beech-Nut cigarettes were first put on sale on this market, were they prominently displayed in our stores?

Mr. Johnson: Objection by Mr. Johnson to the leading questions.

A. Yes.

Q. 21. Will you state, in your own words, your method of display, how you displayed those cigarettes when you first put them on the market?

A. Well, we made exclusive windows. By that I mean it was a solid window of Beech-Nut cigarettes. 2443

The reason for that was I figured they would sell better, I mean the sale would be larger than if we only had one or two cartons in the window.

Q. 22. Do you know what company makes Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Lorillard.

Q. 23. You have always known that?

A. Yes.

Q. 24. Do you handle Beech-Nut chewing gum?

A. Yes.

Q. 25. Do you know what company manufactures Beech-Nut chewing gum? 2444

A. Yes.

Q. 26. What company manufactures it?

A. I guess it is the Beech-Nut Packing Company, I believe the Cudahy Beech-Nut Packing Company. I know we carry Beech-Nut chewing gum; I guess it is the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Q. 27. Mr. Getzelman, have you ever heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among your customers or others to the effect or which led you to believe that they thought Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes to be a product of the company that manufactured Beech-Nut gum? 2445

A. No.

Q. 28. Did you ever know of a food products or candy company that manufactured any tobacco products?

A. No.

Q. 29. Do you regard gum and tobacco products as in the same or in separate classes?

A. Separate.

Q. 30. Do you think that Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco packages or the Beech-Nut cigarette package look like the Beech-Nut gum package?

A. No.

2446 Q. 31. Do you think it would be possible to mistake either the cigarette package or the scrap tobacco package for a gum package?

A. No.

Mr. Preston: That is all.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 32. Mr. Getzelman, how long have you been in the tobacco business all together?

2447 A. I have been with Mr. Breitung sixteen years.

X-Q. 33. Was that when you first went to work?

A. Sixteen years ago; yes, sir.

X-Q. 34. What positions have you held with him during that time?

A. Why, I started working in the shipping room, and then I was a clerk behind the counter here for a while, in the Monadnock here.

X-Q. 35. About how long?

A. Well, you would call it a clerk or manager of a store for about twelve years. Some take the title of manager of the store and is nothing but a clerk. I had 2448 charge of the Sherman House store for eight years and I had three and four men working with me at the Sherman House store. That is a prominent corner and supposed to be one of our best stores, and my position was in breaking in the men for the other stores, you see. If they would hire a new man, they would send him down to me and I would handle him for a while. If he proved all right, they would take him away and use him in another store, if he was needed.

X-Q. 36. What store do you make your headquarters now?

A. Right here.

X-Q. 37. What is that address? 2449

A. 300 South Dearborn.

X-Q. 38. Is that in the Monadnock Building?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 39. How long have you been in this store?

A. Well, I have been general manager for about four and a half years.

X-Q. 40. And during the time when you were clerk or store manager how long were you in this store?

A. Well, let me see. I was at the Sherman House about eight years and about four here.

X-Q. 41. Before you became general manager?

A. No. I have been with Breitung sixteen years. I 2450 started in this building. This is the headquarters, you see. I started at the other end of the building and I worked when this store was down a little further; we did not have the corner, you see. I worked in this building about four years and then went to the Sherman House. I was at the Sherman House about eight years and they made me general manager and I came back here. This is the headquarters. I was made general manager.

X-Q. 42. Is this on a corner?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 43. What corner? 2451

A. Jackson and Dearborn; on the southwest corner.

X-Q. 44. Are the other Albert Breitung stores in the principal office buildings of Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 45. The down town office buildings?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 46. About how many customers do you have in this store a day?

A. In this store?

X-Q. 47. Yes.

A. This store will run about eight hundred. You see, the hours here are very—well, you know how an 152 office building is, they come in at nine and they are out of the building at five. That is why this store don't run more. A store like this should be open evenings, holidays and Sundays. Take a store like the Sherman, that is open until twelve o'clock at night. That store runs a good many more customers.

X-Q. 48. Have you been general manager of Breitung's all during the time since the Beech-Nut cigarettes first came out?

A. Well, I believe Beech-Nut cigarettes come out about two years ago, and I have been general manager four and a half years.

153 X-Q. 49. Have you waited on the counter much during that time?

A. I do not wait on the counter much; I do once in a while, not very much.

X-Q. 50. To relieve—

A. No. Once in a while I do it to see what the customers have to say. Mr. Breitung and I do not agree on that. He says that is no place for me, but I do it sometimes to see what is really going on.

X-Q. 51. But you have not been able to do it very much during the last two years?

A. No, I do not do it much.

154 X-Q. 52. So you do not hear very much of what customers are saying?

A. You don't think so? You want to travel around with me to the eleven stores. That is why I am manager. I have no assistants. I make all the stores.

X-Q. 53. Do you have much occasion to hear what the customers are saying behind your back?

A. That is what I try to do. I try to see if they are pleased. I try to make everything as agreeable as I can for the customer.

X-Q. 54. When did you first start to handle Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. I believe about two years ago; I wouldn't say 2455 for sure.

X-Q. 55. You think you were the first one in Chicago?

A. I know we were the first one. Whenever there is anything new on the market, see, I like to be the first one to handle it, if I think much of it, because I feel it is a good ad. See?

X-Q. 56. Can you tell me when that was that you first put them in?

A. I say about two years ago.

X-Q. 57. Can you locate it any more accurately than that? 2456

A. I can have the office look it up.

X-Q. 58. I mean, can you say what month or what year it was?

A. I could not say for sure.

X-Q. 59. You cannot remember any closer than that it was about two years ago?

A. I know this much, that it was not in November or December or January. I know that because I would not give them an exclusive window on Beech-Nut cigarettes in those months, because our windows are too valuable. See? So probably—this is just guess work—I started in March or April or June; I couldn't say. 2457
See? But I know it was not November or December or January. I know it was not in those months.

X-Q. 60. Have you heard any inquiries, remarks or comments as to who makes the Beech-Nut cigarettes or as to whether the same people make them that make the Beech-Nut gum?

A. No.

X-Q. 61. You have not heard any at all?

A. No.

X-Q. 62. Have you made any effort to remember any such inquiries or remarks, if any?

2458 A. Well, what we try to do,—See? We do not believe in misrepresenting an article. See?

X-Q. 63. Just answer that question.

Mr. Johnson: Read the question, please.
(The question was read)

X-Q. 64. Have you made any effort to remember such things?

A. I have not made any effort.

X-Q. 65. Did anyone ask you to make a note of them?

A. No.

2459 X-Q. 66. Or try to remember them?

A. No.

X-Q. 67. Do you handle Beech-Nut chewing gum?

A. Yes, sir, and we sell a lot of it.

X-Q. 68. Do you handle any Beech-Nut mints?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 69. Or hard candies?

A. Yes, we buy everything direct in the way of mints, chewing gum, their caramels, and they are displayed on the counter.

X-Q. 70. Have you ever made an exclusive window display of Beech-Nut gums and hard candies?

2460 A. No, we do not display candies. They are in the show case. They are not in the show windows.

X-Q. 71. Whereabouts in your store are the Beech-Nut gum and hard candies displayed?

A. This store don't carry candies, the lease won't allow us, but we have a gum case here on the counter. See? At the entrance counter.

X-Q. 72. Where is that with reference to the cigarettes?

A. Well, we have cigarettes—Beech-Nut cigarettes are not in the show cases; Beech-Nut cigarettes are in the drawer on top of the counter. We display the higher priced cigarettes, but we do not display, you know, the cheap cigarettes like Camels, Lucky Strikes, and so forth; we do not display those in the show cases. 2461

X-Q. 73. You mean like the Beech-Nut cigarettes in the last classification?

A. I would. The cheap cigarettes, Camels, Lucky Strikes, Beech-Nut; that is what I call the cheap cigarettes.

X-Q. 74. Where is the Beech-Nut chewing gum displayed in your store with reference to your cigarettes?

A. Oh, that is separate. We do not have the cigarettes and the chewing gum together, you know.

X-Q. 75. About how near are they? 2462

A. Well, the Beech-Nut cigarettes are in a drawer. We may have a Beech-Nut carton on the top of the counter, see, but it would not be right in with the gum.

X-Q. 76. Where is the gum?

A. The gum is displayed in a show case.

X-Q. 77. At the back of the counters?

A. Yes. You take some of our stands, why, the Beech-Nut mints, you take like the Harris Trust Building, for instance, see? I mention the Harris Trust because we sell probably seventy or eighty dollars' worth of candy and gum a day. We have one end of the counter for the gum and the candy, the Beech-Nut mints, Hershey bars, and so forth; big sellers; that is not in the case, because people come in and help themselves. We wouldn't have Beech-Nut cigarettes or Lucky Strikes or some other cigarettes mixed up with the candy and gum. That is off on the other end of the counter. 2463

X-Q. 78. Did you, in making these Beech-Nut window displays, ever place in with the Beech-Nut cigarettes any of the Beech-Nut gum or mint packages or advertising matter?

A. No gum went in with the Beech-Nut cigarettes.

X-Q. 79. In these window displays I am speaking of.

A. No; no, sir.

2464 X-Q. 80. Have you handled Lorillard tobacco products for a good many years?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 81. Ever since you began in the business?

A. Well, I guess, as far as I know, since I been in the business, why, we have sold Lorillard. See?

X-Q. 82. Are you big buyers of the Lorillard Company?

A. Well, I don't know whether you would call it big buyers. We are on the direct list with all the tobacco houses. See? And for eleven or twelve Stores, I guess we are big buyers. I don't know whether you would 2465 call us big buyers, but we must be pretty large to be on the direct list. They don't put a man on with one store, or two stores, you know.

X-Q. 83. So you have been familiar with the Lorillard products for a long time, haven't you?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 84. You have been in direct relationship with the Lorillard Company for quite a long while, from what you say?

A. What do you mean?

X-Q. 85. Is that correct. On this direct list you are buying—2466 A. We are direct buyers, the same as we are with Beech-Nut chewing gum. We buy direct everything we have; everything direct, you see.

X-Q. 86. When did you first start to handle Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco?

A. Well, that is hard to say. I suppose we have handled it as long as it has been on the market; I do not know for sure. I knew we have had Beech-Nut Scrap for a long time.

X-Q. 87. Did you know whose product it was when you first saw the package?

A. Yes, sir, because those salesmen, you know, make 2467
it a point to say who makes an article.

X-Q. 88. Whose product did you think the Beech-Nut cigarettes were when you first saw the package?

A. Whom did I think?

X-Q. 89. Whose product did you think the Beech-Nut cigarettes were?

A. I naturally would think it was the Lorillard Company when the Lorillard man came in to see me.

X-Q. 90. Do you know the Lorillard men personally that come in?

A. I know some of them. They get around here just the same way as the other salesmen, you know, 2468 that we buy from.

X-Q. 91. You are buying from them constantly and the same men are here frequently?

A. You see, we make up our order about twice a month and it is mailed in. We do not wait for the salesman to come in; it is mailed direct. You see? Because the only time they come around here is when they have something new, you know. They want to show it, and that is the only time the salesmen come here to see me; if there is something new they want to put on the market, they come to see me. Now, the order is made up about twice a month and is mailed 2469 direct. We do not wait for the salesman to come in to give him our order. He don't come in to take the order.

X-Q. 92. Do you know Mr. Wade H. Brown, the district Lorillard man in Chicago, Mr. Getzelman?

A. Yes. This gentleman that was here this morning, you mean?

X-Q. 93. Yes.

A. Yes, I know him.

X-Q. 94. How long have you known him?

A. Well, probably—this is just guess work—about two years; maybe it is three; I couldn't say.

2470 X-Q. 95. How have the Beech-Nut cigarettes sold since they first came out?

A. Well, when we first put them on they went over very good; very, very good, but of late they are not selling.

X-Q. 96. About how many of them did you sell when they were going good?

A. I guess we started out selling about fifty thousand a month. For a new cigarette I call that very good.

X-Q. 97. About how many are you selling now?

A. Well, probably, maybe a thousand.

X-Q. 98. Is that in all your eleven stores you are re-2471 ferring to?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 99. Have you heard any remarks or complaints as to the quality of the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Well, yes, I have; like some say they do not like them, you know; that is about what I have heard, you know. I have heard them say, "I don't like that Beech-Nut cigarette."

X-Q. 100. Have you found that the same customer, as a rule, would come back and buy them the second time?

A. Oh, when they first come out, yes. I say when 2472 they were first put on the market, you know, why, we had regular customers. Must have had, you know, to sell fifty thousand.

X-Q. 101. In your experience in the tobacco business, Mr. Getzelman, have you found that customers ask for cigarettes and tobaccos by the name of the brand? Do they ask for Camels and Lucky Strikes and Union Leader, Climax, the names of the brands, such as that?

A. Yes. Yes, they come in and say, Camel, Lucky Strike. That is generally the way they ask for them.

X-Q. 102. Would you say they sell by brands?

A. Well, I guess that is what you would say, they sell by brands. If a man wants a package of Camels, 2473 he won't say Reynolds' Camels; he would say Camels.

X-Q. 103. That is what I mean. Did you ever, in your experience, extending through sixteen years, hear a man, a customer, ask for Reynolds' Camels?

A. No.

X-Q. 104. Or American Tobacco Company's Lucky Strikes?

A. No. But now, here is a case, here is the La Venda cigar—I don't know whether this is to be taken down.

X-Q. 105. Just answer the question.

Mr. Preston: Go ahead and finish your answer, Mr. Getzelman.

A. I was going to say, you see, there is the La Venda and the La Venga. We have a little trouble on that. The La Venda is our cigar and the La Venga is somebody else's.

X-Q. 106. Those are cigars, are they?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 107. Did you ever in your experience hear a customer ask for Lorillard's Moguls?

A. No

2475

X-Q. 108. Or Lorillard's Murads?

A. No.

X-Q. 109. Or Lorillard's Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. I have heard them ask for Beech-Nut cigarettes, but I won't say Lorillard Beech-Nut cigarettes. But I will say this much that in introducing a new cigarette you have got, the people are so that they want to know who manufactures it. See? Because you can't come out with a cigarette that is made over here on Twelfth Street and make a success of it, because the public won't fall for it. There has to be a big company behind it to put a cigarette over nowadays.

2476 X-Q. 110. Have you changed your mind as to the answer to the question as to whether you have heard inquiries as to who makes the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Let me get that.

X-Q. 111. As I understood you before, you said you had never heard any one ask who makes the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. I have never heard anybody ask.

X-Q. 112. Yes. And especially as to whether they are made by the same people as the Beech-Nut gum?

A. Well, sure, I have heard people say, "Who makes the Beech-Nut cigarettes?"

2477 X-Q. 113. Did you hear any discussion of it at any time?

A. Of course, I wouldn't have very many inquiries as to who makes it unless we are trying to sell a package. Naturally, the name is right there on the package, Lorillard's Beech-Nut, you know.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

Re-direct Examination.

By Mr. Preston:

2478 R-D Q. 114. Mr. Getzelman, did you ever hear any of your customers say that, in their opinion, the tobacco in Beech-Nut cigarettes was not good tobacco?

A. Is not what?

R-D Q. 115. Did you ever hear any of your customers say that the tobacco in Beech-Nut cigarettes was not good tobacco?

A. No. They generally say they don't like the cigarettes. That is what they say; they don't say the tobacco is not good.

R-D Q. 116. You regard it merely as a matter of personal taste as to whether a man likes a cigarette or not? 2479

A. Yes.

R-D Q. 117. Can you state whether or not, during the time that you have worked for Mr. Breitung, you have been engaged in training new salesmen?

A. Yes, sir.

R-D Q. 118. What was the nature of the instructions which you tried to impress upon your salesmen when you were breaking them in?

A. Well, that is a long story. I always want to impress the salesman not to lie to the customers; always tell the truth; not to misrepresent an article. 2480

R-D Q. 119. I understood you to say on your cross-examination that you always made an attempt to be the first to put a new article on the market if you thought it was going to be a good seller?

A. Yes.

R-D Q. 120. Will you state why it was that you made an attempt and did put Beech-Nut cigarettes on this market before any of the other stores had them?

A. Well, I suppose, if I remember correct, the Beech-Nut cigarette come out at fifteen cents, and at that time most cigarettes of that style were selling for twenty cents, and I thought there was a good opportunity 2481 to have a big business on a fifteen-cent cigarette.

R-D Q. 121. At that time were you handling Beech-Nut chewing gum?

A. Yes, sir.

R-D Q. 122. Was it a good seller with you at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

R-D Q. 123. Did that fact induce you to make an attempt to get Beech-Nut cigarettes before the stores in this neighborhood had them? Do you understand the question?

2482 A. No.

R-D Q. 124. Did the fact—

Mr. Johnson: Objection by Mr. Johnson to this question as grossly leading.

Mr. Preston: Will you read the question?

(The record was read)

A. No.

Mr. Johnson: Add to my objection, please. Counsel for Beech-Nut Packing Company objects to 2483 counsel for P. Lorillard Company telling the witness in his question just exactly what he wants in the answer.

R-D Q. 125. Mr. Getzelman, will you state whether or not, if you had heard a considerable number of remarks or inquiries or comments among your customers which indicated that they thought Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same company that makes Beech-Nut gum, you would have remembered them?

A. Well, I would have remembered them. Our class of trade is people that we come in contact with, you know, every day. It is not so much transient trade, and 2484 it would get to me if there was a lot of complaining. Of course, you take like the Sherman House store and Stock Exchange and Borland, they have a lot of transient trade, but the other places, you see, it is a regular trade every day, and when they come they say, "How do you do, Mr. Johnson, How do you do, Mr. Brown." We know them. But the transient stores, why, I would get to it. See?

Mr. Preston: That is all.

Re-cross Examination 2485

By Mr. Johnson:

R-X Q. 126. Mr. Getzelman, can you tell me what office buildings your tobacco stands are in?

A. For instance, the Monadnock, we have a store and a stand; is that what you want?

R-X Q. 127. I just want the names of the buildings, really.

A. Monadnock Building, a corner store and an inside stand. Old Colony Building, store. Marshall Field Building, men's building, stand. Hotel Sherman, store. Stock Exchange Building, store. Borland Building 2486 store. Harris Trust Bank Building, store. Standard Trust Building, store. Corn Exchange Bank Building, stand. The Rookery, I don't know if you call that a stand or a store. It is a prominent building and we sell loads of cigarettes in there on account of so many brokers; it is a big stand.

R-X Q. 128. Are these among the busiest tobacco stores and stands in the City of Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

R-X Q. 129. Do you handle Lorillard products in all of them? 2487

A. Yes, sir.

R-X Q. 130. And have you handled Lorillard products in all of them for some years?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

Mr. Preston: That is all.

By agreement of counsel for the respective parties to the above entitled cause, the signature of the witness to the foregoing deposition was waived.

2488

A. No, sir.

Q. 36. Did I understand you to say, when I asked you a moment ago whether you knew what company made Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco, that you did not know what company made it? 2612

A. I didn't know it unless I took time. I didn't pay any attention to the manufacturers at that time. I know it was not a gum manufacturer; it was a tobacco.

Q. 37. Have you ever heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among your customers or others to the effect or which led you to believe that the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum?

A. No.

Q. 38. Mr. Steidinger, do you sell Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir. 2613

Q. 39. Do you sell Tip-Top tobacco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 40. Do you sell Tip-Top bread?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 41. Are they manufactured by the same company?

A. No, sir.

Q. 42. Do you sell Star tobacco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 43. Do you sell Star Bug Killer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 44. Are they manufactured by the same company?

A. No.

2614 Mr. Johnson: Objection by Mr. Johnson to this line of evidence as being immaterial and irrelevant.

It is stipulated that this objection shall apply, without repetition, to all questions and answers along this same line.

Q. 45. Do you sell Sunshine cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 46. Do you sell Sunshine Biscuits?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 47. Are they made by the same company?

A. They are not.

2615 Q. 48. I show you a package of Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco which is in this case as Defendant's Cross Exhibit No. 1 and ask you to tell me whose name appears on the front of that package?

A. Lorillard's.

Q. 49. Have you seen that name there before?

A. Always seen it there.

Q. 50. What did it mean to you when you saw it there?

A. It represented to me, it represented the name of the manufacturer.

2616 Mr. Preston: That is all.

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 51. How long have you been in the tobacco business?

A. About six months.

X-Q. 52. You never were employed in a tobacco store before?

A. It was not exactly an employment. It was, you know what I mean, helping out here and there is all it was.

X-Q. 53. Are you the proprietor of this store here? 2617
A. Yes, sir.
X-Q. 54. About how much space does your tobacco stand occupy in your grocery store here?
A. Oh, well, I would say about one-third of the store.
X-Q. 55. How many feet long by what deep?
A. About eight by five feet.
X-Q. 56. How many clerks do you have in this store, any besides yourself?
A. Just only in the morning for one hour.
X-Q. 57. You keep just one here most of the time as an extra? One in the morning; is that the idea?
A. Yes.
X-Q. 58. Do many people who come in to buy cigarettes and tobacco ask you who makes the thing they buy? 2618
A. No, sir.
X-Q. 59. Did anybody ever ask you that?
A. No, sir.
X-Q. 60. About cigarettes and tobacco?
A. Well, wait a minute. They have asked me about cigarettes and tobacco; yes, if they were made by the same concerns, that is, in regard to the different brands of cigarettes.
X-Q. 61. Like which ones? 2619
A. Well, for instance, Camels and Lucky Strikes, two of the most popular cigarettes that are made, that is, anyways, here.
X-Q. 62. What people asked you?
A. Purchasers.
X-Q. 63. For instance, what would they ask you?
A. They would ask if those two brands of cigarettes were manufactured by the same people.
X-Q. 64. Did anybody ever ask you who makes the Beech-Nut cigarettes?
A. Beech-Nut cigarettes? No.

2620 X-Q. 65. Did you ever hear anyone ask or remark as to whether the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut gum?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 66. Did you ever try to remember any such instances if they happened to you,—ever try to remember them?

A. I would naturally remember it because it would really bring up a discussion.

X-Q. 67. In the six months you have been in this business you do not remember any?

A. No, sir.

2621 X-Q. 68. When did you first see a package of Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Oh, gee, I don't remember exactly now.

X-Q. 69. Was it before you took over this store six months ago?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 70. When you first saw the package, who did you think put it out?

A. Well, sir, on account of being a smoker, I naturally thought that one of the tobacco companies was putting it on the market. Of course, I didn't know who. But that is one of the first things a customer will say,

2622 if a new tobacco comes in, "Who is putting that on the market now?"

X-Q. 71. Mr. Steidinger, did I understand you to say on direct examination that the trade-marks of the Beech-Nut tobacco and the Beech-Nut cigarettes and the Beech-Nut gum were not the same?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 72. I place before you a package of each one of these articles I named, which are in this case as Defendant's Cross Exhibit No. 1, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 1 and Defendant's Cross Exhibit No. 2, respectively. Now, will you tell me if on each one of these packages there is the name "Beech-Nut" placed in a curve, with a hyphen in between the word "Beech" and "Nut?"

A. Yes, there is.

X-Q. 73. Is the center of the label in each case made up of an oval in all three of those packages?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 74. Is there a representation in the center of that oval of a beech nut in each of those packages?

A. Somewhat similar.

X-Q. 75. Is there a red oval on the package of Beech-Nut gum?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 76. And is there red around the oval on each of the other packages?

A. Not exactly the same kind of red; not exactly the same way. Entirely different. That is a red band upon the package of Beech-Nut gum, whereas the Beech-Nut cigarettes, almost the entire package is red. The Beech-Nut tobacco has red stripes extending in all directions.

X-Q. 77. But on each package there is red around the oval, isn't there?

A. Well, there is red all around the oval on the Beech-Nut cigarette, but not exactly as on the Beech-Nut tobacco.

X-Q. 78. Wouldn't you say there are similarities between those three?

A. Well, there is and there ain't.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

Re-direct Examination.

By Mr. Preston:

R-D. Q. 79. Mr. Steidinger, will you tell me what it is that catches your eye most prominently about the label on the package of Beech-Nut gum?

2626 A. What it is?

R-D. Q. 80. Yes.

A. Well, it would naturally be the trade-mark on it.

R-D. Q. 81. I mean what feature of the trade-mark. Is it the nut in the center, the name "Beech-Nut," the red band around the oval, or what is it that is the outstanding feature of the label?

A. The outstanding feature is, naturally, the red band, because at a short distance the nut is not quite discernible.

R-D. Q. 82. Is there any red band on the Beech-Nut cigarette package?

2627 A. There is no red band.

R-D. Q. 83. Is there a red band on the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco?

A. I wouldn't call them bands. They are stripes, is what I would call them.

R-D. Q. 84. Does the label on the Beech-Nut gum package look to you like the label on the cigarette package or the scrap tobacco package?

A. No, sir.

R-D. Q. 85. Whose name appears on the front of the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco above the oval shaped label?

A. Lorillard's.

2628 R-D. Q. 86. And whose name is written on the front of the cigarette package underneath the label?

A. Lorillard's.

R-D. Q. 87. Had you noticed the Lorillard name on both of these packages before I called your attention to it?

A. Oh, noticed it lots of times.

Mr. Preston: That is all.

Re-cross Examination. 2629

By Mr. Johnson:

R-X. Q. 88. Wouldn't you say, Mr. Steidinger, that there are points of similarity between those three labels?

A. Between the three?

R-X. Q. 89. Yes, the name "Beech-Nut" is on there with a hyphen in all three, isn't it?

A. Yes.

R-X. Q. 90. Wouldn't you say there are points of similarity in those three trade-marks?

A. Well, I can say there are, when you are in close proximity. By that I mean the nut on the wrapper of the gum is so small that in comparison with the nut shown on the package of cigarettes and scrap tobacco it is almost no comparison between the two. 2630

R-X. Q. 91. But the package is much smaller, the package of gum?

A. Yes, sir.

R-X. Q. 92. So everything is smaller on the package?

A. Oh, yes.

R-X. Q. 93. You keep the Lorillard products, do you not?

A. Yes, sir. 2631

R-X. Q. 94. Any others besides Beech-Nut cigarettes and Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco?

A. Well, let's see. That is one thing I have never paid much attention to, as I buy through jobbers. Climax tobacco and Havana Blossom. I don't know, I might have one or two more that I can't think of just now.

R-X. Q. 95. Do you know Mr. Brown, the head salesman for the P. Lorillard Company in the Chicago district?

2632 A. Oh, I might know him and might not; there are so many of them coming around.

R-X. Q. 96. Is this Mr. Brown, this gentleman standing here?

A. I don't know. He told me his name, but I might have forgotten it.

Re-direct Examination.

By Mr. Preston:

R-D. Q. 97. Mr. Steidinger, I call your attention to 2633 the design in the center of the label of the Beech-Nut gum package, which is in this case as Defendant's Cross Exhibit No. 2, and ask you whether there is a green leaf which forms the background of that representation of the nut?

A. There is a green leaf.

R-D Q. 98. And I call your attention to the design in the center of the label on the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco package, which is in this case as Defendant's Cross Exhibit No. 1 and ask you whether there is any green leaf in that design?

A. There is no green leaf on the package of scrap
2634 tobacco.

R-D Q. 99. Mr. Steidinger, state whether or not the label on the Beech-Nut gum package, taken as a whole, looks to you like the label on either the scrap tobacco package or the Beech-Nut cigarette package?

A. Taken as a whole? Well, no.

R-D Q. 100. What would you think of a man, Mr. Steidinger, who could be fooled into accepting a package of the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or the Beech-Nut cigarettes if he wanted this package of Beech-Nut gum?

A. He would either have to be deaf, dumb and blind or crazy.

Mr. Preston: That is all. 2635

Mr. Johnson: I am through.

By agreement of counsel for the respective parties to the above entitled cause, the signature of the witness to the foregoing deposition was waived.

Which were all of the proceedings had at the time and place indicated heretofore.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if CARL A. PAULSEN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is CARL A. PAULSEN, address 534 South Clark St., occupation, owner and manager of six retail tobacco stores, four of which are located in the business section of Chicago known as the "loop." In addition to 2641

tobacco I carry in these stores a small line of confections and chewing gum. In each of my stores an average of 500 customers is served daily. Although much of my time is spent in my office at 534 South Clark St., I visit all my stores frequently and may say that I am in close touch with what goes on in all of them.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco since about 1915, and it is an excellent seller. I have always known that the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco is a product of the P. Lorillard Co., and I have always known that company to be one of the largest and oldest tobacco concerns, since I have handled such of their well known brands as Mu- 2642 rads, Moguls, Egyptian Deities, Turkish Trophies, Helmars, Climax Plug, Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco, etc. I have sold Beech-Nut cigarettes since they first appeared on this market in 1921, and have always known that this cigarette was made by the Lorillard Co. I handle Beech-Nut chewing gum and may say that it is my best selling gum. I have always known this to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Co.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct line from chewing gum and confections and have never known of a food products company which made tobacco products, and have never seen a product of the Beech- 2643
Nut Packing Co. which looked at all like either the Beech-Nut cigarette package or the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco package and I know that Lorillard's name appears upon both the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarette packages. I have never heard any remarks among my customers or others to the effect, or which would lead me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes to be the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I think that a man who would confuse tobacco or cigarettes with chewing gum must be crazy.

2644 Cross Examination.

I have handled Lorillard tobacco products and have known Lorillard salesmen for many years. I am acquainted with Mr. W. H. Brown, the Lorillard District Salesman for Chicago. I am kept very busy indeed and have not much opportunity to hear what customers are saying. They do not usually ask who makes the articles that they are buying. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, remarks, or comments as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or the Beech-Nut cigarettes, and had no reason to do so. When I say that I 2645 have never heard any such inquiries or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries, or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if FRANK GOLDSTEIN were 2646 called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is FRANK GOLDSTEIN, of legal age, address, 534 S. Clark St., occupation, Ass't to Carl A. Paulsen in the management of six retail tobacco stores owned by him, four of which are located in the business section of Chicago known as the "loop." I divide my time about equally among these six stores and myself wait upon customers in all of them. I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco since about 1915, and have always known it to be a product of P. Lorillard Co. I remember that Beech-Nut cigarettes, which I have also always known to be a product of the Lorillard Co., were first put into my store in the Fall of 1921, and that at that time there was an introductory campaign on these cigarettes in progress. I remember that at the same time we put Beech-Nut cigarettes on sale, advertising matter such as posters and window displays were exhibited in all of our stores, being placed there by Lorillard salesmen who were taking part in the introductory campaign. I had a good deal of conversation at this time with salesmen of the Lorillard Co. relative to the Beech-Nut cigarette and nothing was ever said which I could construe as indicating there was any connection between the Beech-Nut cigarette and Beech-Nut chewing gum.

Beech-Nut chewing gum has been sold in my stores for a number of years and I have never heard any remarks among my customers or others to the effect, or which would lead me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut tobacco or the Beech-Nut cigarette to be the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never heard of a food company being in the tobacco business and I regard the two lines, that is tobacco and food products, as in separate classes altogether. I do not think that the cigarette or scrap tobacco packages resemble in appearance the Beech-Nut gum package, and I certainly would not mistake one for the other.

Cross Examination.

I have sold Lorillard tobacco products for many years and have known the Lorillard salesmen for a long time. I have been acquainted with Mr. Brown, the Lorillard District Salesman for Chicago, for some time. I am kept very busy helping Mr. Paulsen look after the six retail 2650 stores. We make the 534 S. Clark Street store our headquarters and I frequently wait on counter there. I do not have much time to talk to customers; not many of them ask who makes the article they are buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, remarks, or comments as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or the Beech-Nut cigarettes, and had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

2651 If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries, or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if L. S. JONES were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

2652 My name is L. S. JONES, of legal age, and my occupation is manager of the cigar and candy departments of the Home Drug Co., of Chicago, Illinois. This company runs four drug stores, all of which are situated in the business section known as the "Loop," and one of which is at 65 W. Monroe Street. I have had this position for the past seven years and keep in constant touch with conditions in all of the stores, myself waiting on customers a great part of the time.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for several years. It is my best selling scrap tobacco. I have handled Beech-Nut cigarettes since they were put on this market in the Fall of 1921, and have always known that both the Scrap Tobacco and the Cigarettes are the product of P. Lorillard Co. I remember that the salesman who first sold me Beech-Nut Cigarettes represented himself to be an agent of the Lorillard Co. and urged me to put these cigarettes on display in all of my stores. He had a supply of the cigarettes with him at the time and also advertising matter consisting of posters advertising the Beech-Nut Cigarette, some of which he put up in the store. 2653

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints, both of which I know to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, the same concern that manufactures the Beech-Nut Peanut Butter. Gum and mints are sold at my candy counter. I regard tobacco and confections as entirely distinct classes of products and have never known of a food products company that made tobacco. I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. 2654

I have handled the Lorillard tobacco products and have known the Lorillard salesmen for a long time. I am acquainted with Mr. W. H. Brown, the Lorillard district salesman for Chicago. I am kept very busy and have not much time to listen to what customers are saying.

I have made no effort to remember any remarks, inquiries, or comments as to who made the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes and whether 2656 they were made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum, and had no reason to try to remember them. When I say I never heard any, I mean I do not remember hearing any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries, or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

2657 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if CHARLIE FRIEDMAN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is CHARLIE FRIEDMAN, address 557 South Clark St., Chicago, Illinois, occupation, manager of retail tobacco store located just outside the business section of Chicago known as the "Loop." I have been in the retail tobacco business for sixteen years. In addition 2658 to tobacco I carry a small line of candy and chewing gum and serve about 600 customers a day. I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco since 1915, and have always known that it was a product of the Lorillard Co., one of the oldest and largest of the tobacco companies. The Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco has always been an excellent seller. I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market, in the Fall of 1921. When I first saw them I associated them with the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco. The salesman who first put it into my store represented himself to be an agent of the Lorillard Co., and mentioned the Beech-Nut Scrap

Tobacco in recommending the Beech-Nut Cigarette. I 2659 have handled Beech-Nut Chewing Gum for a number of years and have always known that it was made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, a concern which I know to be manufacturers of food products and confections.

I have never seen a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package. Lorillard's name is written on both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Cigarette packages. I have never heard any remarks, comments, or inquiries among my customers or others to the effect, or which would lead me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be 2660 a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never known a tobacco manufacturer to put out food products or confections and I do not think that the two lines have anything to do with one another.

Cross Examination.

I have handled Lorillard tobacco products for many years and have known the Lorillard salesmen. I know Mr. W. H. Brown, the Lorillard distrtict salesman for Chicago. I do not remember exactly the circumstances of my first purchasing Beech-Nut Cigarettes and cannot 2661 describe them any more than I already have done. I am kept busy in my store and have not much chance to listen to what customers are saying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, and as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

2662 Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries, or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if D. H. KROPP were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

2663 Direct Examination.

My name is D. H. KROPP, address The Fair Store, Dearborn and Adams Sts., Chicago, Illinois. I am of legal age, and my occupation that of Ass't Manager of the Tobacco Department in the Fair Store. This store is one of the three largest department stores in the city of Chicago and is located in the section known as the "Loop."

In the tobacco department alone we serve about 300 customers a day. For several years past I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and have always known this 2664 to be a product of the P. Lorillard Co. It is my best selling Scrap Tobacco. I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they were put on this market, in about September, 1921. The Beech-Nut Cigarette is a fair seller. I knew the salesman who first introduced the cigarette to be an agent of the Lorillard Co. I knew that the cigarette was made by that company. I had long handled their Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and connected the cigarette with it. Lorillard's name appears written on both the scrap tobacco package and the cigarette package. I have never heard any remarks from my customers or others to the effect, or which would lead me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard gum and confections as in no way related to tobacco and cigarettes. In this store gum and mints are sold at the Candy Department, which is located on the other side of the store from the Tobacco Department.

Cross Examination.

I have handled Lorillard tobacco products for a good many years and have known their salesman. I have known Mr. W. H. Brown, the Lorillard distrtict salesman for Chicago, for some time. I wait on customers a good deal of the time. I am so busy that I have not much time to talk to customers or opportunity to hear what they are saying. A customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarette he is buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. 2668 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if D. A. ROGOFF were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is D. A. ROGOFF, of legal age, occupation manager of the Tobacco Department in the Boston Store, which is located at State and Madison Sts., Chicago, Illinois, and is one of the largest department stores in Chicago.

2669 I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for a number of years and Beech-Nut Cigarettes since the Fall of 1921. I have always known that both these products were put up by the Lorillard Co., tobacco manufacturers, having known of this company and having observed its name on both the cigarette package and the scrap tobacco package. I know of the Beech-Nut Packing Company and that it manufactures in addition to various food products, such articles as mints and chewing gum. I have never heard any remarks among my customers or others to the effect, which would lead me

2670 to believe, that they thought that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes were manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never known of a food concern that manufactured tobacco products, and I regard the two lines, that is, tobacco and food, as in no way related to one another.

In this store gum and mints are classed as "Confections," and are sold at the candy counter, which is located on the other side of the store from the Tobacco Department. I have never seen a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a

Scrap Tobacco or a Cigarette package, and I know that 2671
Lorillard's name is written upon both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarette packages.

Cross Examination.

I have been familiar with the Lorillard products for many years and have known their salesmen. I am acquainted with Mr. W. H. Brown, the Lorillard district salesman for Chicago. We have a very busy tobacco department. I wait upon customers part of the time myself. Not many customers ask me who makes the tobacco or cigarette they are buying. I am 2672 kept too busy to listen much to what they are saying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, and as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. 2674 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if M. S. WINERLACK were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is M. S. WINERLACK. I am of legal age and am the manager of the Tobacco Department of the large department store known as J. Oppeinheimer & Co., located at 47th St. and Ashland Avenue, South Side, 2675 Chicago, Illinois. I have bought and sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about five years and it is my best selling scrap tobacco. I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market in the Fall of 1921. I have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the Lorillard Co., and I know that company to be the producer of such other well known brands as Murads, Helmars, Moguls, Egyptian Dieties, Climax Plug Tobacco, etc.

I know of the Beech-Nut Packing Company and of such of their products as Peanut Butter, Ginger Ale, Chewing Gum and Mints. I have never heard any re-2676 marks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which would lead me to believe, that they thought Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard food products and gum as utterly unrelated to tobacco or cigarettes and I have never known of a food products concern which manufactured tobacco. In our store gum and mints are regarded as confections and are sold in the Candy Department, which is situated on the opposite side of the store from the Tobacco Department.

In the Tobacco Department we handle Beech-Nut 2677
Cigars, which are manufactured by some tobacco concern in Pennsylvania.

Cross Examination.

I have handled Lorillard tobacco products for a good many years and have known the Lorillard salesmen. I know Mr. W. H. Brown, the Lorillard district salesman for Chicago, and have known him for some time. I have a very busy tobacco department and wait on customers myself, with the help of usually two clerks. We do a big business. I have not much time to talk to 2678 customers or to listen to what they are saying. A customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarette he is buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, and as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

2679

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries, or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

2680 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if O. H. OLSEN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is O. H. OLSEN, and I am the manager of a general store located at 5105 S. Halsted St., South Side, Chicago, Illinois. I employ one clerk besides myself and we serve about 400 customers a day. We carry such 2681 articles as tobacco, candy, toys, razor blades, dry-goods, games, pencils, stationery, flashlights, etc.

For the past seven years we have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco. We have no other scrap tobacco which sells half so well as Beech-Nut. We have also handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market, in the Fall of 1921. The cigarette is a fair seller. I have always known that both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes were made by the Lorillard Co. I know the Lorillard Co. to be one of the oldest and largest of the tobacco companies. I handle a number of their brands, such as Murad cigarettes, 2682 Moguls, Helmars, and Climax Plug Tobacco. I am always glad to handle Lorillard's products.

I have handled Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints for several years and have always known that these articles were put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I regard tobacco and cigarettes as entirely distinct lines from gum or mints and I have never known of a food products, candy or gum concern that manufactured tobacco products. I think that anyone who could confuse confections with tobacco must be crazy. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a Scrap

Tobacco or a Cigarette package. I have never heard any 2683 remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I sell Climax Tobacco and Climax Cleaning Preparation; Star Tobacco and Star Razor Blades; Ever Ready Flashlights and Ever Ready Razor Blades. None of these articles are manufactured by the same company.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's 2684 counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled Lorillard tobacco products and have known the Lorillard salesmen for many years. I am acquainted with Mr. W. H. Brown, Lorillard district salesman for Chicago. A customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarette he is buying. 2685

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, and as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries, or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULTED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if A. THOMPSON were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

2687 Direct Examination.

My name is A. THOMPSON. I am of legal age and am the owner and manager of a small grocery store located at 4737 S. Halsted St., South Side, Chicago, Illinois. At times I am the only clerk in this store, but at times I am assisted by one other clerk. In addition to groceries, I handle tobacco and confections and serve about 100 customers a day.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about three years. It is my best selling scrap tobacco. I 2688 also handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum which is a very good seller. I have always known that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco was made by the Lorillard Co. and that the Beech-Nut Gum was put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, manufacturers of food products and confections. I regard food products or gum as entirely distinct lines from tobacco and I have never known of a food concern which made tobacco products. I think that anyone who could confuse gum and tobacco must be crazy.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be made by the same company that manufactured Beech-Nut Chewing Gum. 2689

I handle Tip Top Bread and Tip Top Tobacco; Blue Ribbon Mayonnaise Dressing and Blue Ribbon Tacks. None of these articles are manufactured by the same company.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial. 2690

Cross Examination.

I have made no attempt to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, and as to whether it is made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

1692 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if A CHRISTIANSON were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorilard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is A. CHRISTIANSON. I am of legal age and the owner and manager of a store located at 4142 S. Halsted St., South Side, Chicago, Illinois. I employ one clerk and myself wait upon customers in the store. I handle such products as tobacco, candy, quick-lunch, 1693 playing cards, gloves, shoe strings, shoe polish, etc., and serve about 300 customers a day.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past seven years. It is by far my best selling scrap tobacco. I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market in the Fall of 1921. The cigarette is a slow seller in my store. I have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co. I remember that the salesman who first sold me Beech-Nut Cigarettes represented himself to be an agent for the Lorillard Tobacco Co. and that he had with him in addition to his supply of cigarettes, 1694 certain advertising matter and that he put up some posters advertising the Beech-Nut Cigarette in my store. Nothing that he said indicated to me any connection between the Beech-Nut Ciagarette and the makers of the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum.

I have handled the Beech-Nut Gum for several years. It never occurred to me to connect this product with the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarette. I regard Gum and Tobacco as entirely separate classes of products and I have never known of a food concern or a gum manufacturer to put out any tobacco products.

I know that Lorillard's name is written on both the Scrap Tobacco and Cigarette packages. 2695

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be a product of the same company that manufactured the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum.

Cross Examination.

I have known of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. for a good many years. The Lorillard salesmen frequently call on my store. I do not remember exactly the circumstances of my first purchase of Beech-Nut Cigarettes and cannot describe them any more than I already have done. I do not remember which salesman it was. 2698 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if C. BIASETTI were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is C. BIASETTI. I am of legal age and am the manager of a delicatessen store located at 3912 N. Ashland Ave., six miles north of the business section of Chicago known as the "Loop." In addition to 2699 groceries I carry tobacco and confectioneries. I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for several years and the Beech-Nut Cigarette since it appeared on this market in the Fall of 1921. I have always known that both of these articles were put out by the P. Lorillard Co. I have handled Beech-Nut Gum for some years and have known it to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, manufacturers of various food products and confections. However, I do not handle any of their products except the chewing gum.

I regard food products and chewing gum as entirely separate lines of goods from tobacco or cigarettes, and I 2700 have never known of a food products company to put out any tobacco products. I think that anyone who would confuse food prducts or gum with tobacco or cigarettes must be crazy.

I have never seen a package manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a Scrap Tobacco or a Cigarette package, and I know that Lorillard's name appears written on the front of both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarette packages. I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the

Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes 2701
to be the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I handle Uncle Sam Tobacco and Uncle Sam Bird Grit. These products are made by different companies. I also handle the Red Cross Spaghetti and Red Cross Bouillon Cubes. These products are made by different companies.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and im- 2702

I have known of the Lorillard Company for some years. The Lorillard salesmen frequently call in at my store. My customers do not often ask who makes a cigarette or tobacco which they are buying. I have not paid much attention to their talk about such things.

Direct Examination.

My name is J. W. COREY. I am of legal age and the manager of a store located at 3926 N. Ashland Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, where such articles as candy, tobacco, periodicals, stationery, collars, etc. are sold. This 2705 store is located about five miles north of the downtown section of Chicago known as the "Loop."

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for several years and Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market in the Fall of 1921. I would think that any man who could be confused between gum or mints and tobacco or cigarettes must be crazy.

When the cigarettes first appeared I remember hearing four or five persons inquire whether the Beech-Nut Cigarette and Beech-Nut Chewing Gum were made by the same company. I told these persons that this was not the case and that the Lorillard Co. made the cigarettes and the Beech-Nut Packing Company made the chewing gum. Although I cannot say definitely that four or five was the number of these remarks which I heard, I can state positively that it was not many more than that. Except for these instances, I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect that they believed the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be manufactured by the same concern that manufactures Beech-Nut Gum or Beech-Nut Mints. 2707

I have known of the Lorillard Co. for some years. The Lorillard salesmen frequently call at my store. 2742 factured by the P. Lorillard Co. I know that company to be one of the largest of the tobacco concerns. I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, Beech-Nut Mints and some of the Beech-Nut Candies. I have always known that this line of confections was put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, and that that company also manufactures certain food products, such as Bacon and Canned Food products. I regard food products and gum as an entirely distinct line from tobacco or cigarettes, and I have never heard of a food products company that manufactured tobacco. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package. I think that any man who would accept the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package in place of Beech-Nut Gum must be crazy. 2743

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Cross Examination.

I have known of the Lorillard Company and have handled their tobacco products and have known their salesmen for a long time. Their salesmen frequently come into my store to take my orders. I buy considerable quantities from them. My store is just outside the gate of the U. S. Steel Mills and I do a rush business, especially at certain hours. I am kept on the jump and have not much time to listen to conversation. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, and as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any. 2744 2745

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if HARRY BERNARD were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is HARRY BERNARD. I am the manager of a large tobacco stand situated in the front part of a barber shop located at 706 Broadway, Gary Indiana. At this stand I handle in addition to tobacco and cigarettes, confections and playing cards and serve about 350 2747 customers a day.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for several years and it is my best selling scrap tobacco. I have sold Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market, in the Fall of 1921, and sell an average of about 70 packages a week. I have always known that both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes were put out by the Lorillard Tobacco Co.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and it is a good seller. I have always known it to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

2748 I regard gum and tobacco as entirely distinct lines and I have never heard of a gum or food products company that put out tobacco products. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, and as to whether they are made by the same company that makes 2750

My name is JAKE KURLAND. I am of legal age and the owner and manager of a general store located at 3332 Michigan Avenue, Indiana Harbor, Indiana. I employ one clerk besides myself and we serve about 300 customers a day. I carry such articles as tobacco, candy, 752 dry-goods, soap, playing cards, flashlights, toilet articles, glue, locks, key rings, etc.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for several years. It is my best selling scrap tobacco and I average about 290 packages a week. I have handled the Beech-Nut Cigarette since it appeared on this market in the Fall of 1921, and I sell on an average of 50 packages a week. I also handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and sell about one box of the gum a week, that is, 20 packages. I know that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes are both products of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. and that the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum is put 753 out by a different concern. I do not think that the gum package and the cigarette or scrap tobacco packages look alike and I think that any one who would take one for the other must be crazy.

I regard gum and tobacco or cigarettes as entirely separate lines and I have never known of a food products company that manufactured tobacco. I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be made by the same company that manufactures the Beech-Nut Gum.

754 I sell Chesterfield Cigarettes and Chesterfield Pipes. These articles are made by different companies.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

I have handled Beech-Nut Tobacco for several years and Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about a year and a half ago. I have always known that both of these products were made by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes are both fairly good sellers with me.

2764 I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, which is also a fair seller. I know it to be the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

2808 tobacco or cigarettes for the chewing gum.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for a long time and have known the Lorillard tobacco products for years. I know the Lorillard salesmen, who call regularly at my store to take orders. I am kept pretty busy attending the different parts of my store. I do not pay much attention to what customers are saying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut

Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to 2809 whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such 2810 would have been impressed on my memory.

It is Stipulated by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if C. W. Kirby were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is C. W. KIRBY. I am of legal age and am the owner and manager of the A. L. Kirby Grocery Co., 2811 of Winston-Salem, N. C. My store is located in the business section of the town. In addition to a complete grocery line I carry dry goods, tobacco, pencils, etc. I serve about 300 customers a day and employ one clerk in addition to myself.

I handle Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes. I have always known that both of these articles were put out by the Lorillard Co., and I have known of the Lorillard Co. a long time as one of the largest and best known of the tobacco companies.

I also handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, but do not handle any Beech-Nut Food Products. I know that 2812 these are the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be made by the same company that manufactured Beech-Nut Gum. I do not regard gum and tobacco or cigarettes as in any way related to one another and I have never heard of any chewing gum or candy concern that made tobacco products. I do not think that the Beech-Nut Cigarette package or the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco 2813 package looks like the Beech-Nut Gum package. I would think that anyone who would accept either the scrap tobacco or the cigarette package in place of the gum must be crazy.

I sell Star Hams and Star Soap. These two articles are made by different companies.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco a long time and know the Lorillard products. It keeps me pretty busy waiting on the different parts of my store. I do not pay much attention to what people are saying about tobacco. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if H. L. GRANT were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, 2816 he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is H. L. GRANT. I am of legal age and am the manager of two cigar stands, one of which is located in the lobby of the Zinzendorf Hotel, and the other in the lobby of the Robt. E. Lee Hotel, both in Winston Salem, N. C. I divide my time about equally between the two stands. At each of them we serve about 200 customers a day.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for several 2817 years and the Beech-Nut Cigarette since it appeared on this market. Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is my best selling scrap, but the Cigarette is a very slow seller with me. I have always known that Lorillard made both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarette.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and it is a very good seller. I know it to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-

2818 Nut Cigarette or the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be the product of the same company that manufactured Beech-Nut Gum. I regard gum and tobacco or cigarettes entirely different classes of products and I have never known of a food products, candy or gum concern that manufactured tobacco. I do not think that either the scrap tobacco package or the cigarette package looks like the gum package and I do not see how anyone could confuse the two lines. For my part I would rather handle tobacco from a company that made tobacco only than from a concern that was in the food products business as well.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for a good many years and know the different brands. I am kept pretty busy looking after my two hotel stands and do not pay a great deal of attention to what people are saying. A customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarette he is buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes 2820 the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if I. H. RIDER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is I. H. RIDER. I am of legal age and am a druggist. I manage the Zinzendorf Pharmacy, which is in the Zinzendorf Hotel Building, Winston Salem, N. C. My store is in the center of the downtown section of Winston Salem and I have about 400 customers a day, employing two clerks in addition to myself.

2822

I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes for more than a year now and I sell about 20 packages a week. I have always known that the Beech-Nut Cigarettes were made by the Lorillard Co., and I know of the Lorillard Co. as one of the most prominent of the tobacco companies.

I also handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, which I know to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. It is my best selling gum.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I do not think that the gum package and the cigarette package look like each other and I think that any one who would accept one for the other must be crazy. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the cigarette package.

Tobacco and gum are entirely separate classes and I have never heard of a food products company that manufactured tobacco products or a tobacco company that manufactured food products or confections.

2824 Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for a number of years and know the different brands. I have a busy hotel drug store and have a good deal to do to look after the different parts of it. I never pay much attention to what is said at the tobacco stand.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason 2825 to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

2826 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if ALLISON JAMES were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is ALLISON JAMES. I am of legal age and am the manager of three drug stores, all located in Winston Salem, N. C. One of these stores is in the downtown section of Winston Salem and is known as "Owen's Drug Co." The other two stores are known as the "Thompson Drug Co." and the "Crescent Drug Co."

I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes for a little over 2827
a year past. I have always known that this cigarette was a product of the Lorillard Co. and I have always known of the Lorillard Co. as one of the largest tobacco concerns. I handle a number of their brands, such as Murads, Moguls, Egyptian Dieties, etc.

I carry Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, Beech-Nut Mints and Beech-Nut Ginger Ale. I have always known these products to be made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company and I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be 2828 products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I do not think that the Beech-Nut Gum package looks like the Beech-Nut Cigarette package, and I think it would take a crazy man to confuse gum with tobacco.

I sell Mavis Candy and Mavis Talcum Powder These two articles are made by different companies. I also sell Ever-Ready Matches and Ever-Ready Razor Blades; Velvet Pencils and Velvet Tobacco. None of these articles are made by the same company.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's 2829
counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for some years and know the different brands. I spend most of my time in our downtown store which is on the central square of the town and does a good business. I wait on counter in the dowtnown store for part of the time and give my 2830 attention to all parts of the store. I have not paid much attenion to what is being said at the tobacco stand.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

It is Stipulated by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if F. A. Smithdeal were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is F. A. SMITHDEAL. I am of legal age and am the manager of a grocery store located at 438 Trade Street, Winston Salem, N. C. This store is in the business section and is known as the "Basketeria." I serve approximately 700 customers a day and employ four clerks in addition to myself.

I handle a full line of the Beech-Nut Packing Company's food products and I may say that it is my leading line of food products.

I handle Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes and I have always known that both of these products were made by the Lorillard Co. I also handle Beech-Nut Stogies, which I know to be made by some Tobacco Company located somewhere in Pennsylvania, and which I know is not the Lorillard Co. 2833

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others, to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I regard tobacco and cigarettes as entirely separate classes of products from food products or confections. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package and I do not see how anyone could confuse tobacco or cigarettes with chewing gum or confections and food products. I would prefer to handle tobacco made by a straight tobacco concern rather than tobacco produced by a food concern that was also in the tobacco business. 2834

With me Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is a good seller and Beech-Nut cigarettes sell fairly well. As I have already stated, Beech-Nut Food Products and Beech-Nut Chewing Gum sell well in my store. 2835

Cross Examination.

I have a busy "Basketeria" Grocery. The tobacco and cigar stand is alongside the cashier's desk. My store covers considerable area and I look after all parts of it. It keeps me pretty busy and I have not much chance to hear what is being said at the tobacco stand and never paid much attention to that. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap 336 Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

I do wait on the tobacco counter myself at times, but most of my time is spent in a general supervision of the store.

337 If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries, or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if E. W. HANRON were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defenadnt, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

338 My name is E. W. HANRON. I am of legal age and am a druggist and have for 15 years past been a druggist. I own the drug store situated at 4th and Liberty Streets, which is one of the oldest and largest drug stores in Winston Salem, serving about 1200 customers a day. I employ four clerks in addition to myself.

I handle Lorillard's Beech-Nut Cigarettes as well as a number of other of Lorillard's brands. I sell about 50 packages of Beech-Nut Cigarettes per month. I have always known that the cigarette was made by the Lorillard Co.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and have always 2839 known it to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I sell about 30 boxes of the gum in a month. I have never heard any comments, remarks or inquiries among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I do not think that the cigarette package and gum package look alike. I think it would take a crazy man to accept one in place of the other.

I regard tobacco and gum as entirely separate lines. For my part I would prefer a tobacco product made by a well known straight tobacco company, like 2840
Lorillard, than by a company which produced food products as well as tobacco.

I sell Mavis Candy and Mavis Talcum Powder. These articles are made by different concerns.

It is Stipulated that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination. 2841

I have handled tobacco for some years and handle a good deal of it now, including Lorillard brands, and am familiar with the different brands. I have a good sized and busy store. I wait on customers in all parts of the store myself, including the tobacco stand. I do not pay much attention to what is being said at the tobacco stand.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Cigarettes or as to whether they are made by the same 2842 company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if E. I. FATER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is E. I. FATER. I am of legal age and am part owner and manager of the D. H. Fater Cigar Co. The D. H. Fater Cigar Co. operates a retail tobacco and novelty store located at No. 6 Haywood St., Ashe-

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about five years and Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about two years ago. I have always known that both of these articles were manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others, to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Cigarette or Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both the Scrap Tobacco package and the Cigarette package. 2846

I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package. I would think that any one who would accept a package of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes in place of Beech-Nut Gum must be crazy.

I have never known of a food, candy or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products and I regard confections and tobacco as entirely unrelated classes of goods.

I handle Pall Mall Cigarettes and Pall Mall Candy. These articles are not manufactured by the same company. 2847

It is Stipulated that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

1848 Cross Examination.

I have been in the tobacco business for some years and am familiar with the different brands. from the railway station. As a rule I have one clerk on duty here in addition to myself and we serve about 300 customers a day. I handle such articles as soap, towels, overalls, bats, tops, tobacco, soft drinks, stationery, chewing gum, watch fobs, suit cases, shoes, shots and shells, etc. 2851

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about five years and it is my best selling scrap tobacco. I have sold Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market, somewhere around two years ago. I have always known that both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarette were manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I remember that the salesman who first sold me Beech-Nut Cigarettes had advertising matter with him at the time and that he put up some posters advertising the cigarettes in my store. 2852

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints, which I have always known to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others, to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

As a rule I have one clerk on duty here in addition to myself and we serve about 400 customers a day. We handle fruit, confections and tobacco.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about five 2857 years and Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they first appeared on this market about a year and a half ago. I have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co. I remember that the salesman who first sold me the Cigarettes told me that he was a representative of the Lorillard Co. and that he put up some posters advertising the cigarette in my store. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both the Scrap Tobacco package and the Cigarette package.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints. 2858

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be manufactured by the same concern that manufactures Beech-Nut Gum and Beech-Nut Mints.

I have never heard of a food, candy or beverage concern that manufactured any tobacco products and I regard tobacco and cigarettes as in an entirely separate class from any of these articles.

I do not think that the Scrap Tobacco package or the Cigarette package look like the Beech-Nut Chewing 2859
Gum package. I think that anyone who would accept the gum package for either the scrap tobacco or the cigarette packages must be crazy. Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is my best selling scrap. The Beech-Nut Cigarette is a slow seller with me. Beech-Nut Chewing Gum is a good seller with me, but the Beech-Nut Mints and Ginger Ale sell slowly with me.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if FRED HESTER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination:

My name is FRED HESTER. I am of legal age and am the manager of the Aiken & Hester Drug Co., at 12 Broadway, Asheville, N. C. In addition to drugs we carry such articles as candy, jewelry, tobacco, hair nets, stationery, flashlights, toilet articles, etc. I em- 2876 ploy two clerks besides myself and we serve about 500 customers a day.

I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market, about a year and a half ago. I have always known that Lorillard made this cigarette and I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I handle Beech-Nut Gum and Beech-Nut Mints and I have always known that these were products of the 2877
Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never known of a food products concern that put out any tobacco products and I regard tobacco and gum as entirely separate classes of products.

I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like a cigarette package, and I think that anyone who would accept the Beech-Nut Cigarette Package for the Beech-Nut Gum package, must be crazy. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the cigarette package.

I remember that when I first put Beech-Nut Cigarettes into stock there was a drive on, introducing 2878 them into this market, and that a Lorillard salesman took my first order for them. He requested that I allow him to display posters advertising the cigarette in my store, and I allowed him to do so.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for some years and know the different brands. I know the Lorillard salesmen who call at my store to take orders. I cannot remember who the salesman was who first brought Beech-Nut Cigarettes into my store. I wait on customers in all 2879 parts of my store. I do not pay much attention to what the customers are saying around the tobacco stand.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

2880 If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

2881

SOUTH CAROLINA WITNESSES.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if J. R. SHEDD were called as a witness on behalf of the P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is J. R. SHEDD. I am of legal age and am a clerk at the tobacco and confection counter in Wingfield's Drug Store, which is located at 1443 Main Street, Columbia, S. C. This is the largest drug store in Columbia and in addition to drugs, sodas, candy and tobacco, we carry a varied line, including such things as toilet articles, fountain pens, stationery, etc. In the tobacco and candy department alone I average more than 500 customers a day. 2882

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for over a year and it is the only scrap that I carry. It sells very well. I remember that the salesman who first sold me Beech-Nut Tobacco introduced himself to me as a Lorillard agent. He neither said or did anything which left me under the impression that there was any connection between Beech-Nut Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I put Beech-Nut Cigarettes on sale in my store when they were first introduced into this territory and I remember that on that occasion also, the salesman who sold them to me stated that he was from the Lorillard Tobacco Co., and told me that the cigarette was a new addition to their line of products. Beech-Nut Cigarettes were never a good seller in my store. 2883

I handle Beech-Nut Gum, Beech-Nut Mints, Beech-Nut Lime Drops and Beech-Nut Caramels. The gum is a very good seller. I have always known that these products were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

884 I never knew the Beech-Nut Packing Company to put
2 out a tobacco product and I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I regard tobacco and gum or candy in entirely distinct classes. I have never seen a package put up by the Beech-Nut Packing Company that looked like a cigarette or a scrap tobacco package. I would think that anyone who would accept a package of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes in place 885 of Beech-Nut Gum must be crazy.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for some years and know the different brands. I know the Lorillard salesman who calls in at our store to take orders. I cannot remember who the salesman was who first sold me Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, or the salesman who first sold me Beech-Nut Cigarettes. I cannot remember the circumstances of the first visit of either of these salesmen and cannot describe what took place at the time of these visits any more than I have already done. The Wingfield Drug 886 Store is a good sized store and does a good business. I am kept pretty busy in my section and have not much time to talk to customers. I do not pay much attention to what they are saying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination. 2887

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if SAM CARNAGGIO were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination. 2888

My name is SAM CARNAGGIO. I am of legal age and am the owner and manager of a grocery store located at 1810 Main St., Columbia, S. C. My store is a small one, but we do a good business and as a rule I have one clerk on duty in addition to myself.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about a year. The salesman who first put the Scrap Tobacco into my store introduced himself to me as a representative of the P. Lorillard Co. He told me the Scrap Tobacco was one of Lorillard's brands, and said nothing which left me under the impression that the Beech-Nut 2889
Scrap Tobacco was a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I was then and still am handling a number of the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, such as Beech-Nut Gum, Beech-Nut Peanut Butter and Beech-Nut Ginger Ale. I have never heard any comments, inquiries or remarks among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard of a food products concern which 2890 put out any tobacco products and I regard tobacco or food and gum as bearing no relation to one another.

I have never seen a package put up by the Beech-Nut Packing Company that looked like a scrap tobacco package. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package.

Cross Examination.

I cannot remember who the salesman was who first introduced Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to my store. I cannot remember exactly the circumstances of his first 2891 visit when he offered to sell me Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and cannot describe that visit any more than I already have done. I wait on all parts of my store. I have not paid much attention to what my customers are saying about tobacco.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, or as to whether it is made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not 2892 remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

2893

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if M. L. MOORE were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is M. L. MOORE. I am of legal age and am the owner and manager of a grocery store located at 933 Main St., Columbia, S. C. My store is a small one, where I serve about 100 customers a day. I am located only one block from the Capital Cash & Carry Grocery 2894
Co. and I know Mr. Jefferson D. Hayden, who is the manager there. As a usual thing I am the only clerk on duty in my store.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about a year and the salesman who first sold me this tobacco introduced himself to me as a representative of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. and represented the tobacco to be a product of the Lorillard Co.

He said nothing which left me under the impression or suggested to me that the Beech-Nut Tobacco might be made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I handle a good many of the food products put out by the 2895
Beech-Nut Packing Company. It did not occur to me that the Beech-Nut Tobacco might be the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I regard tobacco as an entirely separate line from food products and I have never known of a food concern that produced tobacco.

I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like a scrap tobacco package and I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

2896 Cross Examination.

I do not know the salesman who first sold me the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco. I cannot remember exactly what this salesman said or did at that time and cannot describe his visit any more than I have already done. I have not paid much attention to what my tobacco customers are saying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, or as to whether it is made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-2897 Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

2898 It is Stipulated by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if S. A. Sabbagha were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is S. A. SABBAGHA. I am of legal age and am the owner and manager of a grocery store located at 727 Main Street, Columbia, S. C. My store is on the same street with the Capital Cash & Carry Grocery Co., and it is only one block away from that store. I know Mr. Jefferson D. Hayden, who is the manager there. My store is not a very large one. I employ one clerk besides myself and serve between 100 and 150 customers a day. 2899

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about six months. I do not know the name of the salesman who first put it into my store, but I do remember that he introduced himself as a representative of the Lorillard Co. and said nothing which led me to believe that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco was made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I was then and still am carrying Beech-Nut Bacon, Beech-Nut Peanut Butter and Beech-Nut Ketchup. It never did occur to me that the Beech-Nut Tobacco might be made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never heard of a food products company making tobacco and I regard the two as entirely separate lines. 2900

I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like a scrap tobacco package and I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect or which led me to believe that they thought that the Beech-Nut Tobacco was a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Cross Examination.

I cannot remember any more details in regard to the visit of the salesman who first put Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco into my store. I wait on customers in all parts of my grocery store. I do not pay much attention to what customers are saying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, or as to whether it is made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other 2902 Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

2903 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if R. L. BURNETT were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is R. L. BURNETT. I am of legal age and by occupation a druggist. My store is located at 829 Main Street, Columbia, S. C. It is a corner store and is next door to the Capital Cash & Carry Co. I know Jefferson D. Hayden, who is the manager of that store.

2904 I have known of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. as one of the biggest of the tobacco companies. I handle several Lorillard brands, including Beech-Nut Scrap Tobaco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes. Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is a good seller with me, but the cigarettes sell slowly. I cannot now remember who the salesman was that first put Beech-Nut Cigarettes into my store. I do remember, however, that he told me he was a Lorillard agent and when he left I knew the cigarettes to be a product of the Lorillard Co. I come into contact a great deal with Lorillard salesmen and I have never known one of them to misrepresent any of his goods to me.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, which is a very good seller. I do not think that either the Beech-Nut Cigarette package or the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package looks like the gum package and I do not think that anyone would accept one for the other. I have always known myself that the tobacco was a product of the Lorillard Co., and that the gum was put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others, to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nu Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarrette to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I regard tobacco and cigarettes as in entirely different classes from chewing gum.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for a good many years and know the different brands, and have been familiar with the Lorillard brands for a long time. The Lorillard salesmen are frequently in my store on their rounds. My drug store is on a corner and I am kept pretty busy waiting on trade. I have not paid much attention to what customers are saying at the tobacco stand.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

2908 Re-direct Examination:

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if A. B. TOMLINSON were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

2909 Direct Examination.

My name is A. B. TOMLINSON. I am of legal age. My address is 142 S. Liberty Street, Spartanburg, S. C., where I own and manage a grocery store. My store is located about three blocks from the grocery store formerly run by Robt. L. Bowen, with whom I am acquainted.

I handle a number of the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, such as Peanut Butter and Beans.

When the Beech-Nut Cigarette was first introduced in this neighborhood about a year and a half ago, two 2910 salesmen called and asked me to put it on sale in my store. They told me that they were Lorillard Salesmen and that the Beech-Nut Cigarette was one of that company's products. They said nothing to me which left me under the impression that the cigarettes were put up by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I bought some of the cigarettes and allowed the salesmen to sample customers in my store. I continued to sell Beech-Nut Cigarettes for several months.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-

Nut Cigarettes to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I stopped handling the cigarette because I had very few calls for it. 2911

Cross Examination.

I cannot give the names of the two salesmen who first introduced the Beech-Nut Cigarettes in my store. I cannot describe any more in detail the circumstances of their visit than I have already done.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any. 2912

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory. 2913

It is Stipulated by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if J. F. Drake were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorilard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is J. F. DRAKE. I am of legal age and am the proprietor of a grocery store located at 148 S. Liberty St., Spartanburg, S. C. My store is three 2914 blocks from the grocery store formerly run by Robt. L. Bowen. I have been in business here only six months but have for a number of years been engaged in the grocery business at different places. Ever since I have been in this store I have handled a number of the food products manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

About September, 1922, a man named Doyle called upon me and offered Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes for sale. He told me that he was a Lorillard salesman and made it plain that both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes 2915 were Lorillard's products. He said nothing which in any way indicated to me that there was any connection between the Beech-Nut Packing Company and Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Cigarettes.

I regard tobacco and food products as in entirely separate classes and I have never known of a food concern that manufactured tobacco. I did not buy any Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes and I explained to Mr. Doyle that my tobacco business was practically negligible and I did not care to increase my stock. I know, however, that both the Beech-Nut Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes are now sold in this 2916 neighborhood.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments anywhere to the effect, or which led me to believe, that people thought either the Beech-Nut Cigarette or the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Cross Examination.

The visit of Mr. Doyle which I have described, when he offered to sell me Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes was not in connection with the introductory campaign on either, but was at a much later date, but this was the first time these articles had been offered to me for sale. I cannot remember exactly what the salesman said or did at the time and cannot describe the incident any more than I have already done. I do not keep much tobacco and do not pay much attention to it.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel that if J. J. BATES were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is J. J. BATES. I am of legal age and my occupation is that of grocer. My grocery store is located at 407 South Liberty St., Spartanburg, S. C., and is only one block from the grocery store formerly run by Robt. L. Bowen, with whom I am personally acquainted. I have been in business here for about fifteen years but have handled the grocery line for the past year only.

2920 Up until then I had carried tobacco and confections. I still handle tobacco, but my main business is in the grocery line. I carry a number of the Beech-Nut Packing Company's products, such as peanut butter, spaghetti, and bacon, as well as chewing gum.

The first time I ever saw Beech-Nut Cigarettes was when two missionary men visited me at my store and wanted me to put them on sale here. They introduced themselves to me as Lorillard's men and told me that the cigarette was Lorillard's product. I allowed them to put up a cigarette poster advertising the Beech-Nut Cigarette, in front of my store, and I remember that it
2921 had Lorillard's name on it. Nothing was said which in any way indicated to me any connection with the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I did not buy any Beech-Nut Cigarettes at that time, but told the salesmen that if I had any calls for them in the future I would put them in. This took place when the cigarettes were first introduced into this neighborhood, in the Fall of 1921. Several times after that tobacco salesmen called to sell me the Beech-Nut Cigarettes. On all of these occasions they made it plain to me that they were representing the Lorillard Co. and never left me under the impression that the cigarettes were in any way connected with the 2922 Beech-Nut Packing Company. Having had some calls for Beech-Nut Cigarettes I put them in stock when the salesmen called on me the second time and they sold well for me until such brands as Camels, Peidmonts and Chesterfields dropped in price. That was in the Fall of 1922 and I have not sold many Beech-Nut Cigarettes since.

I have known of the Lorillard Company for many years as one of the oldest and largest of the tobacco concerns and I have always thought of them as as highly reputable concern. I have handled many of their products ever since I have been in business.

I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like a cigarette package, nor have I ever heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others, to the effect or which would lead me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I regard tobacco and gum or food products as in entirely separate classes.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for many years and am familiar with the different brands. I do not know who the two salesmen were who first came into my store offering to sell me Beech-Nut Cigarettes. I cannot remember exactly what they said or did at that time and cannot describe their visit any more than I already have done.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

2926

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties to the above entitled case, through their respective counsel, that if R. L. WALDROP were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is R. L. WALDROP, and I am part owner of and buyer for the firm of Waldrop & Turner, grocers, located on Coffee St., Greenville, S. C. We do quite 2927 a large grocery business, serving 400 or 500 customers a day, and in addition to the usual line of groceries I also buy and sell some confections and tobacco. I carry a number of the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, such as the peanut butter, beans, spaghetti, and the like, but do not carry the Beech-Nut Gum. However, I do buy and sell in this store the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, and know that we have had it on sale for a number of years past. I have always known that it is Lorillard's product since I put it in this store, for on the first occasion when I purchased it I gave the order to a tobacco salesman who told me that it was a brand of the Lorillard Co.

2928 However, it did not occur to me that a manufacturer of food products, like the Beech-Nut Packing Company, would put out tobacco products, such as Scrap Tobacco or Cigarettes. I never heard of a food concern putting out tobacco and I regard tobacco as an entirely independent business from the food, confectionery, or gum business. I have never heard any comments, remarks or inquiries which indicated to me that any of my customers connected the tobacco with the Beech-Nut Packing Company, manufacturers of Beech-Nut food products and Beech-Nut Gum, nor have I ever seen a package put out by the Packing Company which looked like a scrap tobacco package. I know that the name 2929

Lorillard is printed on the front of the Scrap Tobacco package. So far as scrap tobaccos go, this Lorillard Beech-Nut Tobacco is a good seller.

Cross Examination.

My grocery store is one of the larger grocery stores of Greenville. Both my partner, Mr. Turner, and I are in the store a greater part of the time and wait on customers in all parts of the store as needed. I am not necessarily in the store all of the time and my partner, Mr. Turner, is apt to be there when I am not, and vice 2930 versa. We handle various products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company and the Beech-Nut Packing Company salesmen are in our store at frequent intervals. I do not pay a great deal of attention to what the customers are saying in the tobacco section.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, or as to whether it is made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not 2931 remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

932 IT IS HEREBY STIPULATED by and between counsel for the parties that if C. W. RIDGWAY were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is C. W. RIDGWAY. I am of legal age, and am buyer for the Rogers Grocery Co. located at 318 N. Main St., Greenville, S. C. In addition to groceries I buy and sell tobacco and confections, and I carry a number of the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Com-933 pany, such as the Beech-Nut Gum, Peanut Butter, Canned Goods, and the like, and these products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company sell fairly well.

I recollect that the salesman who first offered the cigarette in this store, about the Fall of 1921, introduced himself as a Lorillard man and he said nothing to me which indicated to me that there was any connection between the Beech-Nut Cigarettes and the Beech-Nut Packing Company, manufacturers of food products and gum. I was then handling the various Beech-Nut food products and I was never under the impression, nor did it ever occur to me that the cigarettes might be put out 934 by the same company that made the food products and the Beech-Nut Gum. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the package of Beech-Nut Scrap as well as the Cigarettes. I have never heard any comments, remarks or inquiries on the part of any persons, to the effect, or which would lead me to believe that such persons thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard tobacco as an entirely different class from food products, gum and candies, and I personally would never connect the Beech-Nut Packing Company with the

Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes. 2935
I would think that a man was crazy who would accept one class of goods when he wanted the other.

Cross Examination.

The Rogers Grocery Co. store where I am employed is a store of some size, although not one of the largest ones. I wait on customers in all parts of the store and do not pay particular attention to what is going on in the tobacco section. I cannot remember exactly what the salesman who first offered Beech-Nut Cigarettes for sales in this store said or did during his visit and cannot describe it any more than I have already done. 2936
I do not know who the salesman was and I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, coments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

2938

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if P. R. JAMESON were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is P. R. JAMESON, of legal age, address 219 N. Main St., Greenville, S. C., and I am by occupation a druggist and a clerk in the drug store located at the above address and known as the Greenville Pharmacy.
2939 We serve about 700 customers a day and employ two other clerks besides myself. In addition to drugs we carry such articles as candy, stationery supplies, tobacco, hair nets, toilet articles, etc. We carry Beech-Nut Gum and Candies of the Beech-Nut Packing Company and also Beech-Nut Cigarettes and Scrap Tobacco of the Lorillard Co. The Beech-Nut Gum is my best selling gum and the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco my best selling tobacco. The Beech-Nut Cigarette is a poor seller in this store. I have always known that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes were put out by the Lorillard Co., tobacco manufacturers, having 2940 known of this company and having observed its name on both the cigarette package and scrap tobacco package. I have also always known that the gum and candies were put out by a separate concern, to-wit, The Beech-Nut Packing Company, the same people who make Beech-Nut peanut butter and other food products. I have never heard of a food product company being in the tobacco business and I regard the two lines, that is, tobacco and food products as in separate classes altogether. I have never seen a package put up by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looks like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package. I would think that anyone who accepted a package of Beech-Nut Scrap

Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes in place of Beech-Nut Gum or candies must be crazy. I have never heard of any remarks, comments or inquiries from customers or others to the effect, or which would lead me to believe, that they thought that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. As a matter of fact, I never heard any discussion about the matter at all. 2941

Cross Examination.

I wait on customers in all parts of our drug store. We are kept pretty busy. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any. 2942

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory. 2943

2944

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if JOHN D. ASHMORE were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is JOHN D. ASHMORE, I am of legal age, my occupation is druggist at the Armstrong Pharmacy, 301 N. Main St., Greenville, S. C., and I am the manager of this store, where we serve about 1,000 customers a day, the store being located in the business section of 2945 the city. I carry a varied line of goods, tobacco, confections, toilet articles, stationery supplies and the like. I handle Beech-Nut Gum and Beech-Nut Confections, of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, and also Beech-Nut Cigarettes and Beech-Nut Tobacco of P. Lorillard Co.

I recollect that when the Beech-Nut Cigarettes were first introduced into Greenville, in the Fall of 1921, a heavy set, dark complexioned man, first offered them for sale here and asked us to put them in. He had with him small cartons of the cigarettes, each carton containing a number of individual packages, and he also had with him certain advertising matter, advertising 2946 these Beech-Nut Cigarettes, which he asked permission to put up in the store. He introduced himself as a Lorillard tobacco man and said nothing that left me under the impression that the cigarette was a product of the Beech-Nut Company, but stated that the cigarette was being put out by P. Lorillard Co. I know that both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes are Lorillard's products and have never been under the impression that they were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company or the manufacturer of the Beech-Nut Gum. I do not think that either the scrap tobacco package or cigarette package look like the Beech-Nut gum package. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both tobacco packages. 2947

I have never heard any comments, remarks or inquiries made by my customers, or anyone, to the effect, or which would lead me to believe that they were under the impression that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes were manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. So for as I am concerned, I have always known that the tobacco and cigarettes were a product of the Lorillard people and I have never been under any other impression.

2948

Cross Examination.

We have a busy downtown drug store. I wait on customers in all parts of the store. I have handled tobacco for some years and know the different brands. The Lorillard Company salesmen call on us at frequent intervals to take orders. I do not know who the salesman was who first introduced the Beech-Nut Cigarettes into our store. I cannot remember exactly what this salesman did or said at that time and cannot describe his visit any more than I already have done. I am kept busy in the store and as a rule have not much opportunity to hear what is being said by customers. 2949

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

2950 Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, that if J. O. SLOMAN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

2951 Direct Examination.

My name is J. O. SLOMAN, grocer by occupation, and my store is located at 111 W. Coffee St., Greenville, S. C. I am the buyer in this store, where we do a comparatively large business for a city of this size and employ five clerks.

We carry certain food products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, for example Peanut Butter, but we do not carry Beech-Nut Gum. While we carry Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco of Lorillard Co., we do not carry the Beech-Nut Cigarette. When the Scrap Tobacco was 2952 first introduced into this store, several years ago, I bought it from a Lorillard salesman, who stated that he represented the Lorillard Co. and said nothing which led me to believe that the tobacco was a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, that is, the food company, and personally I am not sure that I would have believed the salesman had he made any such statement, because as a grocery buyer I have never heard of a food concern making tobacco, and I cannot see what they have to do with one another. I would regard them as entirely separate and distinct classes of goods. I know of the Lorillard Co. and know that it makes well known brands of tobacco products, for example, Climax Tobacco. I have never heard any comments, remarks, or inquiries made by my customers, or others, to the effect or which would lead me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco was made by the same concern that makes the Beech-Nut food products, and, in deed, I have never heard any discussion in this respect. As I said before, I could not myself connect up tobacco with the Beech-Nut Packing Company. 2953

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for some years and have bought considerable quantities from the Lorillard Co. and I have from time to time known the Lorillard salesmen who come into our store to take orders. We have one of the larger grocery stores in Greenville. I am kept pretty busy waiting on customers in all parts of the store. I do not wait particularly on customers in the tobacco section and have not a great deal of opportunity to hear what customers are saying. 2954

I have made no special effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, or as to whether it is made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any. 2955

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

1956 It is hereby stipulated by and between the parties, through their counsel, that if T. J. Sayle was called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is T. J. SAYLE, and I am a retail merchant, having two stores, one a grocery store on Pendleton St. in West Greenville, and the other a dry goods store. These stores are next door to one another and open into one another and I run them practically as one estab-
1957 lishment. On the grocery side I carry a general line of groceries, canned goods, and the like, as well as confections and tobacco, and I handle products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, including canned and bottled goods and Beech-Nut Chewing Gum. I also buy and sell the Beech-Nut Cigarettes and the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco. I also carry clothes, umbrellas and such articles in the dry goods part of the store. This store is two blocks away from the grocery store run by a man Wm. T. Hill at 10 Mason St., West Greenville, S. C. West Greenville may be called a small town and I may say 1958 that my establishment is the leading one in the town so far as grocery and clothing concerns go. I usually employ about eight clerks and serve several hundred customers a day. I have always known that the Lorillard Co. made the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes and I have never associated or connected such tobacco and cigarettes with the Beech-Nut Packing Company, manufacturers of the gum and food products which I sell, nor have I ever heard any comments, remarks, or inquiries made by my customers or, indeed, anyone to the effect or which would indicate to me that they thought that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and

Beech-Nut Cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. As a matter of fact, I regard tobacco and foods as entirely unrelated products of entirely different classes and I have never heard of any food concern that manufactured tobacco. I have never seen a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company that looked like either the cigarette or scrap tobacco packages. I do the buying for this store and the salesman who introduced the Beech-Nut Cigarettes into my store stated that they were Lorillard Company's product and in no way represented to me or left me under the impression that there was any connection between the tobacco and cigarettes and the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never known a Lorillard man to mislead me in any respect. With me the Beech-Nut Packing Company's food products and gum are good sellers. The Beech-Nut Cigarette does not sell well, but the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is a fast seller and is about my best seller in scrap brands. 2959 2960

Cross Examination.

I am the proprietor of the grocery and dry goods stores mentioned. I spend most of my time in them and wait on customers part of the time. I carry many lines of goods and am apt to be in all parts of the store. I have known of the Lorillard Co. for a long time and have handled their products. I have known the Lorillard salesmen from time to time as they come into my store to take orders. I do not remember who the salesman was who first introduced the Beech-Nut Cigarettes into my store. I cannot exactly remember what he did or said at that time and cannot describe his visit any more than I already have. I have not any more opportunity of hearing what customers are saying in the tobacco section than in any other part of my store. I have made 2961

2962 no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

2963 If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties that if F. C. CALDER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

2964 My name is F. C. CALDER. I am of legal age, and my occupation is that of Manager of the Bryan-Wood Drug Co. of West Greenville, S. C. I have been in the drug business for the past twenty-five years and in business here at this place of the Bryan-Wood Drug Co. for the past fifteen years. This store is at the central corner of the town, just where the cars from Greenville stop, and one block back of me is the grocery store of Wm. T. Hill, 10 Mason St., West Greenville, S. C. The Bryan-Wood Drug Co. has a very good business for a town of this size, and will serve probably 200 customers a day. We usually have three clerks, including myself. In this store I handle, buy and sell drugs, sodas, tobacco, stationery supplies, toilet articles, safety pins, hair nets, garters, belts, razors, gasoline and motor oil, and a variety of miscellaneous articles. I handle Beech-Nut Gum, Mints and Chewing Gum candy by the Beech-Nut Packing Company and also the Beech-Nut Cigarettes and Scrap Tobacco of the P. Lorillard Co. The gum is a good seller and both the cigarettes and scrap tobacco are fair sellers. I have always known that the Lorillard Co. made the tobacco and cigarettes and I have never heard any comments, remarks or inquiries made by my customers or others to the effect, or which would lead me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I do not think that the gum and other Beech-Nut confections look like a cigarette or scrap tobacco package. I think it would certainly take a crazy man to accept a package of Beech-Nut scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes in place of Beech-Nut gum or candies. Tobacco and gum, as I see it, have nothing to do with one another. I have never heard of a food concern making tobacco. The salesman who first introduced the cigarette and tobacco into this store said that they were Lorillard now and said nothing which led me to believe that there was any connection between these tobaccos and the Beech-Nut Packing Company. As I recall it is the usual thing for the Lorillard tobacco man when he comes in to my store to say to me, in substance: "I am Lorillard's man, do you want any tobacco?", and the Beech-Nut Gum man comes in and says to me, in substance: "I am the Beech-Nut Packing man, do you want any gum or mints today?"

I have now on sale in my store Velvet Lotion, Velvet Powder, Velvet Candy and used to sell Velvet Tobacco as well. These are all made by different companies. Also, I have Red Cross Talcum Powder, Red Cross 2968 Cotton and Red Cross Castor Oil made by different companies, respectively. Again, I sell Black and White Cigarettes made by one company and Black and White Ointment, Black and White Soap, and Black and White Dental Cream, all made by another company, and I myself do not take these products to be made by the same concern merely because they have the same name.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same,
2969 on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for many years and know the different brands. I have handled Lorillard brands for a long time and know the Lorillard salesmen who come into my store at frequent intervals to take orders. I do not remember who the salesman was who first introduced the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco into my store or who the salesman was who first introduced the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to me. I cannot remember exactly what either one of them said or did at the time and cannot 2970 describe those visits any more than I have already done. I look after all departments of my drug store. I have not given particular attention to the tobacco section any more than the other sections.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination. 2971

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiires, or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

TENNESSEE WITNESSES.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if ROY MCDONALD were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows: 2972

Direct Examination.

My name is ROY McDONALD. I am of legal age and am the manager of a chain of grocery stores, all located in Knoxville, Tennessee, and known as the "White" stores. My headquarters is at one of these stores, located at 1007 S. Gay St., Knoxville, Tennessee. My estimate of the average number of customers served at each of my stores is about 250 customers a day. I have held my present position for one year. Prior to that time I was a student. 2973

Ever since I have been managing this chain of stores, all of them have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco. It is a very good seller. I have always known that Lorillard made the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package.

My stores also handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Peanut Butter.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers, or others, to the effect or 2974 which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be a product of the same company that manufactures the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and the Beech-Nut Peanut Butter.

I do not think that the Beech-Nut Gum package looks like a scrap tobacco package and I think that only a crazy man would accept one for the other.

I have never known of a food or gum concern which manufactured any tobacco products and I regard tobacco and cigarettes as in no way related to food products or chewing gum.

2975 Cross Examination.

I know the Lorillard brands of tobacco and know the Lorillard salesmen who call in at our stores. I divide my time between the different stores in our chain, but spend more of my time at 1007 S. Gay Street store than in any other. I have not a great deal of opportunity to hear what customers are saying in the tobacco section.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, or as to whether it is made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut 2976 Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries, or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

2977

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if W. E. DOUGLAS were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is W. E. DOUGLAS. I am of legal age and am the manager of a store known as "Douglas & Cobble," which is located at 31 N. Gay St., Knoxville, Tennessee, where such articles as tobacco, magazines, quick-lunch, pens, candy, key rings, etc., are sold. As a rule, I have one clerk on duty in addition to myself and we serve about 400 customers a day. 2978

I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes ever since they first appeared on this market, which was about a year and a half ago. I remember that the salesman who first sold me Beech-Nut Cigarettes told me that they were a product of the P. Lorillard Co. and I also remember that he put up some posters advertising these cigarettes in my store at that time.

I have handled Beech-Nut Chewing Gum for a number of years and have always known that it was made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. 2979

When the cigarette first appeared I remember that two or three people asked me whether the Beech-Nut Cigarettes and the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum were manufactured by the same company, I cannot remember who these people were. I am sure, however, that there were only two or three of these instances. Since that time I have heard no remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Cigarette and the Beech-Nut Gum to be manufactured by the same concern. I know that Lorillard's name is written on 980 the front of the Beech-Nut Cigarette package. I have never known of a food products, candy, or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products, nor have I ever seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like a cigarette package. I regard gum and cigarettes as in entirely separate classes.

I sell Velvet Ice Cream and Velvet Tobacco. These articles are not manufactured by the same concerns.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on 981 the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

My store is a long and narrow room and I sell many kinds of articles and have a quick-lunch counter in the rear portion. I wait on customers in all parts of the store myself. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Cigarettes or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had 982 no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries, or comments in appreciably greater numbers than the two or three instances which I have mentioned, I think that the same would have been impressed upon my memory and that I would now recall them.

2983

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respecitve counsel, that if A. R. SMITH were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is A. R. SMITH. I am of legal age and am the manager of the Rexall Stores in Knoxville, Tennessee. My headquarters are at one of our stores which is located at 301 S. Gay St., Knoxville, Tenn. The Rexall Co. owns four stores in Knoxville, and I am buyer for 2984 all of these stores. My stores average about 1,000 customers each a day. I am constantly in one or the other of these stores and spend some of my time waiting on the trade. I may say that I am in close contact with what goes on in all of them. In addition to drugs we handle toilet articles, perfume, tobacco, candy, hair nets, stationery, pens, pencils, etc.

Our stores have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about one and a half years ago. I have always known this article to be manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I have long known the P. Lorillard Co. to be one of the most prominent of 2985 the tobacco companies and I am familiar with many of their brands, such as Murad Cigarettes, Moguls, Helmars, Egyptian Dieties, etc.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints and have always known that these products were put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments from my clerks, customers, or others to the effect or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I know that Lorillard's name is written 2986 on the front of the Beech-Nut Cigarette package. I have never known of a candy or gum concern to put out any tobacco products and I regard confections and tobacco as entirely unrelated classes of products. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like a cigarette package. I think that anyone who would accept the Beech-Nut Gum package for the Beech-Nut Cigarette package, or vice versa must be crazy.

I remember my first order for Beech-Nut Cigarettes was taken by a tobacco salesman who called upon me in my store and represented himself to be an agent of 2987 the Lorillard Co. I also remember that he had some advertising matter with him when he called and that he asked me to put some posters advertising the Beech-Nut Cigarettes on display in my store.

I handle Blue Ribbon Cigarettes and Blue Ribbon Malt Extract, which articles are made by different companies. I handle Black and White Cigars and Black and White Toilet Preparations, such as cold cream and talcum powder. The cigars are manufactured by one company and the toilet preparations by another. I handle Velvet Pencils and Velvet Tobacco These articles are not manufactured by the same con-2988 cern. I sell Camel Cigarettes and Camel Cigars, made by different companies; Murad Perfume and Murad Cigarettes, made by different companies; Red Cross Tooth Ache Outfit and Red Cross Bandages, made by different companies; Mavis Candy and Mavis Talcum Powder, made by different companies; Mary Garden Candy and Mary Garden Toilet Preparations, made by different companies; Ever-Ready Flashlights and Ever-Ready Razor Blades, made by different companies; Ideal Ink, Ideal Brushes and Ideal Perfume, all made by different companies.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's 2989
counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I run four very busy Rexall drug stores. I travel about from one to the other but spend more time at the 301 S. Gay Street store than at any of the others. When I am waiting on customers I am in all parts of the store. I have not paid particular attention to what 2990 was being said around the tobacco stand and have not much time to listen to what customers are saying unless they come to me with a complaint or something like that.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination. 2991

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

2992 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if F. W. GEISS were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is F. W. GEISS. I am of legal age and am the manager of and buyer for the Economy Drug Co. of Knoxville, Tennessee. The Economy Drug Co. owns three stores, all located in Knoxville. My headquarters is at one of these stores, which is located at 521 S. Gay 2993 Street. I am continually in one or the other of these stores and may say that I am in close contact with conditions in all of them. In addition to drugs, we handle such articles as tobacco, stationery, toilet articles, kodak supplies and confectioneries. In each store I employ six or seven clerks and each store serves about 4000 customers a day.

I have bought and sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about five years and Beech-Nut Cigarettes since their appearance on this market about two years ago. I have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I know that 2994 Lorillard's name is written on the front of both packages. The salesmen from whom I bought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes were well known to me as Lorillard salesmen, or introduced themselves as such.

I have bought and sold Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, Beech-Nut Mints and Beech-Nut Candy, all of which products I know to be manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-

Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be pro- 2995 ducts of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package. I have never known of a food products, candy or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products, and I regard gum and cigarettes as entirely separate from food or confections.

I sell Star Tobacco, Star Razor Blades and Star Electrical Apparatus, such as Waffle Irons, Vibrators, etc. None of these articles are manufactured by the same concern. I handle Velvet Tobacco and Velvet Pencils, both of which are made by different companies; 2996 Ever-Ready Razor Blades and Ever-Ready Flashlights, manufactured by different companies.

It is Stipulated that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

It takes all my time running these three very busy stores. I have not a great deal of time to wait on counter 2997 and have not much opportunity to hear what customers are saying in the tobacco sections of our stores. I am too busy to talk much to customers myself unless they have some complaint, or something like that, to make.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

2998 Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if J. BLAUFIELD were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

2999 Direct Examination.

My name is J. BLAUFIELD. I am of legal age and am the owner and manager of a tobacco store located at 524 Gay St., Knoxville, Tennessee. Besides tobacco I sell periodicals, candy, gum, fountain pens, razor blades, etc. As a rule there is one clerk on duty in my store besides myself and we serve about 800 customers a day.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for four or five years. It is my best selling scrap tobacco. I have always known it to be a product of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they 3000 appeared on this market about two years ago. I have always known that this cigarette was made by the Lorillard Tobacco Co., and I remember that the salesman who first sold them to me represented himself to be an agent of the Lorillard Co., and he put some posters advertising the cigarette in my store at the time. I have long known of the Lorillard Co. as one of the foremost of the tobacco companies. I handle a number of their leading brands such as Climax Tobacco, Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, Havana Blossom Chewing Tobacco, Union Leader Smoking Tobacco, Murad Cigarettes, Helmars, Moguls, Egyptian Dieties, etc.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints, 3001 which I know to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package. I have never known of a food products, candy, or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products, and I regard tobacco and 3002 cigarettes as an entirely separate line from food products, candy or gum.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for a long time and know the different brands. I know the Lorillard salesmen who call in at my store at frequent intervals to take orders. I do not know who the salesman was who first sold me Beech-Nut Cigarettes and I cannot remember in more detail the circumstances of his visit. I am kept pretty busy in the store and have not a great deal of time to 3003 talk to customers.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

3004 Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

It is stipulated by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if C. F. Crawford were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

3005 Direct Examination.

My name is C. F. CRAWFORD. I am of legal age and am the manager of the Atkins Hotel Cigar Stand, located in the Atkins Hotel Building, on Gay Street, Knoxville, Tennessee. In addition to tobacco I sell soft drinks, chewing gum, candy, postal cards, rings, etc. I am the only clerk on duty here and I serve about 350 customers a day. All told I have been in the tobacco business for twenty-five years, and for the past ten years have retailed tobacco and confections. Prior to that I worked for a tobacco jobbing house.

3006 I have bought and sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past five or six years and it is my best selling scrap tobacco. I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about two years ago. These cigarettes are a poor seller with me. I have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I have known of the Lorillard Co. ever since I have been in the tobacco business as one of the largest of the tobacco concerns and I am thoroughly familiar with their brands, having handled many of their chewing tobaccos, smoking tobacco and cigarettes.

I sell Booth-Nut Chewing Gum and Booth-Nut Mints, both of which products I know to be put out by the Booth-Nut Packing Company. 6867

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Booth-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Booth-Nut Cigarettes to be the products of the Booth-Nut Packing Company. I have never seen a package put up by the Booth-Nut Packing Company that looked like either a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both the scrap tobacco package and the cigarette package. I have never known of a food concern, or a candy or gum company, that manufactured any tobacco products, and I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct line from food products or confections. 6868

Cross Examination.

I am the only clerk in this store and am kept pretty busy waiting on customers. I have not paid particular attention to what they are saying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Booth-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Booth-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Booth-Nut Gum or other Booth-Nut Packing Company products, and I had not reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any. 6869

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

3010 It is Stipulated by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if Geo. H. Bell were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is GEO. H. BELL. I am of legal age and am the owner and manager of a small grocery store located in the residential section of Knoxville, Tennessee, at 2000 Forest Avenue. Besides food products I carry such articles as tobacco, talcum powder, handkerchiefs, 3011 suspenders, collar buttons, darning thread, brooms, etc. As a rule I am the only clerk on duty in my store and I serve about 150 customers a day.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about five years and it is my best selling scrap tobacco. I have always known that this Scrap Tobacco was made by the P. Lorillard Co. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and it is a very good seller with me. I do not know the name of the company that manufactures this gum.

3012 I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be manufactured by the same concern that produces the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum.

I do not think that the gum package looks like a scrap tobacco package and I think that anyone who would accept one for the other must be crazy. I have never known of a gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products, and I regard gum and tobacco as entirely separate classes.

Cross Examination. 3013

I have handled tobacco for some years and am familiar with the brands. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, or as to whether it is made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination. 3014

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

KENTUCKY WITNESSES

It is Stipulated by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if the parties whose names are appended hereto were called to testify in behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, they would each testify as 3015 follows:

Direct Examination.

I am of legal age and am a retail merchant doing business at the address given in the appended list. In addition to tobacco and cigarettes I handle other sorts of goods.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for several years. It is a fair but not a large seller with me. Hopkinsville is a large dark, loose-leaf tobacco market and most people in this neighborhood use dark tobacco. I have known that Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco was made by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. since I have been handling it. I have sold Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about two years ago. These Cigarettes are not a good seller with me. I have always known that the Beech-Nut Cigarettes were also a product of the Lorillard Tobacco Co.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, which I know to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I do not think that the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum package looks like a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both the Scrap Tobacco and the Cigarette Package. I have never heard of a candy or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products and I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely separate class of products from gum or candy. I would think that any one who would accept a package of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes in place of a package of Beech-Nut Gum must be crazy.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for some years and am familiar with the different brands. I am kept pretty busy in my store and have not had a great deal of opportunity to hear what customers are saying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing 3019

Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

It is Stipulated that W. H. Martin, whose name appears in the above list of witnesses, would testify on direct examination that he handles Velvet Pencils and Velvet Tobacco, made by different companies; Ever- 3021
Ready Flashlights and Ever-Ready Razor Blades, made by different companies; and that E. H. Higgins, whose name appears in the above list of witnesses would testify on direct examination that he sells Favorite Cigarettes and Favorite Medicines, made by different companies, Ever-Ready Flashlights and Ever-Ready Razor Blades, made by different companies; Black and White Cigars and Black and White Toilet Preparations, made by different companies; Velvet Tobacco and Velvet Pencils, made by different companies.

3022 IT IS FURTHER STIPULATED that counsel for Beech-Nut Packing Company objects to above testimony by witnesses W. H. MARTIN and E. H. HIGGINS concerning the different articles sold under similar names and who makes the same, as being irrelevant and immaterial.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between parties, through their respective counsel, that if L. M. LAVIN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

3023 Direct Examination.

My name is L. M. LAVIN. I am of legal age and am part owner and manager of a general store known as Lavin & Conwell, located at 8th and Main Sts., Paris, Kentucky. My store measures about 70 x 40'. I employ one clerk in addition to myself and we handle about 400 customers a day. I sell such articles as tobacco, locks, candy, groceries, flashlights, brooms, buckets, kettles, soap, chinaware, knives, baskets, horse-whips, axles, tricycles, stove plates, fishing tackle, rugs, mops, toys, roller skates, etc. My store is located directly across the 3024 street from the grocery store run by Chas. P. Cook, at 716 Main St., Paris, Ky. I know Mr. Cook personally. I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for four or five years and it is my best selling scrap. I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market. They are not a fast seller with me. I have always known that both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes were manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co. and I know that company to be one of the most prominent of the tobacco companies. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both the scrap tobacco package and the cigarette package.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut 3025
Mints. I know both these products to be manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company and have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never known of a food products, or candy, or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products, and I regard tobacco or cigarettes as in an entirely separate class from gum or confections. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company that looked like either a scrap tobac- 3026 co package or a cigarette package.

I sell Velvet Tobacco and Velvet Pencils, manufactured by different companies, Yale Locks and Yale Extracts, manufactured by different companies; Royal Baking Powder and Royal Shoe Polish, manufactured by different companies; Magic Yeast and Magic Cleanser, manufactured by different companies; Sunshine Cigarettes and Sunshine Biscuits, manufactured by different companies; Blue Ribbon Figs, Blue Ribbon Stove Polish, Blue Ribbon Tobacco, Blue Ribbon Oil Cans, all manufactured by different companies; Argo Starch, Ar- 3027 go Salmon and Argo Peaches, all manufactured by different companies.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for a good many years and am familiar with most of the brands sold in this part of the 3028 country. I wait on customers in all parts of my grocery store and have not paid particular attention to what customers at the tobacco stand are saying.

I have made no attempt to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if EMMET HOWARD were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

3030 Direct Examination.

My name is EMMET HOWARD. I am of legal age and am the manager of a restaurant, located at 722 Main St., Paris, Kentucky. In my restaurant there is a tobacco and confection counter, which is located just at the right of the entrance. I wait on this counter myself. My restaurant is located next door to the grocery store run by Chas. P. Cook, and I am personally acquainted with Mr. Cook. I have been handling tobacco as a retailer for the past 18 years, before prohibition in connection with my business as a barkeeper, and since 3031 then in connection with my restaurant business.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past four or five years and Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about a year and a half ago. I have always known that the Lorillard Tobacco Co. manufactured both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints. I do not know the name of the company that manufactures these products.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or com- 3032
ments among any customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be the products of the same company that manufactures the Beech-Nut Gum and the Beech-Nut Mints. I have never heard of a candy or gum concern that put out any tobacco products and I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely separate class of products from chewing gum or candy. I do not think that either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package look like a chewing gum package. I serve about 200 customers a day and have a good deal of conversation with my customers as my trade does not occupy all my 3033 time.

Cross Examination.

I wait on customers both in my restaurant and at the tobacco and candy counter, which are in the same room. I work back and forth between the two portions of the room. I have been in the retail tobacco trade for many years and have known of the Lorillard Co. and various of its brands for a long time. A customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarette which he is buying.

3034 I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

3035 If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if J. E. CRAVEN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

3036 My name is J. E. CRAVEN. I am of legal age and am the owner and manager of a general store located at 708 Main St., Paris, Kentucky. I handle such articles as groceries, tobacco, quick-lunch, buggy-whips, baskets, etc. My store is located less than one block from the grocery store run by Chas. P. Cook, and I am personally acquainted with Mr. Cook. I employ one clerk besides myself.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about two years. I remember the first salesman who sold me this Scrap Tobacco, though I do not know his name. I do remember that he told me that he represented the Lorillard Tobacco Co. and that the Beech-Nut Scrap

Tobacco was made by that company. Beech-Nut Scrap 303
Tobacco is my best selling Scrap.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and it is a very good seller. I know it to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company and I know that the Beech-Nut Packing Company puts out a line of food products, although I do not handle any of them.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never heard of a food or gum concern that put out any tobacco products and I 303 regard the two lines as entirely unrelated. I know that Lorillard's name is written across the front of the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package.

I think that anyone who would accept the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package for the Beech-Nut Gum package must be crazy.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for some years and know the different brands that come into this part of the country. I have handled a number of the Lorillard tobacco prod- 303 ucts and have know from time to time the Lorillord salesmen who come into my store at frequent intervals to take orders. I do not remember the name of the salesman who first sold me the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, and cannot remember the details of his visit any more than I have already described. I wait on counter in all parts of my general store and have not paid particular attention to what was being said by customers in the tobacco section. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or as to whether it is made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut 3040 Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

3041 It is Stipulated by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if L. R. Bramblett were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is L. R. BRAMBLETT. I am of legal age and am the owner and manager of a grocery store located at 215 Main St., Paris, Kentucky. I employ one clerk besides myself. I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past five or six years. I have always 3042 known it to be a product of the P. Lorillard Co. At the time when Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco was first introduced into my store I was handling some of the food products put up by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, such as Beech-Nut Bacon and Beech-Nut Peanut Butter. It did not occur to me that the tobacco might be put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard of a food products company that manufactured any tobacco and I regard the two lines as entirely distinct from one another. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the Scrap Tobacco package. I have always known the Lorillard Tobacco Co. as one of the largest of the tobacco companies. 3043

I have always had a good opinion of it. Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is by far my best selling scrap.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never seen a package put up by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like a scrap tobacco package.

For my own part I would prefer tobacco made by a straight tobacco company to tobacco put up by a company in the food products business as well as the tobacco 3044 business.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for a good many years, including many of the Lorillard tobacco products. I have known from time to time the Lorillard salesmen who come into my store at frequent intervals to take orders. I wait on customers in all parts of my grocery store. I have not paid much attention to what customers were saying at the tobacco counter and have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who 3045 makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, or as to whether it is made by the same company that manufactures the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

3046 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if LOUIS EVERS were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is LOUIS EVERS. I am of legal age and am a grocer, doing business as Evers Bros., 601 W. Chestnut St., Louisville, Kentucky. As a rule I have one clerk assisting me in my store, and we serve about 300 customers a day.

3047 I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past three or four years. It is by far my best selling scrap tobacco. I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market, somewhere around two years ago. I have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. The cigarette is not a good seller with me.

I now handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and it is a fairly good seller. I formerly handled some of the Beech-Nut Food Products, such as Beech-Nut Peanut Butter and Beech-Nut Pork & Beans, but I no longer carry any 3048 of these products. I have always known that the Beech-Nut Gum was manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, the same company that makes the Peanut Butter and Pork & Beans.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the same concern that produces the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum. I do not think that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package look at all like a gum package. I have never heard of a food products or gum concern that manufactured any to- 3049

bacco products and I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely separate line of merchandise from food products or gum.

I sell Rosebud Matches and Rosebud Cherries, made by different companies; Magic Soap and Magic Yeast, made by different companies; Home Run Sardines, Home Run Cigarettes and Home Run Cigars, all manufactured by different companies; Argo Salmon and Argo Starch, made by different companies; Star Soap and Star Tobacco, made by different companies; Picnic Twist Tobacco and Picnic Mustard, made by different companies; Blue Ribbon Tobacco, Blue Ribbon Cheese 3050 and Blue Ribbon Figs, all made by different companies.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for some years and know the different brands. I wait on customers in all parts of 3051 my grocery store. I have not paid much attention to what people are saying about tobacco or cigarettes.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties through their respective counsel, that if F. ODELL were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is F. ODELL. I am of legal age and am the manager of thirteen tobacco and candy stores, all located in Louisville, Ky., and owned by the J. B. Moose Co. My headquarters are at 518 W. Main Street, Louisville, Ky. The J. B. Moose Co. are wholesalers and retailers of tobaccos and confections. I have been manager of their retail department for the past fifteen years. I am constantly at one or the other of my retail stores or stands, and am in close touch with what goes on in all of them.

We have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about seven years. I have always known it to be a product of the Lorillard Co. We have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market. I remember that the salesman who first sold me the Beech-Nut Cigarettes told me that it was a new product of the Lorillard Co. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package and the Beech-Nut Cigarette package.

We have handled Beech-Nut Gum for several years at all of our stands and Beech-Nut Mints at some of them.

We handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco several years before we first put in Beech-Nut Chewing Gum or Beech-Nut Mints. I know the gum to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company and never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers, clerks or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. 3055

I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company that looked like either a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package, and I think it would take a crazy man to accept either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package for the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum. 3056

I have never heard of a food products, candy, or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products.

I have known of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. ever since I have been in business and know it to be one of the most prominent of the tobacco companies. I have handled a great many of their brands, notably Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, Climax Plug, Union Leader Smoking Tobacco, Murad Cigarettes, Helmars, Moguls, Egyptian Deities, etc.

Cross Examination.

We do a big business at our thirteen retail tobacco stores and I divide my time between the different stores. I wait on customers myself only occasionally at one or other of the stores. I have so much else to do that I have not a great deal of opportunity to hear what people are saying in the stores. A customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarette he is buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap, 3058 Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same or such would have been impressed on my memory.

3059

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if H. A. TAYLOR were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is H. A. TAYLOR. I am of legal age and am a member of the firm of T. P. Taylor & Co. This firm owns and operates four drug stores, all located in 3060 Louisville, Ky. I am the active manager of these stores and my headquarters is at one of them, which is situated at 458 Fourth Ave., Louisville, Ky. In addition to drugs all of our stores carry such articles as perfumes, toilet articles, stationery, candy, tobacco, razor blades, kodaks, etc. I very seldon wait on customers in these stores myself, but I may say that I am in close contact with what goes on in all of them.

We have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past five or six years and it is a good seller. Beech-Nut Cigarettes we have handled for about two years. The Cigarette is a slow seller with us. I have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the Lorillard Co. 3061

We handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints, both of which I know to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my clerks, customers, or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Cigarettes or Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company that looks like either a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package. I think that anyone who 3062 would accept either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package for the Beech-Nut Gum package must be crazy. I have never heard of a candy or gum concern that made any tobacco products and I regard tobacco and cigarettes as a distinct line of merchandise from candy or gum.

Cross Examination.

I divide my time between the four drug stores of the T P. Taylor Co. I have too much else to do to have much opportunity to listen to what people in my stores 3063 or elsewhere are saying about tobacco or cigarettes.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. 3065 Direct Examination.

My name is CHARLIE BRADSHAW. I am of legal age and am a clerk at the tobacco and candy counters in the T. P. Taylor store at 458 Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Kentucky. I serve about 300 or 400 customers a day.

I have been selling Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past four or five years and Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about two years ago. The Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is a good seller, but the Beech-Nut Cigarette does not sell well with me. I have always known that both the Scrap Tobacco and the Cigarettes 3066 were products of the Lorillard Co. I handle many other Lorillard brands, such as Climax Plug, Murad Cigarettes, Moguls, Helmars, Egyptian Dieties, etc.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, and Beech-Nut Mints, which I know to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, comments or inquiries among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I regard tobacco and cigarettes as entirely separate lines from chewing gum or candy, and I have never heard of a candy or 3067 gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products.

I do not think that either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package look at all like a chewing gum package and I would think that anyone who would accept the Beech-Nut Gum package for either the Scrap Tobacco package or the Cigarette package must be crazy.

3070 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if E. R. TURNER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is E. R. TURNER. I am of legal age and am part owner and manager of a corner drug store, located at 2000 Cherokee Parkway, Louisville, Kentucky. My store is located in the residential section of Louis-3071 ville. There are two clerks on duty here besides myself, and we serve about 500 customers a day. I have charge of the Candy and Tobacco Departments of this store and spend most of my time waiting on customers in these departments.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for several years and the Beech-Nut Cigarette since it appeared on this market about one and a half years ago. Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is my best selling Scrap, but Beech-Nut Cigarettes do not sell well with me. I have always known that both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes were products of the Lorillard Tobacco 3072 Co., and I have long known of that company as one of the oldest and largest of the tobacco companies. In addition to Beech-Nut Tobacco and Beech-Nut Cigarettes, I handle many of Lorillard's brands, such as Murad Cigarettes, Helmars, Moguls, Egyptian Deities, etc., also Union Leader Smoking Tobacco and Climax Plug Tobacco. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package and the Beech-Nut Cigarette package.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints. They are good sellers with me. When the Cigarettes first appeared I heard perhaps four customers ask whether the Beech-Nut Cigarettes and Beech-Nut Gum were made by the same company. I told them who made each article. Aside from these incidents I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the same concern that puts out the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum. I do not think that either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package look at all like a chewing gum package, and I think that anyone who would mistake either the tobacco or cigarette package for the gum package must be crazy. I have never heard of a candy or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products and I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely separate line from chewing gum or mints. 3073 3074

I sell Star Tobacco and Star Razor Blades, made by different companies.

It is stipulated that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial. 3075

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for some years. I am kept pretty busy waiting on customers. I do not remember any more than the four incidents already mentioned of people who asked whether the Beech-Nut Cigarettes and Beech-Nut Gum were made by the same company. I cannot describe these incidents any more in detail. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap

076 Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard such remarks, inquiries, or comments in appreciably greater numbers than the four I have mentioned, I think that the fact would have been im-
077 pressed on my mind, and that I would have remembered it.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if WM. H. J. MEYER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as folows:

My name is WM. H. J. MEYER. I am of legal age and am the owner and manager of a small retail store lo-
078 cated at 1,605 Bardstown Ave., Louisville, Kentucky. I handle canned vegetables, confections, sodas and tobacco. My store is located in the residential section of Louisville. As a rule I am the only clerk on duty here and I serve about 200 customers a day.

I have sold Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about two years ago. I remember that the salesman who first sold me these cigarettes told me that he was a representative of the Lorillard Co. and that he had advertising matter with him at the time, and put up some posters advertising Beech-Nut Cigarettes in my store.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, Beech-Nut Beanut But- 3079 ter, Beech-Nut Pork & Beans and Beech-Nut Ginger Ale. All of these products I know to be made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company that looked like either a cigarette package or a scrap tobacco package. I have never heard of a food products or gum company that manufactured any to- 3080
bacco products and I regard the tobacco industry as an entirely separate business from food products or gum.

During the war I worked in an ammunition factory in Dayton, Ohio. While I was thus occupied, I was a chewer of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco. It was very popular among the workers there. I knew then that the Lorillard Co. was the maker of the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco.

I sell Chesterfield Cigarettes and Chesterfield Cigars made by different companies.

It is Stipulated that objection is made by plaintiff's 3081

I do not remember the name of the salesman who first introduced Beech-Nut Cigarettes to my store. I cannot remember exactly the circumstances of his first visit and cannot describe them any more than I have already done. I have not paid particular attention to what people are saying about tobacco or cigarettes.

3082 I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. I have never heard of a gum concern that made any tobacco products and I do not think that chewing gum has anything whatever to do 3086 with either tobacco or cigarettes. I do not think that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package look at all like a chewing gum package and I think that only a crazy person would accept either the Scrap Tobacco package or the Cigarette package for the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum package.

We have sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past five years and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market. The Scrap Tobacco is a very good seller, but the Cigarette does not sell well with us.

I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package and the Beech-Nut Cigarette package. I have long known of Lorillard as one of the oldest and largest tobacco companies.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, Beech-Nut Mints and Beech-Nut Ginger Ale. I know that all of these products are manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I remember that in all my experience I have heard about six people ask whether either the Beech-
3125 Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes were made by the same company that manufactures the Beech-Nut Gum and Beech-Nut Mints. I think that this occurred soon after the cigarettes appeared on the market. I cannot say positively whether or not all of these inquiries were made after the cigarette appeared on the market or not. I know that I have heard no such inquiries since shortly after the appearance of the cigarette. Of course I told the people that asked me this question that the Beech-Nut Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes were the product of the Lorillard Co. and that the other articles were made by the Beech-3126 Nut Packing Company. I can state positively that I have never heard more than ten such remarks and I do not think it was more than six.

Except for these instances I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Cigarettes or Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. Direct Examination.

My name is J. L. SHINFESSEL. I am of legal age and am the manager of the tobacco and confection department at the Reo Bus waiting station at Short & 3136 Upper Sts., Lexington, Kentucky. This waiting station is a room which measures about 50x50'. My tobacco and confection stand extends across one side of this room. I wait on these counters myself and as a natural thing in such an establishment as this I have a good deal of conversation with my customers.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about five years. It is my best selling scrap. I have always known it to be a product of the Lorillard Co. I have sold Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about two years ago and have always known that this product was also made by the Lorillard To-3137 bacco Co. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both the Scrap Tobacco and the Cigarette packages.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, which I know to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I do not think that either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package looks at all like a 3138 gum package and I think that anyone who would accept either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette in place of the Beech-Nut Gum must be crazy.

I have never known of a confection or gum concern which put out any tobacco products and I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely separate line from gum or confections.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for a good many years and know the different brands. I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut 3139

Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would 3140 have been impressed on my memory.

It is Stipulated by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if the men whose names and addresses here appear, to wit:

E. W. Spears, Retail Tobacconist, Fayette Bank Bldg., Lexington, Ky.
L. D. Armstead, Druggist, Mill & Short Sts., Lexington, Ky.
C. E. McCarthy, Druggist, 309 W. Main St. Lexington, Ky. 3141
R. V. Harp, Grocer, 316-318 W. Short St., Lexington, Ky.

were called as witnesses on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, they would each testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

I am of legal age, and have for some years retailed tobacco along with other lines of merchandise. I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for several years. It is a very good seller. I have handled Beech-Nut Ciga-3142 rettes for about two years. These cigarettes do not sell well with me. I have always known that both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes were manufactured by the Lorillard Co. I know the Lorillard Tobacco Co. to be one of the oldest and largest of the tobacco companies.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Candies, and I know that these products are made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never heard any inquiries, comments or remarks from my customers or others, to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-3143 Nut Cigarettes to be manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I do not think that either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package look like the Gum package. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the Scrap Tobacco and Cigarette packages. I would think that anyone who would accept either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes in the place of Beech-Nut Chewing Gum must be crazy.

I have never heard of a candy or gum concern which put out any tobacco products, and I regard tobacco and 3144 cigarettes as a distinct line of merchandise from gum and candies.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for some years and am familiar with the different brands. I am kept pretty busy in my store and have not paid much attention to what people were saying about tobacco or cigarettes.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the

Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any. 3145

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS FURTER STIPULATED that R. V. HARP, whose, name appears in the above list of witnesses, would testify in addition on direct examination that he sells Camel Cigarettes and Camel Dates, made by different companies; Star Hams and Star Milk and Star Tobacco, all put up by different companies. 3146

IT IS FURTER STIPULATED that counsel for Beech-Nut Packing Company objects to the testimony by the witness R. V. HARP in regard to Camel Cigarettes and dates and Star Hams, Milk and Tobacco, and as to who makes same, as irrelevant and immaterial.

PENNSYLVANIA WITNESSES

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if P. J. ROSSWOG were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is P. J. ROSSWOG. I am of legal age and am a retail tobacco merchant, doing business at 960 Liberty Ave., Pittsburg, Pa. I have been in the retail 3148 tobacco business for 45 years and have been in this same store for more than twenty years. I have two clerks on duty here besides myself and serve about 2,000 customers a day. My store measures about 50x30' and is in the heart of the business section of Pittsburg.

I sell Lorillard's Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and have sold it for four or five years. I know that Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is a product of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. and I have known of the Lorillard Co. ever since I have been in business and have handled some of their brands all that time. I now handle such Lorillard brands as Climax Plug Tobacco, Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, Ha-3149 vana Blossom Scrap Tobacco, Union Leader Smoking Tobacco, Yacht Club Smoking Tobacco, Egyptian Dieties Cigarettes, Murads, Moguls, Helmars, London Life, etc., and a good many others. I have handled the Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about one and a half years ago and have always known that they were a product of the Lorillard Co. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the Beech-Nut Cigarette package and the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints, which I know to be products of the Beech-Nut 3150 Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is by far my best selling scrap and has been for a number of years. When I first saw the Beech-Nut Cigarette I naturally associated it with the Scrap Tobacco which I have long known as a Lorillard product.

I have never heard of a candy or gum concern that 3151 made any tobacco products. I regard tobacco and cigarettes as in no way connected with food, candy, or gum. I look upon tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely separate line from either gum or candy. I do not think that either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package looks like a chewing gum package and I would think that anyone who would accept either the Scrap Tobacco or the Cigarette package for the Beech-Nut Gum package must be crazy.

I sell Chesterfield Cigarettes and Chesterfield Pipes. These articles are made by different companies.

I might further say that as far back as 1900 I sold a 3152 scrap tobacco which bore the name "Beechnut." This old Beech-Nut Scrap was originally put out by Harry Weissinger Tobacco Co., and the package bore the picture of a squirrel, together with the name "Beechnut," and as I recall it, the name of the Weissinger concern or its successor. I sold this Weissinger Beechnut Tobacco for several years following 1900, but did not keep or sell it after 1910.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same 3153 on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled large quantities of Lorillard Co. tobacco products and have for many years known the Lorillard salesmen in the Pittsburg district who are frequently in my store to take orders. I have known Mr. Hirsh, the Lorillard District Manager for the Pittsburg District for some years. I do not remember the circum-

3154 stances of the first time when Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes were introduced into my store, and I cannot remember the name of the salesman from whom I made the first purchase in either case. I have a busy downtown tobacco store and am kept very busy waiting on customers. I have made no attempt to remember any remarks, inquiries, or comments as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, and had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

I do not remember exactly when I first began to handle
3155 the Weissinger Beech-Nut tobacco or exactly when I made my last sale of it.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, frequently, or in appreciable numbers, I think that the same would have been impressed on my memory and that I would recall them.

3156

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if M. BORENSTEIN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is M. BORENSTEIN. I am of legal age and have been in the retail tobacco business at 120 East Ohio St., North Side, Pittsburg, Pa., for the past fifteen years. In addition to tobacco I now handle candy, periodicals, clocks, toilet articles, stationery, etc. As a rule I have 3157 one clerk on duty in my store besides myself and we serve about 700 customers a day.

I have handled Lorillard's Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco since it came on the market several years ago. For a number of years past Lorillard's Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco has been by far my best selling scrap. I do not sell half as much of any other scrap tobacco as I do of the Beech-Nut. I have known of the Lorillard Co. as one of the largest and most important of the tobacco companies, ever since I have been in the tobacco business. I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about two years ago and have 3158 always known that the Lorillard Co. manufactured them.

I handle Beech-Nut Chewing Gum which I know to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I regard gum as in no way related to tobacco and cigarettes. I have never known of a candy or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products. I do not think that either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco pack- 3159 age or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package looks at all like a Chewing Gum package and I would think that anyone who would accept the Scrap Tobacco package or the Cigarette package in place of the Beech-Nut Gum package must be crazy.

I sell Chesterfield Cigarettes and Chesterfield Pipes, manufactured by different companies; Star Tobacco and Star Blades, made by different companies; Velvet Tobacco and Velvet Pencils, made by different companies; Every-Ready Razor Blades and Ever-Ready Flashlights, made by different companies.

160 I might further say that as far back as 1900 I sold a scrap tobacco which bore the name "Beechnut." This old Beechnut Scrap was originally put out by Harry Weissinger Tobacco Co., and the package bore *the picture of a squirrel, together with the name "Beech-*nut," and as I recall it, the name of the Weissinger concern or its successor. I sold this Weissinger Beechnut Tobacco for several years following 1900, but did not keep or sell it after 1910.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different 161 goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled considerable quantities of tobacco products of the Lorillard Co., and have for many years known the Lorillard salesmen in the Pittsburg district who have called in at my store. I have known the Lorillard District Manager for Pittsburg, Mr. Hirsh, for some time. I keep other lines of goods besides tobacco, and am kept pretty busy waiting on the differ-
162 ent parts of the store. I have not had a great deal of opportunity to listen to what tobacco customers are saying. I have made no attempt to remember any remarks, inquiries or comments as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, and had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

I do not remember exactly when I first began to handle the old Weissinger Beechnut Tobacco or when I made my last sale of it.

Re-direct Examination. 3163

If I had heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette to be manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, frequently, or in appreciable numbers, I think that the same would have been impressed on my memory, and that I would recall them.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if A. J. FLEISCHAUER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows: 3164

Direct Examination.

My name is A. J. FLEISCHAUER. I am of legal age and am the manager of a tobacco store located in the heart of the business section of Pittsburg, Pa., at 326 Federal Street. I have, as a rule, one clerk on duty here in addition to myself and we serve about 800 customers a day.

I handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco since 1915 and have always known it to be manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package. Beech-Nut Scrap is by far my best selling scrap tobacco. I believe that I sell on an average of about 288 packages a week. I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market in the fall of 1921. I do not have a very good sale for these cigarettes. I remember that the salesman who first sold me Beech-Nut Cigarettes represented himself to be an agent of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I naturally associated the Beech-Nut Cigarette with the Beech-Nut 3165 3166 Scrap Tobacco, which has been one of my leading brands for several years.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, Beech-Nut Mints and Beech-Nut Caramels, all of which I know to be made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. 3167 never known of a candy or gum concern that made any tobacco products. I sell Velvet Tobacco and Velvet Pencils, made by different companies; Chesterfield Pipes and Chesterfield Cigarettes, made by different companies; Ever-Ready Razor Blades and Ever-Ready Flashlights, made 3168 by different companies; Star Tobacco and Star Razor Blades, made by different companies.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I sell Mogul Playing Cards and Mogul Cigarettes, manufactured by different companies.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for many years and have bought large quantities of brands made by the Lorillard Co. I have known the Lorillard salesmen in this district and have known Mr. Hirsh, the District Sales Manager for Pittsburg, for some years. It keeps me very busy 3208 looking after the fourteen stores and I have not a great deal of opportunity to listen to what customers are saying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

3209 Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such remarks, inquiries or comments in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if A. KIDNER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

3210 Direct Examination.

My name is A. KIDNER. I am of legal age and am a retail merchant doing business at the corner of Penn and Hyland Aves., E. Liberty, Pittsburg, Pa. I sell such articles as candy, tobacco, novelties and periodicals. I employ one clerk besides myself and we serve between 400 and 500 customers a day. I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco since 1915 and I have always known this to be a product of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. It is my best selling scrap tobacco. I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes for the past month. The salesman who first sold me these cigarettes a month ago told me that he was a representative of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. and in 3211 recommending the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to me he called my attention to the fact that it was made by the Lorillard Co., and spoke of that company as the manufacturer of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, also mentioning some other Lorillard brands.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, which I know to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I have never 3212 heard of a candy or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products and I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct line from gum or confections.

I do not think that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package or the Beech-Nut Cigarette package look at all like a chewing gum package and I regard the two lines of merchandise as entirely separate from one another.

I sell Velvet Tobacco and Velvet Pencils, made by different companies.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's 3213
counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I keep a varied line of articles in my store. I have handled tobacco for some years. I have known from time to time the Lorillard salesmen who call in at my store to take orders. I am kept pretty busy attending the different parts of my store and have not much time to pay attention to what people are saying around the tobacco section.

3214 I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. I have sold Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about two years ago and have always known that these cigarettes were manufactured by the Lorillard Co. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both the Scrap Tobacco package and the Cigarette package.

I have never heard more than four or five remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I told the four or five persons who did inquire of me that Lorillard made the tobacco and the cigarettes and that the Beech-Nut Packing Company made the gum. I regard chewing gum and tobacco as entirely separate classes of goods. I have never heard of a gum or confection concern that manufactured any tobacco products.

I sell Ever-Ready Razor Blades and Every-Ready Flashlights, made by different companies; Chesterfield Cigars and Chesterfield Pipes, made by different companies; Mogul Cigarettes and Mogul Playing Cards, made by different companies.

I cannot remember who these people were or give any more details as to what occurred at the respective times. I have made no particular effort to remember such inquiries, remarks or occurrences.

When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

3274 Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if THOMAS P. HAYES were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

3275 Direct Examination.

My name is THOMAS P. HAYES. I am of legal age and am the manager of the Jas. B. McKeen Cigar Co. My headquarters are at 1209 Market St., Wheeling, W. Va., where one of the cigar stores of the McKee Cigar Co. is located. Besides this store my company owns cigar stands at the Windsor Hotel, Wheeling, W. Va., Pt. Cumberland Hotel, Cumberland, Md., Waldo Hotel, Clarksburg, W. Va., and at the Frederick Hotel. Huntington, W. Va. I spend most of my time in Wheeling and am in close contact with what goes on in 3276 the store at 1209 Market St., and at the cigar stand in the Windsor Hotel, Wheeling. I have held my present position for the past eight years. I have bought and sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco since 1915, and Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they first appeared on the market about two years ago. I know both of these articles to be manufactured by the Lorillard Co. and I have long known that company to be one of the oldest and largest of the tobacco companies. I handle a great many of Lorillard's brands, the leaders among which at present are Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, Climax Plug Tobacco,

Union Leader Smoking Tobacco, Murad Cigarettes, 3277
Helmars, Moguls, Egyptian Dieties, etc.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints and I know that these articles are put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers, clerks, or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Cigarettes or the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I do not think that the Beech-Nut Gum package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company looks like either a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package. I know 3278 that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both the Scrap Tobacco and the Cigarette packages.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct line of merchandise from gum or candy. I have never known of a candy or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco products.

Cross Examination.

I have been in the retail cigar business for many years and for a long time have handled many of the brands put out by the P. Lorillard Co. I buy consider- 3279 able quantities of them. I have for years known the Lorillard salesmen who have been in this district from time to time. It keeps me busy running our five stores. I divide my time between them. I have not much time to listen to what customers are saying. A customer hardly ever asks who makes the cigarettes or tobacco he is buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes, or as to whether they are made by the same company that 3280 makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if J. F. REINACKER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

3281 My name is J. F. REINACKER. I am of legal age and am a retail tobacco merchant, doing business at 1226 Market St., Wheeling, W. Va. In addition to tobacco, I handle such articles as candy, sodas, razor blades, pencils, etc.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for about five years and Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about two years ago. I know that both of these products are manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co., and I have noticed Lorillard's name written on the front of both packages.

3282 I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, which is a good seller, and which I know to be manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I do not think that either the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarette packages look like a chewing gum package and I think that it would take a crazy man to accept either the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco or the Beech-Nut cigarette package in place of the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum package.

I have never heard more than three or four remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others, to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I told the three or four persons who did inquire of me that Lorillard made the tobacco and cigarette and that the Beech-Nut Packing Company made the gum. All of these instances occurred shortly after the cigarettes appeared on the market. 3283

I regard tobacco and gum as entirely unrelated classes of merchandise. I have never heard of a gum concern that put out any tobacco products.

I sell Chesterfield Pipes and Chesterfield Cigarettes, made by different companies.

3284

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for many years and know the different brands. I am kept pretty busy in my store. I cannot remember any more instances than those I have mentioned of people inquiring or discussing whether the Beech-Nut Cigarettes and Scrap Tobacco were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I cannot remember the names of these people or any more of the circumstances. I have made no effort to remember such occurences and have had no reason to do so. 3285

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard such remarks, inquiries or comments in appreciably greater number than the three or four that I have mentioned, I believe that fact would have been impressed on my mind, and that I would now remember it.

3286 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if E. B. POTTS were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is E. B. POTTS. I am of legal age and am a grocer doing business at 10th and Main Sts., Wheeling, W. Va. I employ three clerks besides myself and my store is a rather large one on the outskirts of the 3287 business section of Wheeling.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past six or seven years. I have always known it to be manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the package. Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is a good seller with me.

I have sold Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Peanut Butter and I know that both of these articles are put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut 3288 Scrap Tobacco to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I do not think that Beech-Nut Gum or Beech-Nut Peanut Butter looks like a scrap tobacco package, and I think that anyone who would accept Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco in place of Beech-Nut Gum must be crazy. I regard tobacco and food products as entirely separate classes of merchandise and I have never known of a food products or gum company that made any tobacco products.

I sell Climax Tobacco, Climax Coffee and Climax Wall Paper Cleaner, all manufactured by different companies; Argo Starch and Argo Salmon, made by different companies; Jersey Matches and Jersey Flour, made by different companies; Mothers Oats and Mothers Vanilla, made by different companies; Uneeda Matches and Uneeda Biscuits, made by different companies; Camel Cigarettes and Camel Dates, manufactured by different companies. 3289

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination. 3290

I have handled tobacco for a good many years and know the different brands. I wait on customers in all parts of my store and have not paid particular attention to what people are saying about the tobacco.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or as to whether it is made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any. 3291

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

3292

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if W. J. KAISER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is W. J. KAISER. I am of legal age and am a grocer doing business at 1001 Main St., Wheeling, W. Va. I employ two clerks besides myself. My store is quite a large one, measuring about 50 x 50'. I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for several years and I 3293 know it to be made by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of the package.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, Beech-Nut Peanut Butter and Beech-Nut Spaghetti. I know that these products are made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I do not think that any of the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company that I handle look like a 3294 scrap tobacco package, and I would think that anyone who would accept Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco in place of any of them must be crazy.

I regard tobacco and gum as entirely unrelated classes of products and I have never known of a food products or gum concern that manufactured any tobacco.

I sell Argo Salmon and Argo Starch, made by different companies; Uneeda Biscuits and Uneeda Matches, made by different companies.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for some years and am familiar with the brands that sell in this part of the country. I wait on customers in all parts of my store. I have not paid particular attention to what is being said about tobacco.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, or as to whether it is made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut Gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I do not remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, or such would have been impressed on my memory.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if E. SAYER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is E. SAYER. I am of legal age and am the manager of the Piggly Wiggly grocery store on Market St., Wheeling, W. Va. This is a large store where about 400 customers a day are served.

3298 I have bought and sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past six or seven years and I have always known it to be manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I have sold Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market and have always known that this product was also made by the Lorillard Co. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both packages. The Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is a good seller, but Beech-Nut Cigarettes do not sell well with me. I handle a number of the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, among them, Beech-Nut Chewing Gum, Mints, Peanut Butter and Beech-Nut 3299 Bacon. I do a good business in all of these articles.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut Cigarettes to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. None of the packages put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company that I handle looks to me like a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package. I regard food products and candies and gum as entirely separate lines of merchandise from tobacco or cigarettes and I have never known of a food or candy concern that manufac-3300 tured any tobacco products.

I sell White House Coffee, White House Vinegar and White House Margerine, all made by different companies; Uneeda Matches and Uneeda Biscuits, made by different companies; Gold Medal Matches and Gold Medal Flour, made by different companies; Franco-American Coffee and Franco-American Spaghetti, made by different companies; Log Cabin Syrup and Log Cabin Kisses, made by different companies.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for a good many years and have bought considerable quantities from the Lorillard Co. I wait on customers in all parts of my grocery store. I have not paid particular attention to what is going on in the tobacco section or what people are saying there.

3304 IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, that if P. P. NAUFEL were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is P. P. NAUFEL. I am of legal age and have been in the retail tobacco and confection business for the past seven years. I own and manage three retail candy and tobacco stores, all located in the business section of Wheeling, W. Va. I spend most of my time 3305 in one of these stores, which is 1608 Market St., Wheeling, W. Va., just across the street from the B. & O. Railway station. My stores average about 300 customers a day. In the store at 1608 Market St. I employ one clerk and spend most of my time waiting on the trade along with him.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco ever since I have been in this business, and it is a good seller. I have sold Beech-Nut Cigarettes ever since they appeared on this market, about two years ago. These cigarettes have not sold well with me. I know that both of these products are made by the Lorillard 3306 Tobacco Co. I know that Lorillard's name is written on the front of both of these packages.

I sell Beech-Nut Chewing Gum and Beech-Nut Mints, which I know to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. I do not think that either the Beech-Nut Gum or Mint package looks like either a scrap tobacco package or a cigarette package and I would think that anyone who would accept Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Cigarettes in place of Beech-Nut Gum or Mints must be crazy.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for years and have bought considerable quantities of the brands put out by the Lorillard Co. It takes all my time looking after my three stores. My store is a large one and I carry in addition to drugs such lines as stationery, toilet articles, perfumes, candy, and tobacco. I employ three clerks besides myself in this store.

I have handled Beech-Nut Cigarettes since they appeared on this market about a year and a half ago. I know that this cigarette is made by the Lorillard To-

A. I always sell it.

Q. 7. Can you say how long, approximately, you have been handling that product?

A. No.

as an entirely separate class of products?

A. A side line I should call it. I keep it for accommodation. If a man smokes, usually he wants to chew some gum so I sell Beech-Nut gum.

Q. 15. Did you ever hear of a food products company that manufactured any tobacco products?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. 16. Did any Lorillard salesman who ever sold any Beech-Nut tobacco products to you ever make any statements that left you under the impression that there was any connection between the Beech-Nut Packing Company and the P. Lorillard Co.? 3333

Mr. Preston: I think that is all. Mr. Johnson would like to ask you a few questions.

(Direct Examination closed).

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 1. What is the street address of your tobacco 335 store?

A. 22 Park Street.

X-Q. 2. Hartford, Connecticut?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 3. Have you a factory in connection with your business?

A. A cigar factory, yes.

X-Q. 14. Where is that?

A. Right in the rear.

X-Q. 5. About what proportion of your business is retail business?

A. All of it, I don't do any wholsale business.

336 K-Q. 6. What do you manufacture?

A. Cigars.

X-Q. 7. But you retail a large and various line of different kinds of things?

A. Yes, I manufacture different kinds of cigars. I quit going out soliciting trade for wholesale after Prohibition, the last three years or so.

X-Q. 7. Just roughly what is the size of the retail part of your shop without the factory; approximately the number of feet?

A. I should say it was about 15 feet by 10 feet.

X-Q. 8. How many employes do you have in the front of your shop where you sell to your customers? 3337

A. Two.

X-Q. 9. One beside yourself?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 10. How many are on duty at a time.

A. Sometimes two and sometimes one.

X-Q. 11. Are you in the business section of the city?

A. I think so. I think it is one of the busiest sections of the city.

X-Q. 12. About how many customers a day do you take care of?

A. I couldn't tell you. I have never kept track of that. I know my average receipts for the last year here were in the neighbourhood of $25,000. 3338

X-Q. 13. Could you make a pretty close approximation of the number of customers you have per day?

A. I couldn't attempt to, I couldn't attempt to. I could only tell you about the cash receipts. I have got detail enough without getting the number of customers.

X-Q. 14. Are you kept pretty busy waiting on customers during certain parts of the day?

A. Yes, between six and seven in the morning because this is a transfer point—between six and seven in the morning and between five and six in the afternoon the men are going to and coming from work, and I am busy waiting on customers and making change in the store. A man will get off a car and come in and he wants something quick so that he can get his next car, and I have got to get busy and do it quick. 3339

X-Q. 15. Do you do most of your business at those two rush hours of the day?

A. I do a certain business right through the day, transient business, and, of course, there isn't so much of that.

X-Q. 16. Have you much time to talk to customers?

A. "How do you do?"; "It is a nice day"; "How 3340 do you like the weather." If one person says: "It is hot" I say: "Yes," and if he says: "It is cold" I say the same thing. I haven't time for anything else.

X-Q. 17. Does a customer, as a rule, ask you who makes an article of tobacco or cigarettes that he is buying?

A. They don't care as long as the cigarettes suit them. They don't know if Liggett & Myers make Lucky Strikes or who makes Camels.

X-Q. 18. Would you say it is the brand of the cigarette or the tobacco that sells it?

A. I should say so, yes. If a man gets used to a 3341 kind, he calls for it.

X-Q. 19. Did I understand you to say on your direct examination that you have been in the tobacco business for something like forty-five years?

A. Since 1876 I have been in the cigar business. I started in it as a kid and I am a kid yet.

X-Q. 20. How long have you handled tobacco and cigarettes?

A. At odd times I have handled it. Steadily since I have been here, of course.

X-Q. 21. About how long is that?

A. Eight years—nine years next December the 12th.
3342 Then I was in business before further down on Maple Avenue for about two years where I had retail handling a year and a half or so, and then I have handled tobacco, of course, as a boy. In 1876 I worked in a cigar store just like this.

X-Q. 22. Have any people ever asked you—have either customers or anyone else ever asked you who made Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco?

A. Not to my knowledge.

X-Q. 23. Or who made the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. No.

X-Q. 24. Has any one made any comment or inquiry as to whether Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut gum and Peanut Butter, and so forth? 3343

A. No.

X-Q. 24. Have you made any attempt to remember any such comments or inquiries?

A. I never knew of anybody to ask the question. They come in and ask for Beech-Nut cigarettes and Beech-Nut Gum and Beech-Nut tobacco.

X-Q. 25. Did any one ask you to remember any such inquiries or comments?

A. No.

X-Q. 26. But you have been pretty busy waiting on the counter in your store, haven't you, during those hours. Otherwise it is just an in and out trade? 3344

A. Yes.

X-Q. 27. When you say you haven't heard any such inquiries or comments you mean, don't you, that you don't remember having heard any?

A. I never heard any to my knowledge.

X-Q. 28. How long have you been buying Lorillard tobacco products?

A. Ever since I have been in business. I sold Lorillard tobacco products when I was a kid.

X-Q. 29. Do you know the Lorillard salesmen in Hartford? 3345

A. Yes, sure I know them by hearsay.

X-Q. 30. How long have you known Mr. Hallisey?

A. Since he has been travelling for Lorlilard. He took Danny Shea's place, I believe.

X-Q. 31. Have you known the Lorillard salesmen for a good many years here?

A. Since I have been here. Of course I have been buying tobacco from them for eight or pretty nearly nine years.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

(Cross Examination closed.)

3346 Re-direct Examination.

By Mr. Preston:

R-D Q. 1. Mr. Dolan, will you state whether or not, if you had heard any considerable number of remarks, inquiries or comments from your customers which indicated any confusion on their part between the Beech-Nut Packing Company and the P. Lorillard Co., you believe you would have remembered them or they would have been impressed on your mind—if you had heard a great many?

3347 A. If I had heard a great many, sure it would have been impressed on my mind. I don't remember having heard them at all.

R-D Q. 2. Do you sell Star tobacco?

A. Yes.

R-D. Q. 3. Do you sell Star Shaving Brushes?

A. Yes.

Mr. Johnson: The last two questions objected to as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant.

R-D Q. 4. Will you state whether or not Star Shaving Brushes and Star Tobacco are made by the same company?

3348

A. I don't think so.

R-D Q. 5. Do you sell Saratoga Chips here too?

A. If a man comes in and asks for them, I know very well he isn't after potatoes. I give him what I have, Saratoga chips.

R-D Q. 6. Saratoga Chips is a tobacco brand?

A. Sure, I got it here. They are made by the United States Tobacco Co.

Mr. Johnson: This line of questioning is objected to as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant. 3349

(Re-direct Examination closed).

(Deposition closed).

(Signature of witness waived.)

WILLIAM H. NORTON, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being first duly sworn, deposes and says in answer to interrogatories propounded to him by Mr. Cavanagh, as follows: 3350

Q. 1. Please state your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. William H. Norton, 37, Norwich, Connecticut, salesman.

Q. 2. Salesman for what concern?

A. The P. Lorillard Co.

Q. 3. How long have you been connected with the P. Lorillard Co.?

A. It will be two years the 29th of this month.

Q. 4. What line of goods do you sell for P. Lorillard Co.? 3351

A. All their lines.

Q. 5. What are they?

A. B. L. tobacco, chewing tobacco, both dark and light; Mechanics' Delight, plug; Climax, plug; Red Cross, plug; and B. L. Cut Plug in packages; Union Leader, package; Union Leader, tins; Sensation, package; Beech-Nut Chewing Tobacco.

Q. 6. What cigarette brands do you sell?

A. Helmars, Murads, Moguls, Deities, and Beech-Nut.

Q. 7. What territory do you cover?

352 A. The counties of Tolland, New London and that other one north of New London—I can't think of the name of it—including New London, Willimantic, Norwhich, Danielson, Putnam and other towns within that county.

Q. 8. You work in Connecticut?

A. I work in Connecticut, not outside of it, all the State of Connecticut.

Q. 9. You have mentioned Beech-Nut Chewing tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes. How long have you been selling these Beech-Nut brands for the Lorillard Co.?

353 A. I started out the first four months—my first four months was entirely on Beech-Nut cigarettes. Commencing January 2nd, 1922, I have been selling all these other brands I have mentioned.

Q. 10. Did I understand you to say you have sold both the Beech-Nut Chewing tobacco or Scrap, and the Beech-Nut cigarettes in your territory?

A. Yes.

Q. 11. And you are still selling these brands?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 12. Will you just tell us, in your own way, what practice you followed or what selling procedure or sell-
354 ing talk you used in selling the Beech-Nut brands and the other brands you have mentioned?

A. In entering a store, I always let them know who I represented, P. Lorillard Co., Inc., and looked at the shelves to see what brands they carry of ours and what brands I can put in that they haven't got, and these brands are the brands I have just mentioned here that I am selling and carry in my car, ready for delivery.

Q. 13. You say you carry them in your car, ready for delivery?

A. Yes, most of them.

Q. 14. Do you sell to the wholesalers?

A. No, the retailers. I buy from the wholesalers 3355 for cash and sell to the retailers for cash.

Q. 15. I don't know if I exactly follow your procedure in that respect. Do you call on the retail trade alone?

A. All retail, no wholesale.

Q. 16. When you call on a retailer to sell a brand, say of Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco, and he gives you an order, what do you do?

A. I go out to the team and deliver the tobacco to him and give him a receipt of the order on a P. Lorillard blank, and I sign my name on it, at the bottom of the receipt. That is a receipt for his cash less the dis- 3356 count.

Q. 17. Can you produce one of those blank receipts?

A. I have got one here now that I can give you that I am going to deliver now to a dealer down in New Haven for goods I have sold him. (Witness produced yellow paper slip from his pocket and handed it to Mr. Cavanagh.)

Q. 18. Whose name appears at the top of that receipt?

A. P. Lorillard Co., Inc., New York. That is at 119 West 40th Street.

Q.19. I understand that in your practice you always 3357 give a customer, a retailer, one of these receipts when he makes a purchase?

A. Positively. We have to send a copy of the sale to New York. We send the tissue paper copy and keep the white receipt we make out ourselves, as a record for the business of the day, which we have to report in on a big report book and send it in every night to New York, together with the tissue sheet, showing our signature on it and showing that we have made that sale, so as to make that matter clear.

3358 Q. 20. How about the customer. The customer gets one slip?

A. Yes, the yellow slip, and we keep the white slip.

Q. 21. And the third, the tissue sheet, you send to the New York office?

A. Yes.

Q. 22. In your visits to the trade, and bearing in mind particularly the Beech-Nut brand, both Scrap Tobacco and cigarettes, have you ever heard of any comments, inquiries or questions which would lead you to believe that the trade or members of it, thought that this Beech-Nut tobacco was made by the Beech-Nut 3359 Packing Company, the same people who make the gum and food products?

A. Never.

Q. 23. I understand you are in this territory, introducing the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. Yes, sampling and selling and advertising.

Q. 24. What kind of advertising, what do you mean by advertising?

A. Posters with a picture of the box sticking out that we tacked up on buildings, and cards; some about three feet long and about nine inches wide, and some there and a half feet long and three and a half feet 3360 wide, and metal signs, yellow metal signs. We would put them on the windows of a store or in the stores or on the brick outside; wherever we could.

Q. 25. Wherever you were selling the goods?

A. Wherever I was selling the goods.

Q. 26. So far as you know, the name of what company appeared on the signs?

A. P. Lorillard Co., Inc.

Q. 27. I understand you started with P. Lorillard Co. about what date?

A. August 29th, it will be two years the 29th of this month.

Q. 28. 1921? 3361

A. Yes.

Q. 29. Under whose supervision were you and who was your district manager then?

A. Mr. William Roney.

Q. 30. Where was he located?

A. Boston. He is now the New England manager of the company.

Q. 31. Did you receive any instructions from Mr. Roney or any one your superior at that time as to how to introduce the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. I was first sent to Worcester under Mr. F. E. Roster. He was the crew manager and that is the line of talk I 3362 was given by him, sometimes once a week and sometimes two or three times a week at the hotel where we were stopping and where we were sent down into the cellar every morning and given this talk together, on advertising. He instructed us, when we went into a place, to say we represented the P. Lorillard Co. and to represent the brand we carried because at that time we could take orders for any kind we wanted to, but we were introducing the Beech-Nut cigarette.

Q. 32. So you really were known as the missionary or introducer?

A. First I was sent out by Mr. Roster and in- 3363 structed to say that we represented the P. Lorillard Co. and that we were 161 or 162 years in business, and that we were selling and sampling and advertising Beech-Nut cigarettes, and we would have a package in our hand. He instructed me in that way, and I was three days with him, and I used that system for four months.

Q. 33. You never represented your products as made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, did you?

3364 A. Never. I always said I represented the P. Lorillard Co. of New York, the cigarette manufacturers.

Mr. Cavanagh: I think that is all.

(Direct Examination Closed.)

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Bulkley:

X-Q. 1. I believe you said that Mr. Roney instructed you to exercise care in representing yourself to be a re-3365 presentative of P. Lorillard Co., is that right?

A. Mr. Roney didn't.

X-Q. 2. Who was it?

A. I said Mr. Roster. Mr. Roney sent me out under Mr. Roster. He was the crew manager.

X-Q. 3. What did he say to you, if you remember, in substance, in connection with it?

A. He directed me to call at the store as a representative of P. Lorillard, Inc., advertising, sampling and selling the Beech-Nut cigarette, and at the same time mention our brands of tobacco, such as B. L. We could take orders for any of that stuff but only 3366 orders through the jobber, and the only thing we carried was the cigarette in our pack and that was to be opened up to show to the trade to let them see the cigarettes.

X-Q 4. Did he tell you, in connection with the sale of the Lorillard products of the Beech-Nut brand that you should exercise care to see to it that you always let the purchaser know that you represented the P. Lorillard Co.?

A. Yes, sir, positively.

X-Q. 5. Did he give you that caution more than once?

A. Sometimes three times a week. Not to me alone 3367 but to eighteen of us standing together.

X-Q. 6. Did you go together, you salesmen?

A. We would start out together. If we came to Hartford there would be eighteen of us together, that is, at the same hotel, but then we would get different districts to cover and then we would be separated in branches, three fellows going to a town like Manchester, three to Glastonbury, and so forth, and then we would be separated again and sent to different places, and then we would come to the next big city and be all together again, like Bridgeport or New Haven, and the same thing done, but we would always get our instruc- 3368 tions from this one man before starting out.

X-Q. 7. That is, Mr. Roster?

A. Mr. Roster, and he would work with us. He would work with me one day, perhaps he would be with me four days, but he would be with each fellow one day to see how he went and acted.

X-Q. 8. Did you ever hear of any questions being raised with reference to the use of the words "Beech-Nut" in connection with the sale of the products of the P. Lorillard Co. at any time?

A. You mean in the store?

X-Q. 9. Generally with reference to the question 3369 having been elicited with reference to the use of the words: "Beech-Nut"?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 10. Mr. Roster never told you anything about that, did he?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 11. But he was quite careful, I understand you to say, to tell you always, when you sold this Beech-Nut tobacco, to represent yourself as selling in behalf of the P. Lorillard Co.?

A. That is, the Beech-Nut cigarette, not the tobacco.

3370 X-Q. 12. Did he ever tell you to be careful in the sale of the Beech-Nut tobacco; to represent yourself as being a representative of the P. Lorillard Co.?

A. I was only working on the cigarettes so I could only act on the cigarettes.

X-Q. 13. You never sold any Beech-Nut tobacco?

A. I sold plenty of it but not at that time. Since January, 1922, I sold tons of it.

X-Q. 14. In connection with the sale of Beech-Nut tobacco manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co., did anyone your superior give you instructions with reference to the exercise of care in always representing yourself 3371 as being a representative of the P. Lorillard Co.?

A. No, I got no instructions then, but I used the same methods only in more brands than I am selling now, and in my district they always know me because my car has the Lorillard Co.'s name on it. It has "B. L." on one side, "Union Leader" on the other, and "Climax" on the rear.

X-Q. 15. Now then, I understand that although your superior did instruct you to be careful to represent to every one that you were a representative of the P. Lorillard Co. in the sale of the cigarettes, you never did receive any such instructions in connection with the 3372 sale of the tobacco at any time, is that right?

A. Not in this State. I came to this State under another manager and was sent from Boston as a man capable of going through the work here, and I used the same methods in working here as I did in Boston under the Beech-Nut crew.

X-Q. 16. That doesn't quite answer my question. It was simply as to whether or not you had been cautioned in the sale of the tobacco—Beech-Nut tobacco—never to represent yourself to be a representative of the Beech-Nut Company?

A. My first words were that I represented the Lorillard Co., Inc., New York. I never mentioned the Beech- 3373

Nut Company.

X-Q. 17. That is not quite the point as yet. I simply ask whether at any time you were instructed to exercise care in representing to every one that you are a representative of the P. Lorillard Co. in the sale of the Beech-Nut tobaccos. Were you ever so instructed by any of your superiors at any time?

A. I was instructed, as I testified, in Boston, time and again, to be sure and say that I represented the P. Lorillard Co., New York.

X-Q. 18. And that applied either to the sale of the tobacco or to the sale of the cigarettes? 3374

A. I was then selling cigarettes.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

Cross Examination (Cont'd.)

By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 19. How long have you been in the tobacco business altogether?

A. Two years the 29th of this month, the 29th of August.

X-Q. 20. You have been with the Lorillard Co. all 3375 your years of active experience?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 21. You haven't been with the Lorillard Co. previous to that in any other state?

A. No.

X-Q. 22. When was the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco put on in this Connecticut territory?

A. Long before I came here. I don't know how long. I came to Connecticut—just working in the State of Connecticut—I came here to work January 2nd, 1922.

3376 X-Q. 23. Where were you before that?

A. Going all through Massachusetts with a crew with the Beech-Nut cigarettes.

X-Q. 24. Working out of where?

A. Out of Boston. Boston is the home office and I travelled Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

X-Q. 25. When was the introductory campaign started on the Beech-Nut cigarette in this territory?

A. When was it started?

X-Q. 26. Yes?

A. It was before I went to work. I went to work in August. I don't know just when it started.

3377 X-Q. 27. In August of what year?

A. 1921.

X-Q. 28. Was the introductory campaign on the Beech-Nut cigarette in progress when you entered the employ of the P. Lorillard Co.?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 29. How long did it continue after you came with them?

A. Until December 22nd, I think, of that year when we went on our vacations.

X-Q. 30. December 22nd, 1921?

A. Either the 21st or 22nd. Our vacation was less 3378 than a week before Christmas and the full week until the day after New Year's.

X-Q. 31. Did you work on the introductory campaign of the Beech-Nut cigarette from that time under the employ of the company—from the end of August until December 22nd, 1921?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 32. How many men worked with you during that introductory campaign on Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. From eighteen to twenty-one. Sometimes the crew was eighteen or nineteen or twenty or twenty-one. Never over twenty-one.

X-Q. 33. Did you know any of those men? 3379

A. Every one of them. I got acquainted with them working with them.

X-Q. 34. Were any of them new in the tobacco business the same as you were?

A. That I couldn't tell. Some of them were but I couldn't speak for all of them.

X-Q. 35. Some of them were new men and not familiar with the selling of tobacco at that time?

A. I couldn't tell anything about that. I don't know if they had sold tobacco or anything else. I simply know my own business.

X-Q. 36. Was this a special crew hired for this introductory campaign on Beech-Nut cigarettes? 3380

A. That I couldn't tell you. I myself tried for the job and was hired by Mr. Roney, and he sent me out on his crew. There was other work to be done but he put me on his crew.

X-Q. 37. Then all of these eighteen to twenty-one men you referred to concentrated on the sale of Beech-Nut cigarettes during that time from August to December of 1922—I mean 1921?

A. Yes

X-Q. 38. Did the membership of that crew change while you were with it? 3381

A. Sometimes a fellow got through with the company and sometimes some one else was hired.

X-Q. 39. Do you know of any of them being discharged because they were unsatisfactory?

A. That I couldn't tell you. They would not have let me know.

X-Q. 40. Some of them would disappear now and then and new men would appear?

A. In a couple of cases; I guess two or three. Not over three.

X-Q. 41. Did you hear any talk about any of them

3382 being cautioned as to their method of selling Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Every one of them. We would get it when we were all together in a hotel. For instance, while in a hotel in Bridgeport the head man had the fellows downstairs with samples of advertising sent from Boston and he would give us our instructions and advertising and sent us out to different districts to work and then we would come back at night and report.

X-Q. 42. At any of those times when you were receiving instructions from Mr. Roster, did he ever tell you there was any special reason for your being careful 3383 in your methods of selling Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. No, no.

X-Q. 43. Did you ever receive any letters from your superiors in the P. Lorillard Co.—letter or circular—calling your attention to the fact that they wanted you to be careful to avoid having it appear that the Beech-Nut cigarettes were put out by any other company than your own?

A. No.

X-Q. 44. You never received any such letter or circular?

A. I received, just as I said, the instructions from 3384 this crew manager.

X-Q. 45. That was by word of mouth?

A. That was by word of mouth. We got those orders three times a week; every week we got those same instructions.

X-Q. 46. But you never received any written instructions to that effect?

A. No. Mr. Roster would work with me a day and he would stop and talk to me as I have already said.

X-Q. 47. Were there any competitions in that introductory campaign on Beech-Nut cigarettes to see what member of your crew would sell the most?

A. No, no competition. 3385

X-Q. 48. Or any bonuses offered for the largest sale of Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. We got a bonus for the sales over the six months previous. If they were better we would get a certain percentage of it—if the sales increased.

X-Q. 49. You got a bonus on the increased sales?

A. We got a bonus on the increased sales.

X-Q. 50. Did you receive any written announcement of such a bonus?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 51. Was there any caution in connection with those offers as to the way you should put forward the 3386
Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 52. Have you ever taken part in any other introductory campaign on tobacco or cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 53. What were they?

A. Comet tobacco. That was six months ago. I introduced it all through my district, putting it in seven out of ten stores introductory.

X-Q. 54. How did the first sales of Comet compare with the introductory sale of the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Well, not so good. I might add that at the time 3387 of our campaign, when we started the cigarettes, we were offering the cigarettes 20 for 15 cents in competition with cigarettes like Camels or Lucky Strikes, 20 for 20 cents. Comet was 10 cents a package and all other packages were 10 cents so we didn't have a chance to introduce so much of the tobacco in my opinion.

X-Q. 55. Does the P. Lorillard Co. have its name on all of its products that you have sold?

A. As far as I know—I beg your pardon, not all of them. The Turkish cigarettes have "S. Anargyros" on them. We produce the brand.

3388 X-Q. 56. What are the names of some of those brands that bear that name. Just name them to me?

A. Moguls, Murads, Helmars, Egyptian Dieties, Anargyros Brush Ends—it is a hand made cigarette. There are others I am not familiar with that are sold, high priced cigarettes.

(Answer read by the stenographer at the request of Mr. Bulkley.)

X-Q. 57. Then the P. Lorillard Co. does not feature its name on those brands of cigarettes, is that right?

3389 A. Yes. I don't think it can. I don't know much about it but I think that is the agreement. That name was to be on all the brands of Turkish and Egyptian cigarettes.

X-Q. 58. Are those brands you have named an important group of the Lorillard Products?

A. Very important.

X-Q. 59. Do they have large sales?

A. Very large.

X-Q. 60. In your experience, Mr. Norton, in selling tobacco and cigarettes, would you say that it is the brand name that sells the article?

3390 A. Well, which article?

X-Q. 61. Does the consumer ask for a certain brand of cigarettes or tobacco?

A. Well, I have gone by a store with my car, driving fairly fast, and have been hollered at to stop and I came back and had them ask me if I had a couple dozen packages of Beech-Nut Chewing Tobacco in my car and I said: "Yes" and opened it up—I always carry two gross of it with me, and I opened it up and delivered it, and gave them such a receipt as I showed you.

X-Q. 62. Do you know personally a great many of your customers—dealers?

A. I do now. They were all new to me when I took 3391 that district.

X-Q. 63. When a man would stop you that way, he would know you were the Lorillard man that was selling those things?

A. Yes, by the car, he could tell by the car. They all know—the dealers all know our brands; especially in the district I work in our brands are leading sellers over all. That is, Beech-Nut Chewing, Union Leader, B. L. in the package, Sensation, Mechanics' Delight. Those are all leaders up that way.

X-Q. 64. Have you ever made it a practice to speak of your Beech-Nut line of tobaccos and cigarettes? 3392

A. A practice?

X-Q. 65. Yes.

A. Very much, very much. I have introduced the Beech-Nut tobacco in many places in my district where I sell.

X-Q. 66. You often speak of the Beech-Nut cigarettes and tobacco as your Beech-Nut line?

A. Positively. I start in first and say I am a representative of the P. Lorillard Co., New York. I carry a book of pictures of all of these articles and I open the book and show the man. I have got the book in my bag at the hotel. That is simply to show and every one of 3393 them has "P. Lorillard Co." on it.

X-Q. 67. Did you ever place Beech-Nut cigarettes or Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco advertising or packages in windows of dealers where you were placing the goods?

A. Hundreds of them. I spent two whole months under the direction of our district manager just on window displays.

X-Q. 68. Did you ever place any in the same window with advertising of the Beech-Nut Packing Company products, such as chewing gum?

3394 A. I wouldn't, as a rule, place any in the window unless I got the entire window.

X-Q. 68. Did you ever place any alongside of a window containing Beech-Nut chewing gum or Beech-Nut Mints or any other of the Beech-Nut Packing Company products?

A. No, no. I made a strong specialty of saloons and generally got empty windows. You could get them easy.

X-Q. 69. Were you ever cautioned by your superiors to be careful not to place any of your Beech-Nut cigarette or Scrap Tobacco advertising, or packages, in 3395 windows alongside the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. No, we were instructed not to put our advertising in the window if another tobacco company had a display there; either to get a window for our sole product or not at all.

X-Q. 70. Would you frequently sell these Beech-Nut cigarettes and scrap tobacco to a dealer who was also handling Beech-Nut Packing Company products, such as chewing gum, hard candies, peanut butter, and so forth?

A. I never paid any attention to notice that.

3396 X-Q. 71. In your district wouldn't you sell frequently to small general stores?

A. Oh yes.

X-Q. 72. And confectionery stores?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 73. Did you ever notice Beech-Nut Mints, chewing gum, and such, in the same store where you were making your sales?

A. I seen the gum in lots of stores but I don't even know now what Beech-Nut Mint means. I have bought the gum.

X-Q. 74. Referring to the order slip which you have described in your direct examination, one of which you handed as a receipt to the customer, one of which you send to the jobber as you have described— 3397

A. I beg your pardon, I don't send one to the jobber.

X-Q. 75. Whatever your method was that you have described, have you seen similar order blanks and receipts for orders used by jobbers, with the jobber's name at the top?

A. No. They don't leave a slip with the retailer. They simply take the man's order because they can take it for all kinds of tobacco of different companies and they then bring that back to their concern.

X-Q. 76. Isn't it true that the jobber's salesmen use order slips of the general character similar to these of the Lorillard Co's,with the jobbers' name at the top? 3398

A. Yes, with the jobber's name at the top.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

(Cross Examination Closed.)

Re-direct Examination.

R-D Q. 1. This Comet tobacco you have referred to, what kind of a tobacco is that?

A. Cut plug. 3399

R-D Q. 2. What is it used for, how is it used?

A. Smoking. It is a plug cut in the package.

R-D Q. 3. But it is not a cigarette?

A. No, it is a tobacco, the same as our Union Leader and B. L. Tobacco.

R-D Q. 4. Would you hand me that box of cigarettes? (Witness handed Mr. Cavanagh package of Murad cigarettes) Would you look on that package of Murad cigarettes and see if Lorillard's name is on there?

A. Yes, "Capital stock owned by P. Lorillard Co."

3400 R-D Q. 5. That is one of the Anargyros brands?

A. Yes.

R-D Q. 6. This bonus to which you referred in your cross examination, did that usually apply to all goods you sold during that period?

A. Just Beech-Nut cigarettes.

R-D Q. 7. For what period was that?

A. Well, I don't know. I came in August and it ended in December. I don't know how long it was on but I was notified of it and got my little share the following March, but it was a percentage, as I understand it now. I can't remember it exactly.

3401 R-D Q. 8. Was that during the campaign?

A. Yes, just on Beech-Nut cigarettes.

R-D Q. 9. These instructions which you say you received at various times from the district manager or your superior, Mr. Roster, did those instructions apply to the other tobaccos too as well as the Beech-Nut?

A. Certainly. He advised us to always mention our brands, to always mention the Lorillard brand. I would take orders sometimes starting with Beech-Nut cigarettes and also include Helmars and Murads and Moguls through the jobber.

3402 Mr. Cavanagh: I think that is all.

(Re-direct Examination Closed.)

Re-cross Examination.

Lorillard Co.", will you please tell me the relative size of the name "S. Anargyros" and the words you read: "Capital stock owned by P. Lorillard Co." on that box?

A. I should think that the words: "Capital stock owned by P. Lorillard Co." were about one-fourth the size of the word: "S. Anargyros." 3403

R-X Q. 2. Which name would you say was featured on that box?

A. S. Anargyros.

R-X Q. 4. Have you sold Murads?

A. Yes, I have sold Murads.

R-X Q. 5. Have you sold many of them? 3404

R-X Q. 6. Do you carry some of the other Anargyros brands?

A. Helmars.

R-X. Q. 7. Are those words on the Helmar box?

tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes. How long have you been selling these brands? 3409

A. The Beech-Nut cigarettes I have been selling since around February or March, 1921, when they first came on the market. Beech-Nut chewing tobacco I have been selling since I have been in the employ of the P. Lorillard Co.

Q. 9. Is the Beech-Nut chewing tobacco known as a scrap tobacco too?

A. It is.

Q. 10. Were you on any of the missionary or introducing crews that put the Beech-Nut cigarette in this territory? 3410

A. I was. I was on the tobacco crew in this State when the Beech-Nut cigarette first came out. I started in New Haven County, in the town of New Haven.

Q. 11. When was that?

A. Either February or March of 1921.

Q. 12. What practice or procedure did you follow in introducing the Beech-Nut cigarette to the trade. Just tell us in your own words.

A. I would go into a store and introduce myself as Mr. Racow, representing the P. Lorillard Tobacco Co. and in quite a few of the stores they knew I sold tobacco. I would come in and shake hands with them and I would say: "I have got something good now. We are putting out a new cigarette, the Beech-Nut cigarette." I told that to people I knew and some I didn't know. 3411

Q. 13. Did anybody give you instructions to so present this brand or follow this procedure?

A. Mr. I. J. Perlowski, who was then the district manager. He told me the exact words I have just spoken of.

Q. 14. Was he your superior?

A. He was my superior. I took orders from him.

3412 Q. 15. Were there any other persons working on this crew at the same time, introducing this brand?

A Not at the same time. They had a different county. I was introducing the cigarettes right around New Haven.

Q. 16. In introducing the Beech-Nut cigarette to the trade, did you visit both the wholesale and retail trade or which one?

A. The retail trade.

Q. 17. Did you put up any advertising matter in connection with it. Just describe that?

A. I would go in a store and they would give me
3413 permission to put up a poster and I would put it up so that they could see it.

Q. 18. Where did you get this advertising?

A. From our warehouse in the morning before I left.

Q. 19. And if a customer gave you an order for Beech-Nut cigarettes, what would you do. Just describe the procedure you followed in having that order executed?

A. If I was selling for cash, I would sell it to him off the car; and make out the receipt slip "Paid" and give him a receipt. If not, I would make out an order, have them sign it, leave them a duplicate and bring a 3414 duplicate into the office.

Q. 20. If you sold him off the car and took cash for it, just state what the procedure was so far as the receipts went?

A. I turned in a slip to my superior officer of the cash sale.

Q. 21. Would you leave anything with the customers?

A. I would leave a duplicate with the customer as I told you before.

Q. 22. Do you know if that receipt had any name on it to indicate where it came from?

A. On every receipt there is P. Lorillard's name, 3415 right in our order book, and it would have my name down at the bottom, paid.

Q. 23. At the same time you introduced the Beech-Nut cigarette, were you selling any other brand of Lorillard's?

A. I was. I was selling all the Lorillard tobacco and cigarettes too.

Q. 24. So that you weren't working on the Beech-Nut cigarettes alone?

A. We were featuring Beech-Nut cigarettes. It was one of our leaders. We have always got three leaders.

Q. 25. But you also took orders for the other Lorillard tobaccos too? 3416

A. Yes, I took orders for the other Lorillard tobacco too.

Q. 26. In your visits to the trade, did you ever hear any comments, inquiries or remarks that would lead you to believe that people thought that Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people that made the chewing gum and food products?

A. In my businss not one of them. The fellows I spoke to were tobacco dealers and none of them ever questioned me or asked me who made them, but if they had I would have told them that they were made by the 3417
P. Lorillard Co. and that I understood P. Lorillard manufactured them.

Q. 27. In this introductory campaign did you exhibit any samples to the public or what did you do in that respect?

A. We did. We sampled the cigarettes to different people. We would stand in a store and see a man smoking a cigarette. We would go up to him and talk to him and tell him we were representing P. Lorillard Co. and they were putting out a new cigarette and 3418 would like to have them try it, and we would give him some.

Mr. Cavanagh: I think that is all.

A. Altogether about five years.

A. What do you mean, duration?

X-Q. 8. When did it begin and when did it end?

A. That I can't just remember.

X-Q. 16. How many were—were you familiar with the men in that crew?

X-Q. 17. How many were in that crew?

A. That I just don't know. I never worked with them. I just worked myself.

X-Q. 18. Were most of them old Lorillard men?

that time.

X-Q. 19. Were any of them new employees at that time?

A. That I don't know—if they were new or old.

X-Q. 20. Did you visit a great many customers in your territory during that campaign?

3424 A. Yes, retail dealers.

X-Q. 23. Did any of these customers of yours make any comment on the fact that you were putting out a cigarette called Beech-Nut?

A. They knew we were selling cigarettes. I just told them it was a new one we were putting on the market.

X-Q. 24. When did you enter the employ of the Lorillard Co., what month in what year?

A. I don't just remember what month. I can't remember what month. I don't know if it was July.

X-Q. 25. 1920?

3425 A. 1920.

X-Q. 26. And this campaign began in what year?

A. 1921.

X-Q. 27. In February or March?

3426 A. Yes.

X-Q. 30. Did you know of Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints and Beech-Nut Peanut Butter and such products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company at that time?

A. I had heard of them.

X-Q. 31. Did any one outside of the dealers—your customers—did you ever hear anyone comment on the fact that you were using the name Beech-Nut for cigarettes?

A. Not at the time; they didn't speak to me.

X-Q. 32. Did you know of such comment being made?

A. None at all. 3427

X-Q. 33. Were any of your customers that you placed Beech-Nut cigarettes with at that time, handling also Beech-Nut Mints and chewing gum?

A. I seen them in the stores.

X-Q. 36. In the same stores you were selling Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Yes, but I never took any notice of them; how they had them. I seen them on the case once at a sale.

X-Q. 37. Then you, knowing these dealers—these customers—as well as you did, and with them handling other Beech-Nut products, as you think about it now, do you mean to say you never heard any comment on the fact that the P. Lorillard Co. was using the Beech-Nut name on cigarettes?

A. No, none whatsoever. I knew we were putting 3429 out Beech-Nut chewing tobacco at the time and Beech-Nut cigarettes had the same brand and every package had P. Lorillard's name on it and I would show the dealer that.

X-Q. 38. Did you ever make a practice of referring to Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes as your Beech-Nut line?

A. I don't just grasp what you mean.

X-Q. 39. Did you ever refer to Beech-Nut chewing tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes as the Beech-Nut line?

3430 A. No Beech-Nut line at all. It is a P. Lorillard line. That is just the name. P. Lorillard don't manufacture nothing in the Beech-Nut line at all. Beech-Nut chewing tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes are of P. Lorillard manufacture.

X-Q. 40. What was the name of your chief?

A. At that time?

X-Q. 41. At that time, yes.

A. Mr. I. J. Perlowski.

X-Q. 42. Did he instruct you to be careful not to let it appear that the Beech-Nut cigarettes were the product of any other company but your own?

3431 A. No. All he did was to tell us how to talk to a customer and how to approach him on the Beech-Nut cigarettes.

X-Q. 43. Did he ever instruct you not to let it appear that they were a product of the Beech-Nut Gum people?

A. No.

X-Q. 44. Did you ever receive any written instructions to that effect?

A. No, I don't think so. I don't know. No. I don't think they did. I can't remember that.

X-Q. 45. Did you place any advertising matter of Beech-Nut tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes in windows?

3432 A. No.

X-Q. 46. Did you place them in the stores of your customers?

A. Well, I would just stick them on the wall; just posters, that is all.

X-Q. 47. Were you ever cautioned by Mr. Perlowski or any one in the Lorillard Co. not to place those side by side with the Beech-Nut Packing Company's in the same store?

A. I never did it.

X-Q. 48. Did you ever receive any instructions in regard to it or cautioning you not to do it?

X-Q. 56. What name appears as the maker on those brands?

A. S. Anargyros, P. Lorillard Co., Successor. 3435

X-Q. 57. Have you got a package of any one of those brands with you? (Witness produces a package of Murad cigarettes from his pocket.)

X-Q. 58. Please read the name of the maker as it appears on that Murad package?

A. S. Anargyros, Capitol stock owned by P. Lorillard Co.

X-Q. 59. What is the relative size of the words: "S. Anargyros" and the words: "Capital stock owned by P. Lorillard Co."?

A. There is a difference in size.

3436 X-Q. 60. What is the larger?

A. S. Anargyros.

X-Q. 61. How much larger?

A. About quarter the size.

X-Q. 62. With the words: "Capital stock owned by P. Lorillard Co." about one-quarter of the size of "S. Anargyros" on that package, would you say that the name of the P. Lorillard Co. was featured on that package as the manufacturer?

A. I would.

X-Q. 63. Yet you say that "S. Anargyros" is four times the size of the other words?

3437 A. It is.

X-Q. 64. Will you give me the package (Witness hands package of Murad cigarettes to Mr. Johnson). I hold the package about six feet from you. Can you read any words on there except "S. Anargyros" in that group that you read?

A. That is a question that is hard to answer because I know just what is on that package.

X-Q. 65. Can you read anything beside "S. Anargyros"?

A. I can read it pretty fair away from here. I can read it a little.

3438 X-Q. 66. A little?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 67. What appears as the name of the maker on the Egyptian Dieties?

A. That I can't just remember now.

X-Q. 68. What appears as the name of the maker on Helmars?

A. Oh, I know there is P. Lorillard on every package and that is the one I work for, P. Lorillard. I know they put the name on every package.

X-Q. 69. You are sure of that?

A. Almost positive.

X-Q. 70. You don't know that the name "P. Lorillard Co." is omitted from some of the packages, such as Helmars? 3439

A. I don't know but I am almost positive.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

BENJAMIN SALETAN, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being first duly sworn, deposes and says in answer to interrogatories propounded to him by Mr. Preston, as follows:

Q. 1. Mr. Saletan, will you please state your name, age, occupation and address of your store here?

A. Benjamin Saletan, age 43, running a cigar stand at 361 Main Street, Hartford.

Q. 2. How long have you been in the retail tobacco business? 3463

A. Well, I have been on and off for the last twenty-eight years or so.

Q. 3. Is this stand, which you are now running, in the front of a restaurant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 4. About how many customers do you have here a day, sir?

A. I have got about four hundred.

Q. 5. Do you sell Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco like the package I show you? (Mr. Preston showing witness a package of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco). 3464

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 6. How long have you handled that product?

A. Well, I have handled this product—I couldn't say exactly but I am handling it for the last four years I know, and they handled it before.

Q. 7. Do you know what company makes that scrap tobacco?

A. Lorillard.

Q. 8. Do you sell Beech-Nut cigarettes like the package I now show you (Mr. Preston showing witness a package of Beech-Nut cigarettes).

A. Yes, sir. 3465

Q. 9. Do you know who makes that?

A. The same company, I believe.

Q. 10. Is the Beech-Nut chewing tobacco a good seller?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 11. Is it your best selling scrap tobacco?

A. Well, to a certain extent, yes. I sell more of that than I do any of the other brands.

Q. 12. Do you sell Beech-Nut chewing gum like the package I now show you (Mr. Preston showing the witness a package of Beech-Nut chewing gum).

A. Yes, sir.

3466 Q. 13. Do you know what company makes that?

A. I think it is the Beech-Nut Chewing Gum Co. to my knowledge. The Beech-Nut Chewing Gum Company.

Q. 14. Were you ever under the impression that the Beech-Nut chewing gum was made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco and the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. No, sir. I always considered them as two different products.

Q. 15. Do you regard the tobacco and cigarettes in the same or a different class of products than the chewing gum?

3467 A. Different products. I have seen a lot of Beech-Nut brands of different things, and I say I consider that one don't belong to the other.

Q. 16. Mr. Saletan, have you ever heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among your customers or anybody else to the effect or which led you to believe that they were under the impression that Beech-Nut gum was made by the same company that makes the tobacco and cigarettes?

A. I never heard that as long as I can remember but I tell you what I have heard once. I had a cigar in here called "Veribest" and I have got it now. The only time 3468 I ever heard the remark in a joking way once or twice was something like: "What do you call that brand of meat?". A meat brand. The Veribest meat brand. That is all I ever heard. I don't believe I ever heard that more than twice in all that time.

Q. 17. What is the name of that cigar?

A. The Veribest. That was only said in a joking remark whenever I would hear that.

Q. 18. But you don't remember ever hearing any remarks, confusing the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco and the Beech-Nut cigarettes with the Beech-Nut gum as something that was put out by the same company?

A. No, I don't remember ever having heard anything like that. 3469

Mr. Preston: That is all.
(Direct Examination closed)

Cross Examination.

X-Q. 2. What is the street address? 3470

A. 361 Main Street.

X-Q. 3. Is your place of business a cigar stand in the front of the quick lunch counter?

A. No, it is a separate business of my own.

X-Q. 4. But it is in the same room with the dairy lunch?

A. Yes. It isn't exactly a dairy lunch. It is a general lunch room.

X-Q. 5. About how much space does your stand occupy?

A. 4½ feet by 8. Let me see, no. (Pause) It is 4½ feet by 8. That is the measurement. 3471

X-Q. 6. It is in the front of the lunch room?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 7. Are you kept pretty busy waiting on customers during part of the day?

A. No, not so very much.

X-Q. 8. Do you have rush times?

A. Very little.

X-Q. 9. Do you have rush times?

A. Very little.

X-Q. 10. You don't?

A. It is generally a steady influx and it isn't very rushing. There is no time I have any rush.

3472 X-Q. 11. Do you spend much time talking to your customers, who are buying tobacco or cigarettes?

A. Yes, it happens quite often. I talk to them sometimes five or ten or fifteen minutes if anybody is willing to converse.

X-Q. 12. What products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company have you kept beside chewing gum?

A. Besides chewing gum I kept their Life Savers. What do you call it—Mints, something like that.

X-Q. 13. Did you say you had been in the tobacco business for something like twenty-eight years?

A. On and off. I wouldn't say I had always been 3473 in it.

X-Q. 14. During that time have you handled many of the P. Lorillard Co. products?

A. Why, I imagine I have carried them all in their day; whatever they have made.

X-Q. 15. Were you keeping Beech-Nut chewing gum at the time you first put in any of the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or cigarettes?

A. I don't remember keeping Beech-Nut chewing gum in the last four years because I have been off anywheres from four to six years before I went in again to the same line of business. I don't remember 3474 exactly if I had that before then. In the past four years I have never carried it.

X-Q. 16. Haven't you ever heard any one ask any questions about whether the Beech-Nut chewing tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the chewing gum people?

A. Never to my knowledge.

X-Q. 17. When a man comes in to buy tobacco or cigarettes, does he often ask you who makes the article he is buying?

A. Oh seldom, very seldom.

X-Q. 18. Does he often ask you for cigarettes or to- 3475 bacco made by a certain concern?

A. Hardly.

X-Q. 19. What does he usually ask for?

A. He usually asks for the name Camel or Lucky Strike or Veteran or any of the kinds, but they don't specify the manufacturer.

X-Q. 20. Did you ever have a customer ask you for Camels made by the Reynolds Company?

A. No.

X-Q. 21. Or Lucky Strikes made by the American Tobacco Company?

A. No, sir. 3476

X-Q. 22. Then in your experience in the tobacco business, somewhat under twenty-eight years, have you found it is the brand that sells the cigarette or tobacco?

A. The brand is always what sells it, the name of the brand.

X-Q. 23. Have you made any attempt to remember, or make note of any such questions or remarks you have heard as to whether the Beech-Nut chewing tobacco or cigarettes were made by the chewing gum people?

A. I haven't made any note of it but I can always tell if a man is interested if he asks me a question a few times, I can always keep it in my mind. If you ask me 3477 any questions: "Is this this man's make?" or "Is it that man's make?" it is always in my mind. Some people come in and ask those things, but I never marked down those remarks.

X-Q. 24. You haven't made any particular effort to remember any such remarks or questions, have you?

A. No, it never came to my mind to think about those things here. Naturally, if a man will ask you, it is in your mind. It can't be helped, it is human nature.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

3478 Re-direct Examination.

By Mr. Preston:

R-D. Q. 1. Mr. Saletan, do you know who makes the Veribest Cigar that you just showed us?

A. Yes, sir, it is made in Hartford by a man by the name of Louis Bogin.

R-D. Q. 2. Is he a cigar manufacturer?

A. He is a cigar manufacturer on a very small scale.

R-D. Q. 3. Mr. Saletan, I wonder if you would tell us just in your own words what you mean when you say 3479 that it is the brand that sells the cigarette. Can you enlarge on that?

A. The only way I can enlarge on it is when a man says: "Give me a Lorillard product or a Beech-Nut product" or anything like that. "Give me a package of Murads" or "Give me a package of Rosedales" or something else. I don't believe there is one of a thousand who knows even who makes it.

Mr. Preston: That is all.

3486 A. An entirely distinct line, I should think.

Q. 17. Mr. Tevlin, did any Lorillard salesmen ever make any remark to you concerning their Beech-Nut tobacco products, which indicated to you or led you to believe that there was any connection between the Beech-Nut cigarettes and the Beech-Nut tobacco, and the Beech-Nut chewing gum?

STIPULATION.

3501

It is Stipulated by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if B. T. MILLER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is B. T. MILLER, I am of legal age and I am the manager of a store known as Miller's Soda Shop, located at 177 Windsor Avenue, Hartford, Connecticut. This store is in the locality of Hartford, known as the East Side, and is one block from No. 78 Village Street.

3502 In this store we sell confectionery, soda, tobacco, stationery and periodicals. We handle approximately 500 customers a day, and, as a general rule, there are two clerks on duty here.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past three or four years and Beech-Nut cigarettes since they appeared on this market. I have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I handle Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints. I know these articles to be the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or com-
3503 ments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought that Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct class of product from chewing gum, candies, or food products; and I have never heard of a food product concern that manufactured any tobacco. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a cigarette package or a scrap tobacco package.

3504 Cross Examination.

I have known of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. for a good many years. The Lorillard salesmen frequently call at my store. I am familiar with most of the different brands of cigarettes and tobacco.

I am kept pretty busy waiting on customers and haven't much time to listen to what people are saying in the store. The customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarette he is buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes 3505

the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks I mean that I don't remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

3506

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if MAX SELTZER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is MAX SELTZER. I am of legal age and I am a grocerymen by trade and do business at 728 Park Street, Hartford, Conn. In addition to groceries 3507
I handle tobacco and confections. I have about 300 customers a day in my store, and, as a rule, I am the only clerk on duty here.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past three years, and it is my best selling scrap tobacco. I do not handle Beech-Nut cigarettes. I have always known that Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco was manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co. I handle Beech-Nut chewing gum which I know to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or com-

3508 ments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought that Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco was made by the same company that manufactures Beech-Nut chewing gum.

I regard tobacco as an entirely distinct line of merchandise from chewing gum, and I have never heard of a chewing gum or candy concern that manufactured any tobacco. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either the Scrap Tobacco package or the cigarette package.

I sell Red Seal Lye and Red Seal Snuff. These two articles are manufactured by different companies.

3509 It is Stipulated that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to the witness's testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have known of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. for many years. The Lorillard salesmen frequently call in at my store. My customers do not often ask who makes the cigarette or tobacco which they are buying.

3510 I am kept pretty busy waiting on customers and have not paid much attention to what the customers were saying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks I mean that I don't remember any.

Re-direct Examination. 3511

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if ARTHUR LENNOX were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows: 3512

Direct Examination.

My name is ARTHUR LENNOX, I am 45 years of age and I am a druggist by vocation, being the manager of a drug store, located in the residential section of Hartford, Connecticut, at 1136 Albany Avenue. My store is a large one, situated on a corner, and we sell the usual varied line carried by drug stores, including such articles as drugs, toilet articles, stationery, periodicals, candy, soda and tobacco.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco for several years 3513 past and Beech-Nut cigarettes since they appeared on this market. I have always known that these were products manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co. I handle Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut mints, which products I know to be manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe they thought Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were manufactured by 3514 the Beech-Nut Packing Company, except that when the cigarette first appeared on this market I do remember hearing three or four people inquire whether this cigarette was made by the same people who made the Beech-Nut gum.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as in a very distinct line from chewing gum, candy or other food products, and I have never known of a food product concern that manufactured any tobacco. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

3515

Cross Examination.

I have known of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. for some years. The Lorillard salesmen frequently call at my store. I am pretty familiar with the different brands of tobacco and cigarettes.

I am kept pretty busy waiting on customers and waiting on the counter in all parts of the store. I have not paid much attention to what was being said around the tobacco stand.

I have made no particular effort to remember any in-3516 quiries, remarks, or comments as to who made the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes, and had no reason to do so. When I say I heard only three or four inquiries or remarks as to whether the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut gum people, I mean I cannot now remember any more than that.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments, indicating confusion on this matter among my customers in considerably greater numbers than the three or four which I have mentioned, I think that I would have remembered that fact. When those three or four inquiries were addressed to me I told the inquirers that the cigarette was made by the P. Lorillard Co. and that the Beech-Nut Packing Company was the manufacturer of the gum. 3517

I sell Velvet tobacco, Velvet Pencils and Velvet Candy Kisses and Velvet Skin Lotion, and none of these articles are manufactured by the same concern.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to the witness' testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant. 3518

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if MORRIS STEIN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination. 3519

My name is MORRIS STEIN. I am of legal age and I am the manager of a retail drug store, located at 436 Asylum Street, Hartford, Connecticut. This store is known as the Bushnell Cigar Counter and is situated next door to Preston's Market and is one and one-half blocks from the store run by Joseph De Rago at 82 Spring Street, and is one and one-half blocks from the grocery store run by Solomon T. Kramer, 84 Church Street.

520 I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for the past four years and it is my best selling scrap tobacco. I have sold Beech-Nut cigarettes since they appeared on the market and have always known that both the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and the Beech-Nut cigarettes were manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co. I have been in the tobacco business for a great many years and have long known of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. as one of the oldest and largest of the tobacco concerns.

I sell Beech-Nut chewing gum, Beech-Nut Mints and Beech-Nut Caramels, and I have always known that these articles were put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Com-521 pany. I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe, that they thought that Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes was the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package, and I regard the product of cigarettes as an entirely distinct line from gum or candies.

Cross Examination.

522 I have handled the Lorillard tobacco products for many years and have known from time to time the Lorillard salesmen who frequently called in my store for orders.

I have about six hundred customers per day. I have one other clerk beside myself, who is usually in the store with me. I have a busy downtown store and haven't much time to talk to customers. The customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarettes he is purchasing.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut Cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I don't remember any. 3523

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if H. CLYMER were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows: 3524

Direct Examination.

My name is H. CLYMER. I am of legal age and am a retail tobacconist. I am the manager of a store located at 364 Windsor Avenue, Hartford, Connecticut, which store is located in the district known as the East Side, and is one block from No. 78 Village Street. I have been in the retail tobacco business for the past fifteen years.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco for five years and Beech-Nut cigarettes ever since they came on this market. I know both of these products are manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I sell Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints, both of which articles I have always known to be the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. 3525

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought that Beech-Nut scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes was the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct 3526 class of merchandise from chewing gum, candy or other food products. I have never seen a package put up by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

I sell Uncle Sam Tobacco and Uncle Sam Playing Cards. These two articles are not manufactured by the same concern.

It is Stipulated that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to the witness's testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is incompetent, irrelevant 3527 and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled Lorillard tobacco products for many years and have known the Lorillard salesmen. They frequently come into my store to take orders.

I have a busy store and have not much time to talk to customers or much opportunity to hear what they are saying. A customer seldom asks who makes the tobacco or cigarettes he is buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut 3528 Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks I mean that I don't remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

STIPULATION. 3529

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if B. H. PIERCE were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., Defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is B. H. PIERCE and I am of legal age. I am a clerk in a first class residential drug store, located at 247 Sigourney Street, Hartford, Connecticut. This store is located two blocks from the store run by C. P. Case at 597 Albany Avenue, Hartford, Connecticut. 3530

There are, as a rule, two clerks on duty in this store. I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes in this store for several years, and have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. We also handle Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints, which I know to be products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought that Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes was the 3531 product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct class of products from chewing gum and mints, and I have never heard of a candy or food concern, which manufactured any tobacco products, nor have I ever seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

No Lorillard salesmen, in selling any of their products to me, ever made any remarks which indicated to me that there was any connection between the Beech-3532 Nut cigarettes or the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, and the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I sell Velvet Tobacco and Velvet Skin Lotion, Spearmint Tooth Paste and Spearmint chewing gum, Diamond Dyes and Diamond Ginger Ale. None of these products are manufactured by the same concern.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to the witness's testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

3533 Cross Examination.

I am familiar with the Lorillard Tobacco products and know their salesmen. My store is in a thickly populated residential district and I am kept pretty busy. I have not much time to talk to customers or much opportunity to hear what they are saying. A customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarettes he is buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to 3534 whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks I mean that I don't remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

3535

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if I. KAUFMAN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is I. KAUFMAN. I am of legal age and am a druggist by occupation. My store is located at 633 Albany Avenue, Hartford, Connecticut, and is located one block from the store run by C. P. Case at 597 3536
Albany Avenue. In addition to drugs we sell soda, candy and tobacco. We serve about five hundred customers a day.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco for the past four years and Beech-Nut cigarettes since they appeared on this market. I know both of these products to be manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co. I also handle Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Candies, and know that these articles are put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

When the Beech-Nut cigarette first appeared on this market I remember that two or three persons asked me 3537 whether the Beech-Nut cigarette was manufactured by the same company that manufactured the Beech-Nut chewing gum. I told them that this was not the case and that the Beech-Nut cigarette was the product of the Lorillard Tobacco Co., whereas the gum was put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. These questions made a distinct impression on my mind, and I can positively state that I never heard more than two or three such remarks, and that these were made when the cigarette first came on the market.

3538 I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely unrelated class of products from gum or candies, and I have never heard of a candy or food product concern which manufactured any tobacco. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company that looked like either a scrap tobacco or cigarette package.

Cross Examination.

I have been handling tobacco for some years and am familiar with the different brands. I have handled many of the Lorillard tobacco products and know the Lorillard salesmen who come into my store to take 3539 orders.

I am kept pretty busy waiting on my trade and do not pay a great deal of attention to what customers are saying.

I have made no particular effort to remember any inquiries, remarks or comments as to who made the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and had no reason to do so. When I say I only heard two or three inquiries, remarks or comments as to whether the Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut gum people, I mean I can not now remember any more than that.

3540

Re-direct Examination.

In my direct examination the two or three remarks which I referred to that I did hear when the Beech-Nut cigarettes first appeared, made a distinct impression on me, and if I had heard a considerably greater number than that I think I would have remembered the fact.

3541

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if the men whose names and addresses here appear, to wit:

were called as witnesses on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, they would each testify as follows:

3542

Direct Examination.

I am of legal age. In addition to drugs I sell in my store a varied line of merchandise, including such articles as stationery, fountain pens, toilet articles, confections, and tobacco.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco for the past five years and Beech-Nut cigarettes since they first came on this market about two years ago. I have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co. I also sell Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Candies, which products I know to 3543 be put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which would lead me to believe that they thought that Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

3550 I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct line of merchandise from chewing gum and candy, and I have never heard of a confection or food products company which manufactured any tobacco products. I have never seen a pakage put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette pakage.

I have handled tobacco products for some years and am familiar with the different brands. I am kept pretty

(Direct Examination Closed.)

3562 Cross Examination.

By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 1. Mr. Durham, where is your tobacco stand located?

A. 129 Church Street.

X-Q. 2. What kind of a building is that in?

A. The Second National Bank Building.

X-Q. 3. Is that one of the larger office buildings in New Haven?

3563 X-Q. 4. And is your store at the entrance where people pass coming in and out of the building?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 5. You say you have a retail store in addition to the one in the Second National Bank Building?

A. Yes, at 37 Church Street.

X-Q. 6. What is the name of that store?

A. The Durham Cigar Company.

X-Q. 7. How long have you been in the tobacco business altogether?

A. Eighteen years.

X-Q. 8. How much of that time have you been in the 3564 retail trade?

A. Always.

X-Q. 9. In what parts of the country?

A. Right here in New Haven.

X-Q. 10. How long have you had this stand and the store you speak of?

A. This stand I have had since 1916 and the store I have had since the 10th, it will be two years this month, August 10th.

X-Q. 11. How long have you been handling the P. Lorillard Co. products?

A. Always.

X-Q. 12. Always?

3565

A. Since I was in the business.

X-Q. 13. Have you handled a great many of their products?

A. Yes, I have.

X-Q. 14. Can you name a few of their tobaccos and cigarettes that you have handled?

A. Murads, Egyptian Dieties, Helmars, Beech-Nut cigarettes, Beech-Nut Tobacco, and a lot of others I can't think of now.

X-Q. 15. Have you handled large quantities of the Lorillard products before you started to handle the Beech-Nut tobacco and cigarettes?

3566

A. Yes, I always sold them.

X-Q. 16. Have you known the Lorillard salesmen?

A. Yes, I know them by coming in, yes, sure.

X-Q. 17. Do you know the Lorillard salesman here now?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 18. What is his name?

A. Which one?

X-Q. 19. What ones do you know here?

A. There is Mr.——this gentleman here.

X-Q. 20. Do you know his name?

A. Yes, he is a New Haven man. Let's see, I can't think of his name now. What is his name, Rickert? Something like that.

3567

X-Q. 21. Have you known the Lorillard salesmen for some years?

A. Only by coming in. I can't think of the name for you. I know every one of them and who they represent.

X-Q. 22. You know who they represent?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 23. When you first saw a package of the Beech-

568 Nut chewing tobacco, whose product did you think it was?

A. I will have to look it up. Naturally any man that knows the business a good deal can tell easy where it is made.

X-Q. 24. You knew that because you were in the tobacco business?

A. Sure.

X-Q. 25. And because you were familiar with the Lorillard products?

A. Yes, sure.

X-Q. 26. When you first saw the package of Beech-569 Nut cigarettes, whose product did you think it was?

A. You naturally can't tell until you look at the package. It may be American Tobacco Company or Lorillard or Reynolds Tobacco Company.

X-Q. 27. Were you handling Beech-Nut chewing gum or any of the Beech-Nut hard candies at the time you started to handle either the Beech-Nut chewing tobacco or the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. Yes, I always handled that.

X-Q. 28. Had you handled much of the chewing gum or candy?

A. Yes, I sell a lot of it.

570 X-Q. 29. Didn't you have any doubt at that time as to whether these Beech-Nut cigarettes or Beech-Nut tobacco might not be made by the makers of the Beech-Nut chewing gum?

A. No, not a man that knows the business like I do. I can tell who makes the gum or tobacco.

X-Q. 30. Mr. Durham, in your experience in the retail trade, do you find that a customer, when he comes in, asks for a tobacco or a cigarette by the name of the maker?

A. No, they ask for the name.

X-Q. 31. Like what? 3571

A. Beech-Nut cigarettes or Beech-Nut tobacco, scrap or Camels.

X-Q. 32. Do they ask for just Camels?

A. Yes, Camels, Lucky Strikes or Chesterfields.

X-Q. 33. They never ask for the maker?

A. They never ask for the maker. I don't believe there is hardly any consumer that knows who makes the stuff as far as that is concerned; as long as they know by the name, that is all they want to know.

X-Q. 34. Then would you say that tobacco and cigarettes sell by the brand name?

A. Yes, by the name. That is all they can think of. 3572
They never tell us who makes the cigarettes. They ask the name—Murads or Chesterfields, Camels or Lucky Strikes, or something like that.

X-Q. 35. Are you kept pretty busy waiting on customers?

A. Most of the time. I take care of most of them.

X-Q. 36. Do you have much time to talk to customers?

A. Oh, occasionally, yes.

X-Q. 37. At the time the Beech-Nut chewing tobacco came out, didn't you hear any remarks or questions by people as to whether it was made by the Beech-Nut 3573 chewing gum people?

A. I don't remember anything like that.

X-Q. 38. And the same thing with regard to the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. No, in fact I remember distinctly when the first cigarette came out, it was advertised in the paper and a fellow asked me what is that, a new Lorillard package of Beech-Nut cigarettes?

X-Q. 39. But in most cases, Mr. Durham, you had no way of knowing, did you, who the customers who 3574 were at your stand, thought made the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. That I can't tell you.

X-Q. 40. You had no way of knowing?

A. I had no way of knowing. I know they would come in and ask for the names and I give it to them. For instance, there has a new cigarette just come out. The customer looks at the name and reads that. He comes and says to me: "Give me a package of Rosedale cigarettes". That is a new one just out.

X-Q. 41. When you say then, that you didn't hear any remarks, inquiries or comments by people as to 3575 whether the Beech-Nut cigarette or Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco were put out by the same people that made the chewing gum, you mean you don't remember hearing any such remarks?

A. No.

(Cross Examination Closed.)

Re-direct Examination.

By Mr. Preston:

R-D Q. 1. Mr. Durham, did you ever hear of a 3576 chewing gum, candy or food products concern which manufactured any tobacco products?

A. No.

R-D Q. 2. If you had heard any considerable number of remarks among your customers or others which indicated that they thought that the Beech-Nut gum people were making the Beech-Nut cigarettes or Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, do you think you would have remembered it?

A. Yes, I would, sure.

R-D Q. 3. When you first saw this package of Beech-Nut scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes, did you or did you not wonder whether it was made by the 3577

Beech-Nut Packing Company, the people who make the Beech-Nut gum?

A. As I said before, any man that knows the business, the minute any new stuff comes out, they can tell usually where it comes from. First of all I look at the stamp, the factory number, and a fellow who knows anything about it, can tell where it comes from. It isn't the consumer. The consumer doesn't ask. The man who knows where they come from is the dealer and it is very easy to tell. In fact, when a customer comes in and brings in a cigarette box without a wrapper on or a box and where there is no name on the box, all I have 3578 to do is to look at the factory number and then I can look that up right after that. I have done it many times.

Mr. Preston: That is all.
(Re-direct Examination Closed)

Re-cross Examination.

By Mr. Johnson:

R-X Q. 1. How has Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco sold with you? 3579

A. Pretty fair. We sell a lot of it.

R-X Q. 2. Did it sell well right at the start when you first began handling it?

A. I just can't remember how it did start, but it went pretty good. But I consider Beech-Nut in the third class with Level Head; especially in New Haven it is a good seller. Beech-Nut is probably a third or fourth class tobacco.

R-X Q. 3. How have the Beech-Nut cigarettes sold with you?

A. Not very big.

3580 R-X Q. 4. Did they sell better at first than they have since?

A. Pretty well, but I don't think they are much of a success in New Haven.

R-X Q. 5. Are you selling many of them now?

A. No, not very many. We buy them only in 1,000 lots where the others we buy in 10,000 lots.

R-X Q. 6. Have you heard any complaints as to the quality of the Beech-Nut cigarettes from users?

A. No, I haven't.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

(Deposition Closed.)

(Signature of witness waived)

BARNETT DICKSTEIN, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being first duly sworn, deposes and says in answer to interrogatories propounded to him by Mr. Preston, as follows:

3582 A. Barnett Dickstein, age 38, 849 Grand Avenue, New Haven, Connecticut, general store.

Q. 2. How long have you heen in this business, Mr. Dickstein?

A. Well, for the last six years; six and a half years or so.

Q. 3. Would you name some of the kinds of merchandise that you sell?

A. I don't know from where to start.

Q. 4. Just name a few of them, if you please?

A. In the line of groceries, tobacco or candy; it depends on what you are interested in?

Q. 5. Do you sell confectionery articles? 3583

A. Yes, I sell confectionery articles.

Q. 6. Do you sell toys?

A. Yes, I sell toys, tobacco, groceries, ice cream sodas, and beers.

hearing any one say it?

A. No, I don't remember it. Possibly they did but I couldn't remember if they did. If they did ask me I just tell them what I know about it.

(Deposition Closed.)
(Signature of Witness waived.)

STIPULATION.

IT IS HEREBY STIPULATED by and between counsel for the respective parties, as follows:

3635 On August 25th, 1921, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2 (West Haven Drug Store Display) introduced as plaintiff's exhibit in the deposition of John F. Griffin of New Haven, Connecticut, was taken by Frank Madden, this photograph showing two window panels, designated as Nos. 3 and 4, of the display window of the drug store of William J. Coughlan, at Elm Street and First Avenue, West Haven, Connecticut; the display panel No. 3 showing display advertisements of Beech-Nut chewing gum, while display window No. 4 shows tobacco display advertisements including two display panels of Beech-3636 Nut cigarettes; that in this plaintiff's exhibit the words "P. Lorillard Co." appear on the upper smaller Beech-Nut cigarette advertising panel while the words "P. Lorillard Co." do not show upon the picture of the Beech-Nut cigarette package on the lower Beech-Nut cigarette panel.

That subsequently, on or about August 30th, 1921, Frank H. Simonds, a commercial photographer, located on Chapel Street, New Haven, Connecticut, at the request of counsel for the defendant, took a picture or photograph of panel No. 4 of this Coughlan window, or the panel showing the tobacco advertisements, the panels and advertising in this window having been undisturbed and being the same as when plaintiff's photograph was taken, and that, as will appear from this Simonds' photograph of West Haven Drug Store Display in the Coughlan Pharmacy, which is here introduced in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit No. 11, the lower or larger Beech-Nut advertising panel shows the words "P. Lorillard Co." on the photograph of the package of Beech-Nut cigarettes deliniated on the panel, and that, as a matter of fact, this name "P. Lorillard Co." did so appear upon this lower larger Beech-Nut advertising panel at the time plaintiff's exhibit photograph No. 2, above referred to, was taken on August 25th, 1921, although these words do not show on that photograph. 3637 3638

That if Frank H. Simonds, the photographer who took the defendant's exhibit picture on August 30th, 1921, were called as a witness he would testify that he took the picture as aforesaid, that he took such a picture with a special type of photographic plate known as a pan-chromatic plate, which is used in the art by commercial photographers for taking photographs of objects or articles when it is desired to clearly show matter printed in distinguished or different colors, as, for example, black on red, while the plaintiff's photograph, taken by Mr. Madden on behalf of the plaintiff and appearing herein as Plaintiff's exhibit No. 2, was taken with an ordinary photographic film or plate, which does not always contradistinguish the colors, especially as here—black and red—and it is further stipulated that in the following deposition of William J. Coughlan, on behalf of the defendant, the photographs shown to him as pictures of his display window, are those mentioned in this stipulation. 3639

The Coughlan Drug Store window has four panels, which, for convenience, the parties have called as follows:

3640 The westernmost one or that nearest the door, panel No. 1;

A large, more central panel adjoining No. 1 is panel No. 2;

The third and smaller panel next to the large panel and opposite to No. 1, is Panel No. 3;

And the easternmost panel, next to panel No. 3, is Panel No. 4.

WILLIAM J. COUGHLAN, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being first duly sworn, deposes and says in answer to interrogatories propounded to him 3641 by Mr. Cavanagh, as follows:

Q. 1. What is your name, residence and occupation?

A. William J. Coughlan, Roswell Avenue, Sea Gate, Connecticut. My occupation is that of druggist and I am the proprietor of a drug store located at the corner of Elm Street and First Avenue, West Haven, Connecticut.

Q. 2. Mr. Coughlan, I show you two photographs which are in this case, one being marked "Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2, West Haven Drug Store Display" and the other "Defendant's Exhibit No. 11", "Simonds' 3642 photograph of West Haven Drug Store Display at the Coughlan Pharmacy." I might state that it has been agreed between the parties that so far as the large lower Beech-Nut cigarette sign shown in the window, is concerned, the words: "P. Lorillard Co." actually appear thereon as shown in the Simonds' photograph. You had your store windows decorated with advertising matter and the like at one time as shown in these photographs, did you not?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. 3. And at about the time these pictures were taken?

A. Yes, at the time they were taken. 3643

Q. 4. I notice that one section of the window contained advertising matter of tobacco products, including the Beech-Nut cigarettes, and the other side contained certain advertising matter, including Beech-Nut chewing gum?

A. Yes.

Q. 5. Will you please relate, in your own words, as to how it happened that the window was so decorated with the gum and the tobacco display was in the other one next to it?

A. Yes. The tobacco salesman came along and noticed we had a small display in that little corner 3644 window there at the east end, Panel No. 4, and he asked me for the privilege of using it for displaying tobaccos and cigarettes made by the P. Lorillard Co. I told him he could have that privilege. About every week or every two weeks he came along and put in a display. Sometimes it was "Between The Acts" and sometimes it happened to be "Flexo Giants" and sometimes it happened to be "Beech-Nuts" so he would make his window display, and we, absolutely unconscious of what he had in that window, had a display of Beech-Nut gum in the window. The Beech-Nut gum originally was on the extreme west side or western panel of the show 3645 window, or No. 1.

Q. 6. That is the one where the gum was first, Panel No. 1?

A. That is where the gum was first, in Panel No. 1.

Q. 7. Go ahead.

A. Friday is window day and the young man asked me what to put in the windows. Being busy on prescription work and other store work at the time, I told him to change things around and put the Beech-Nut gum display on the other end of the large window or Panel No. 3, and change whatever was on Panel No. 3 to Panel No. 1, leaving the center display the same.

3646 Q. 8. What young man was this you speak of?

A. This young man we saw this afternoon.

Q. 9. He was working for you at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. 10. Now, when instructing him to make this change, did you have in mind any connection between the Beech-Nut gum and the Beech-Nut tobacco sign?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. 11. Did you yourself ever form in your mind any connection between the Beech-Nut gum and tobacco products as being made by the same people?

A. Not I myself, no.

3647 Q. 12. Did you ever have any comments, inquiries, or questions asked you by others, such as customers, which would lead you to believe they were made by the same people?

A. Never.

Q. 13. Or that they might have been told they were made by the same people?

A. No.

Q. 14. You have sold both the Beech-Nut gum and the Beech-Nut cigarettes, have you not?

A. Yes.

Q. 15. You have never known any cases where the 3648 parties confused the two products?

A. No.

Q. 16. Did the Lorillard man, who decorated your window first with the tobacco signs, have any part, by suggestion or otherwise, in that change of arrangements so that the Beech-Nut advertisement was put next to the Lorillard advertisement?

A. He had absolutely nothing to do with it.

Mr. Cavanagh: That is all.

(Direct Examination Closed.)

Cross Examination. 3649

By Mr. Bulkley:

X-Q. 1. Had you ever learned anything about the use of the word "Beech-Nut" in connection with products sold by the Beech-Nut Packing Company before you had the products in the window, the Lorillard Company products?

A. That is, so that I would be confused or think that one concern made the other?

X-Q. 2. Not at all. Simply as you have learned of the use of the word "Beech-Nut" by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, to designate the products sold by the Beech-Nut Packing Company? 3650

A. I have been familiar, of course, with the Beech-Nut gum long before the Beech-Nut cigarettes—long before I happened to sell the Beech-Nut cigarettes or the Beech-Nut tobacco in the scrap state, and it was always a marvel to us how the Beech-Nut chewing gum came ahead so fast, so that in that way I was familiar with the two concerns and knew they were entirely different.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

Cross Examination (Cont'd). 3651

By Mr. Johnson:

X-Q. 3. Mr. Coughlan, I show you again this photograph, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2, and this other photograph, Defendant's Exhibit No. 11. Are these two photographs of parts of your window with the display therein the latter part of August, 1921?

A. Those are displays that were in the window, but just what part of the month I couldn't say.

3652 X-Q. 4. This photograph, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2, does this photograph cover the window displays in the panels which you have described as Panels Nos. 3 and 4 of your window, the latter week of August, 1921?

A. That does.

X-Q. 5. And does this photograph, which is Defendant's Exhibit No. 11, cover your window display in Panel No. 4, taken a few days later, than the first photograph?

A. That is the display in the window. I couldn't tell how long after this picture here this one was taken. It may be two, three or four days, it may be a week.

X-Q. 6. The subject matter of the photograph, which 3653 is Defendant's Exhibit No. 11, is the panel No. 4, which is also in Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 2, is it?

A. Yes, the same display with the exception of the printing being off there and on there, which was called to my attention at the time this picure or this photograph was taken.

Mr. Cavanagh: The witness refers to the fact that the printing of the words: "P. Lorillard Co." is not on the package of Beech-Nut cigarettes in the lower Beech-Nut advertisement in the panel of plaintiff's exhibit, while it does appear upon the de-3654 fendant's exhibit.

X-Q. 7. Was the display, shown in Panel No. 4 in these two photographs, in position in your window at the time you had your clerk, as you have described, put the contents of Panel No. 1 in to Panel No. 3?

A. It was.

X-Q. 8. Have you a busy corner drug store, Mr. Coughlan?

A. Busy as far as customers are concerned or as far as automobiles?

X-Q. 9. Yes?

A. Why, most druggists, in referring to the corner, refer to it as a busy corner. 3655

X-Q. 10. About how many customers a day do you have in here?

A. Between five and six hundred.

X-Q. 11. Is your front window, which we have been referring to, on one of the main thoroughfares of Southern Connecticut?

A. It is. It is on one of the main roads leading from New Haven to New York.

X-Q. 12. Are you kept pretty busy waiting on customers in your store?

A. Yes. 3656

X-Q. 13. Do you have much time to talk with your customers?

A. No.

X-Q. 14. Or listen to what they are saying?

A. No.

X-Q. 15. Does a customer often ask you who makes the cigarette or tobacco he is buying?

A. Very seldom.

X-Q. 16. Have you heard any comments or inquiries from your customers or others as to whether the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut gum people? 3657

A. No.

X-Q. 17. When you say that, you mean you don't remember any such comments or remarks?

A. I mean just that. I can never recollect anybody being confused as to the same concern making both articles.

Mr. Johnson: That is all.

3658 Re-direct Examination.

By Mr. Cavanagh:

R-D. Q. 1. If you had heard any such questions, you would have remembered them, wouldn't you?

A. Positively. The people seem to be very familiar wth the Beech-Nut gum and the Beech-Nut Packing Company and I think in my experience it has been on the market so long that when they would say Beech-Nut tobacco we know it is made by a different concern.

3659 Mr. Cavanagh: That is all.

(Cross Examination closed.)

(Deposition closed.)

(Signature of witness waived.)

STIPULATION.

It is Stipulated by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if R. F. STAHL were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

3660 Direct Examination.

My name is R. F. STAHL. I am of legal age and a druggist by trade, and do business at the Marx Pharmacy, 35 Kimberly Avenue, New Haven, Connecticut. In addition to drugs I handle such articles as confections, tobacco, stationery and toilet articles.

I have sold Beech-Nut cigarettes since they came on this market and have always known them to be the product of the P. Lorillard Co. I have sold Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints for a number of years past and know that both of these articles are made by the 3667

Beech-Nut Packing Company.

No Lorillard salesman ever made any remarks to me which indicated any connection between the makers of the Beech-Nut cigarette and the producers of Beech-Nut gum or mints.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut cigarette was manufactured by the same company that manufactures the Beech-Nut gum or Mints.

I regard cigarettes as an entirely distinct line of merchandise from gum or candy, and I have never 3668 heard of a confection or food product concern which manufactured any tobacco products. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

My store is located two blocks from the drug store at 615 Howard Avenue, New Haven, where James J. Cashman, Jr., works.

Cross Examination.

I am a clerk at the Marx Pharmacy and wait on cus- 3669 tomers, not only at the tobacco stand but in all parts of the store. My employer also waits on customers but looks particularly after the putting up of prescriptions.

I am kept pretty busy and have not a great deal of time to listen to what people are saying at the tobacco and cigarette stand. I have been handling tobacco products for several years and am familiar with the various brands. I have handled various brands of the Lorillard tobaccos and cigarettes and know the Lorillard salesmen who come into our store to take orders.

664 I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I don't remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

665 If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if MISS AGNES R. McKAY were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, she would testify as follows:

666 Direct Examination.

My name is AGNES R. McKAY. I am of legal age and am the manager of the Strand Smoke Shop, located at 239 Elm Street, New Haven. This shop is a small one, measuring about 25 feet by 12 feet. We sell tobacco and confections here and as the store is located among the buildings of Yale University, our customers are principally students. During the school session we have approximately 1,000 customers a day but during the summer months our trade is not nearly so heavy.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes here for the past two years, and I have 3667 known all that time that they were both products of the Lorillard Tobacco Co. We also handle Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints. I know these products to be made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect or which led me to believe that they thought that Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, and I have never seen a package put up by the Beech Nut Packing Company that looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package. 3668

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as a distinct line of merchandise from chewing gum and confections and I have never heard of a food product company that manufactured any tobacco products.

Cross Examination.

My "Smoke Shop" has a high class trade. I do a big business with Yale students during the college year. I frequently have a store full of students, who do a great deal of talking and joking but I am usually so busy here waiting on them that I can't try to listen to 3669 much of what they say. I have been running the store myself since my father's death several years ago.

I have always handled various of the Lorillard products, especially their cigarettes. I have to keep myself informed as to the different brands, and especially the new brands because I cater to a fastidious trade.

I know the Lorillard salesmen who come frequently into my store to take orders. I have seldom heard one of my customers ask who makes the cigarette or tobacco he is buying.

While I have kept the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes, I haven't a great deal of call at 3670 this shop for the scrap tobacco and the Beech-Nut cigarette has not been a big seller as compared to some of the other cheaper brands.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks I mean that I don't remember any.

3671 Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if A. WOLINSKY were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., 3672 defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is A. WOLINSKY. I am of legal age and am a grocery by trade, and do business at 1993 Whitney Avenue, Whitneyville, New Haven Connecticut. My store is a fairly large one located in a suburban thinly settled residential neighborhood. I have one clerk to assist me in waiting on my trade.

I sell Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes, both of which articles I know to be manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co. The scrap tobacco is a good seller with me but the cigarette is only a fair seller. I handle Beech-Nut chewing gum, Beech-Nut Mints and Beech-Nut Peanut Butter, and I know all of these products are made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. 3673

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought that Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard tobacoo, and cigarettes as a distinct line of merchandise from gum or food products, and I have never heard of a food products company which manufactured any tobacco products, and have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package. 3674

My store is located on the same street west and about a quarter of a mile away from the drug store at 1235 Whitney Avenue, where Nathan Hammerman works.

I sell Polo Ketchup and Polo cigarettes, Murad Canned corn and Murad cigarettes, Comet Tobacco and Comet Rice. None of these products are manufactured by the same concern. 3675

It is Stipulated that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to the witness's testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for many years and am familiar with the different brands. I have handled many of the Lorillard products and know the Lorillard

6 salesmen who come into my store frequently to take my orders. My customers hardly ever ask who makes the cigarettes or tobacco they are buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks I mean that I don't remember any.

7 Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if SAM SUKLOFF, JR., were called as a witness on behalf of P.
8 Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is SAM SUKLOFF, JR., I am of legal age and a retail merchant by trade. I do business at 1012 Chapel Street, New Haven, Connecticut. I sell tobacco products and novelties in my store, and during the school session at Yale University, I serve about a thousand customers a day, many of them students. There are always two clerks on duty here and sometimes three, including myself.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco since 1915 and 3679
Beech-Nut cigarettes since they appeared on this market, something like two years ago. I have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co. I also handle Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints, and I know these articles to be the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Although no one ever asked me whether Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco was manufactured by the same company that makes Beech-Nut chewing gum, I do remember that when the cigarette was first put on the market a few of my customers did ask me whether there was any connection between the makers of the gum and the makers 3680 of the cigarettes. These instances occurred shortly after I began selling the cigarettes, and since then I have heard no remarks, comments or inquiries among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut cigarette to be manufactured by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut chewing gum. I told those persons who asked me those questions that the cigarettes were made by the P. Lorillard Co., while the gum was manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct line of merchandise from chewing gum or confections, 3681 and I have never heard of a confection or food products company which made any tobacco products. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

While I do not have a great demand for scrap tobacco, the Beech-Nut scrap is my best selling scrap tobacco. Although the Beech-Nut cigarette is a slow seller as compared to such leaders as Camels or Lucky Strikes, I have, in the aggregate, sold a great many packages of this brand.

382 Cross Examination.

I am the proprietor of the University Smoke Shop at 1012 Chapel Street, New Haven, and cater largely to Yale students. During the college year my place of business is often crowded with students. There is usually considerable conversation and banter going on, and I am too busy waiting on them to be able to listen to much of what is being said.

On account of my particular trade I make it a point to keep myself well informed as to the various brands of tobacco and cigarettes. I have handled many of the 383 Lorillard Co. products and have sold large quantities of them. I know the Lorillard salesmen who come into my store frequently to take orders. The customer almost never asks who makes the cigarette or tobacco he is buying.

I have made no effort to remember any remarks, inquiries or comments as to whether the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people who make the Beech-Nut chewing gum, and other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and when I say that I have heard only a few such inquiries or comments in regard to the Beech-Nut cigarettes I mean 384 that is all I remember.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory, but I am sure I have not heard any such remarks except shortly after the appearance of the cigarette on this market.

3685

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if C. C. GILLESPIE were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is C. C. GILLESPIE, I am of legal age, a storekeeper by trade, and do business under the name of T. P. Gillespie & Company at 744 Chapel Street, New Haven, Connecticut. In addition to drugs we sell here 3686 such articles as toilet articles, fountain pens, stationery, tobacco and confections.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco for a number of years past and Beech-Nut cigarettes since they appeared on this market, and have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co.; and I have long known that the Lorillard Co. is one of the oldest and largest tobacco concerns. I also sell Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints, and I know that these are made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct 3687 line of merchandies from the gum or candy, and I have never heard of a gum, confection or food products concern which manufactured any tobacco products, and have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

I sell Apple chewing gum and Apple tobacco, made by different companies; Mavis talcum powder and Mavis candy, made by different companies; Gem nail clippers and Gem razor blades, made by different companies; Ideal bandages, Ideal brushes and Ideal foun-

3688 tain pens, all made by different companies; Ever Ready razor blades and Ever Ready search lights, made by different companies; Velvet pencils and Velvet tobacco made by different companies.

IT IS STIPULATED that objection is made by plaintiff's counsel to the witness's testimony in regard to different goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

3689 We have one of the busiest downtown drug stores in New Haven. I wait on customers in all parts of the store myself and am kept so busy as a rule that I have very little time to listen to what customers are saying about tobacco and cigarettes.

I have handled tobacco products for a great many years and am familiar with the various brands. I have sold large quantities of the P. Lorillard Co. tobacco products and know the Lorillard salesmen who are frequently in my store taking orders. I do not remember a customer ever asking me who made the particular tobacco or cigarette he was buying.

3690 I have made no particular effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. I also sell Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut mints, which I know to be manufactured by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks I mean that I don't remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

STIPULATION. 3709

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if MEYER LEVINE were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is MEYER LEVINE. I am of legal age, a general storekeeper by occupation and doing business at 393 Campbell Avenue, West Haven, Connecticut. My store is located two blocks from the store at 630 Campbell Avenue where Edward J. Glynn works. 3710

I sell a varied line of merchandise, including stationery, tobacco, confections, playing cards, toilet articles, and so forth. I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco for the past five years and Beech-Nut cigarettes for the past two years, and I have always known these products to be manufactured by the Lorillard Tobacco Co.

I have handled a great many Lorillard products and know the Lorillard Co. to be one of the oldest and largest of the tobacco concerns. I sell Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints, and I know both of these products to be made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. 3711

I have never heard any inquiries, comments or remarks among my customers or others which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco to be manufactured by the same company which makes the Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints; but when the cigarette first came on this market several of my customers would ask me whether the new cigarette was made by the same company that made the Beech-Nut gum. I told them that such was not the case and I explained to them who was the maker of each product.

3712 Since shortly after the cigarette was introduced into this market I have heard no such comments or remarks among my customers or elsewhere.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as a distinct line of merchandise from chewing gum or confections, and have never heard of a food products concern which manufactured any tobacco, nor have I ever seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

Cross Examination.

3713 I have sold large quantities of P. Lorillard Co. tobacco products and know the Lorillard salesmen who come into my store frequently to take orders. I have never paid a great deal of attention to what people in my store were saying about tobacco and cigarettes. I do not remember of any customer ever asking me who made the particular cigarette or tobacco he was purchasing.

I have made no effort to remember any comments, inquiries, or remarks as to whether the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people who make the Beech-Nut gum and other Beech-3714 Nut Packing Company products, and when I say that I have heard several make such remarks or comments as to the Beech-Nut cigarettes, I mean I do not remember any more than that.

Re-direct Examination.

I can only say that I do not remember having heard more than several such comments or remarks. I can further state that if I had heard a substantially greater number of them, it would have been impressed on my memory.

3715

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if JOHN K. STEVENSON were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is JOHN K. STEVENSON. I am of legal age, a druggist by trade and my store is located near the store at 630 Campbell Avenue, where Edward J. Glynn works. 3716

In addition to drugs I carry in my store a varied line of products, including confection, tobacco products, toilet articles, stationery, periodicals, and so forth. I have sold Beech-Nut scrap tobacco for the past five years and Beech-Nut cigarettes since they first appeared on this market about two years ago. I know both of these products to be manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co. I handle Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut mints, and I know that these are products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. 3717

I do not regard tobacco or cigarettes as in any way related to chewing gum or mints, and I have never heard of a gum or confections concern which manufactured any tobacco products. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

3718 I have been handling tobacco products in my store for a good many years and have known of the P. Loirllard Co. all that time, and know it to be one of the largest and oldest of the tobacco companies.

Cross Examination.

I have handled large quantities of P. Lorillard Co. tobacco products and know their salesmen, who come into my store. A customer hardly ever asks the name of the maker of the tobacco or cigarette he is buying.

I am kept pretty busy waiting on customers and 3719 haven't much time or opportunity to talk to them or listen to what they are saying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I don't remember.

Re-direct Examination.

3721

I am of legal age, druggist by trade, and run a store where, in addition to drugs, such articles as toilet articles, stationery, periodicals, confections and tobacco are sold. I have handled Beech-Nut scrap tobacco for five or six years and the Beech-Nut cigarettes since they appeared on this market two years ago.

I have always known that both of these products were manufactured by the P. Lorillard Co. The Lorillard salesmen who come into my store are either already acquainted with me or tell me when they introduce themselves what company they represent. 3723

I sell Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints, and I know that these products are made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

3724 I have never heard of a gum, candy or food products concern which engaged in the tobacco business, and I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct line of merchandise from confections or food products. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

Cross Examination.

I have sold large quantities of P. Lorillard Co. tobacco products, and know their salesmen from time to time.
3725 I wait on customers in the various parts of my drug store, and am usually too busy to listen to their conversation. I haven't had much time or opportunity to hear what they were saying about tobacco or cigarettes. I do not remember a customer ever asking who made the cigarettes or tobacco he was buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments, or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say 3726 that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I don't remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

I am of legal age. I have sold a number of the products of the P. Lorillard Co. for a number of years past, 3767 among them Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes. I have always known that these two articles were manufactured by that company. I have handled for a number of years past Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints, and have always known that these products were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

As a rule I am already acquainted with the Lorillard salesmen who call on me at frequent intervals, but when one of them calls, who is not already known to me, he introduces himself as a representative of the P. Lorillard Co.

None of these tobacco salesmen ever made any re-
3768 marks to me which indicated that there was any connection between the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco and the Beech-Nut cigarettes and the makers of the Beech-Nut chewing gum or Beech-Nut mints.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries, or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe they thought Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct line of merchandise from chewing gum or confections, and I have never heard of a chewing gum, confections or food products company which manufactured any to- 3769 bacco products. I have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

IT IS STIPULATED by the parties, through their respective counsel, that JOHN H. ECKLER, JR., named in this stipulation, would say that in addition he sells Star razor blades and Star tobacco, made by different companies; Chesterfield pipes and Chesterfield cigarettes, made by different companies; Uncle Sam playing cards and Uncle Sam Tobacco, made by different companies.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for some years and am familiar with the different brands. I have sold a considerable quantity of P. Lorillard Co. products and knew that the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes were products of that company, before I first put 3771

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or 3772 not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments, or remarks, I mean that I don't remember any.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco for the past five years, have always known this to be a product of the P. Lorillard Co. and have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that this Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco was a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, the makers of Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints, which articles I handle here in this store.

I have sold Beech-Nut cigarettes since they appeared 3775 on this market two years ago, and when they first appeared I heard possibly as many as three or four customers inquire whether the Beech-Nut cigarette was made by the same company that manufactured the Beech-Nut gum.

I knew that this was not the case and told these inquirers that the Beech-Nut cigarette was made by the P. Lorillard Co. whereas the Beech-Nut gum was made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, and that there was no connection between the two concerns.

Except for these three or four inquiries when the cigarette first came out I have never heard any re- 3776 marks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect or which led me to believe that they thought the Beech-Nut cigarette was made by the same company which manufactured the Beech-Nut chewing gum.

I have handled Lorillard products for a great many years and I know the Lorillard Co. to be one of the oldest and largest of the tobacco concerns.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct line of merchandise from gum, confections or food products, and I have never known of a gum, confections or food products concern which manufactured any 3777

I sell Blue Ribbon matches and Blue Ribbon Playing Cards, made by different companies; Star tobacco and Star shaving brushes, made by different companies; Chesterfield Pipes and Chsterfield cigarettes, made by different companies.

3778 goods sold under similar names and the makers of same, on the ground that the same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for a good many years and am familiar with the different brands. I have sold large quantities of P. Lorillard Co. products.

I am kept pretty busy in my store and haven't much time or opportunity to talk to customers or listen to what they are saying. I have made no effort to remember any remarks, comments or inquiries as to whether 3779 the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the same people that make the Beech-Nut chewing gum and other Beech-Nut Packing Company products. When I say that I have heard three or four such remarks or inquiries, I mean that I do not remember any more than that.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard a considerably greater number of such inquiries than the three or four which I have mentioned, I am sure I would have recalled the fact, and I can say 3780 positively that I have never heard any such inquiries or remarks since shortly after the appearance of the Beech-Nut cigarette on this market.

3781

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if MRS. H. FINESON were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, she would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is MRS. H. FINESON. I am of legal age and am the manager of an up-to-date variety store, located at No. 5 Main Street, Norwalk, Connecticut. I have been in this business for five years past and 3782 have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco all that time.

I have always known this to be a product of the Lorillard Co. When the Lorillard salesmen first called on me after I opened this store, they introduced themselves to me as representatives of that company.

I have sold Beech-Nut cigarettes since they appeared on this market about two years ago and have always known that this product was also made by the P. Lorillard Co. I sell Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints, made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or com- 3783
ments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as a distinct line of merchandise from confections or food products. I have never heard of a food products company which made any tobacco products, and have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a cigarette or a scrap tobacco package.

784 Cross Examination.

I have handled tobacco for a long time, and am familiar with the different brands. I have sold considerable quantities of P. Lorillard tobacco products and know the Lorillard salesmen who come into my store to take orders.

I keep a good many different kinds of things in my store and am kept pretty busy waiting on customers, who are asking for the different things. I haven't much time or opportunity to talk to the customers or listen to what they are saying about tobacco or cigarettes. A customer hardly ever asks me who makes the particular tobacco or cigarette he is buying.

785

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut chewing gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks I mean that I don't remember any.

786 Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

3787

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if JAMES P. SHEEHAN were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is JAMES P. SHEEHAN, I am of legal age, a retail tobacconist, and do business at No. 23 Wall Street, Norwalk, Connecticut. I have been in the retail tobacco business for the past thirty years and all that time have handled some of the products of the P. Lorillard Co. I know of that concern as one of the largest and oldest of the tobacco companies. 3788

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco for the past five or six years and Beech-Nut cigarettes for the past two years, and have always known that both of these products were made by the P. Lorillard Co.

I also sell Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. 3789

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct and separate line of produce from gum and mints. I have never heard of a gum, confections or food products concern which put out any tobacco products and have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looks like either a Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

3790 Cross Examination.

I have sold large quantities of Lorillard tobacco products during my time in the business, and have, for many years, known the Lorillard salesmen who come into my store to take orders.

I have a busy tobacco store and haven't a great deal of time or opportunity to talk to customers or listen to what they are saying. A customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarette he is buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut
3791 Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut chewing gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks I mean that I don't remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I 3792 think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if A. M. SELIGSON were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is A. M. SELIGSON, I am of legal age and am the manager of the S. & S. Tobacco Company, 36

Wall Street, Norwalk, Connecticut. This company 3793 operates a retail store where tobacco, razors, flash lights, chewing gum and candy are sold. I, myself, am in charge of this store and wait on the customers, who number about four hundred a day.

I have handled Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco for the past five years and Beech-Nut cigarettes since they appeared on this market about two years ago. I have always known these products to be made by the P. Lorillard Co. I sell Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints, made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard tobacco and cigarettes as an entirely distinct line of merchandise from gum and confections, and have 3794 never heard of a confections or food products concern which manufactured any tobacco products, and have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, which looked like either a scrap tobacco or a cigarette package.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Cross Examination. 3795

I have been a long time in the trade and have sold large quantities of P. Lorillard Co. tobacco products. I know the Lorillard salesmen who come into my store to take orders.

I am in a busy store and haven't much time or opportunity to talk to customers or listen to what they are saying. A customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarette he is buying.

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether 3796 or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut chewing gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks, I mean that I don't remember any.

Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such 3797 would have been impressed on my memory.

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel, that if W. A. CLARK were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is W. A. CLARK, I am of legal age, and 3798 I have been in the retail tobacco business for the past thirty years and have been located for the past fifteen years at Washington and South Main Streets, South Norwalk, Connecticut.

My store is at the very center of South Norwalk and I have about three hundred customers a day. This store is one block from the store where Mr. Morelli works.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco for the past five or six years and Beech-Nut cigarettes for the past two years, and have always known that both of these products were made by the P. Lorillard Co.

I also sell Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut 3799
Mints made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I have never heard any remarks, inquiries or comments among my customers or others to the effect, or which led me to believe that they thought Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes were the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

I regard tobacco, and cigarettes as an entirely distinct and separate line of produce from gum and mints. I have never heard of a gum confections or food products concern which put out any tobacco products and have never seen a package put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company which looked like either a Beech-Nut Scrap 3800 tobacco or a cigarette package.

Cross Examination.

I have sold large quantities of Lorillard tobacco products during my time in the business, and have, for many years, known the Lorillard salesmen who come into my store to take orders.

I have a busy tobacco store and haven't great deal of time or opportunity to talk to customers or listen to what they are saying. A customer hardly ever asks who makes the tobacco or cigarette he is buying.

3801

I have made no effort to remember any inquiries, comments or remarks as to who makes the Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes, and as to whether or not they are made by the same company that makes the Beech-Nut chewing gum or other Beech-Nut Packing Company products, and I had no reason to do so. When I say that I have never heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks I mean that I don't remember any.

3802 Re-direct Examination.

If I had heard any such inquiries, comments or remarks in any appreciable numbers, or frequently, I think I would have remembered the same, for such would have been impressed on my memory.

STIPULATION.

IT IS STIPULATED by and between the parties hereto, through their respective counsel that if C. F. TARLOV were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Co., 3803 defendant, he would testify as follows:

Direct Examination.

My name is C. F. TARLOV. I am of legal age and a retail tobacconist, doing business under the name of Tarlov Brothers in a store, located just across the street from that of W. A. Clark, South Norwalk, Connecticut.

My store is located one block from the fruit store at No. 22 Union Street, South Norwalk, where John Morelli works.

I have sold Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco for the past five 3804 or six years and Beech-Nut cigarettes for the past two years, and have always known that both of these products were made by the P. Lorillard Co.

I also sell Beech-Nut chewing gum and Beech-Nut Mints made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

vs.
BEECH-NUT PACKING COMPANY.

Trade-Mark Opposition No. 2805.

Beech-Nut.

Answer.

TO THE HON. COMMISSIONER OF PATENTS:

The Answer of Beech-Nut Packing Company to the Notice of Opposition of P. Lorillard Company, Opposition No. 2805.

This applicant, now and at all times saving and reserving unto itself all benefit and advantage of exception to the many errors, uncertainties, imperfections and insufficiencies in the Notice of Opposition contained for answer thereto, or to so much and such parts thereof as this applicant is advised it is material or necessary for it to make answer to, answering says:

First: This applicant admits the allegations in the first paragraph of the Notice of Opposition.

Second: This applicant, further answering, denies that for many years past, to-wit, since 1899, or prior thereto, the word symbol Beech Nut has been continuously used by the opposer, P. Lorillard Company, or its predecessors in business and title as a trade-mark for tobacco products and particularly scrap tobaccos which are adapted to and utilized for both chewing and smoking purposes.

Third: This applicant denies that the opposer, P. Lorillard Company, is the owner of all the right, title and interest in and to the said trade-mark Beech Nut for tobacco products.

Fourth: This applicant denies that at all times since the alleged adoption of the trade-mark Beech Nut by the opposer, about 1899, or prior thereto, the opposer has continuously used the said trade-mark, or its predecessors in business, from whom it derived title, as a trade-mark for tobacco products, and particularly scrap tobaccos which are adapted to and utilized for both chewing and smoking purposes.

Fifth: This applicant denies that since the alleged adoption of the trade-mark Beech Nut by the opposer in 1899, or prior thereto, as aforesaid, the said trade-mark has been uniformly known and recognized as indicating the true origin of the goods and as being the true property of the opposer or its predecessors.

Sixth: This applicant denies that the tobacco products of opposer, P. Lorillard Company, and its predecessors in business, marketed under the said trade-mark Beech Nut, have had for many years and now have an enviable reputation as of superior quality.

Seventh: This applicant admits that the trade-mark Beech Nut sought to be registered by the applicant, Beech-Nut Packing Company, conflicts with the trade-mark Beech Nut of the opposer, but denies that the trade-mark Beech Nut sought to be registered by the applicant is an infringement upon any trade-mark rights of the opposer.

Eighth: This applicant denies that the goods for which applicant seeks to register the trade-mark Beech Nut are of the same descriptive property and belong to the same class as those to which the trade-mark of the opposer has been and is now being used.

Ninth: This applicant denies that the trade-mark Beech Nut of the opposer has been in actual and continuous use as a trade-mark by the opposer and its predecessors since a date prior to the use of the word symbol Beech Nut as a trade-mark by the applicant, Beech-Nut Packing Company, prior to any use of the word symbol Beech Nut as a trade-mark by the applicant Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Tenth: This applicant admits that the word symbol Beech Nut sought to be registered by Beech-Nut Packing Company as a trade-mark is so similar in form, appearance, sound and other characteristics to the trade-mark Beech Nut of the opposer, as to be identical therewith, and actually does cause confusion to the purchasing public, and is liable to cause damage to the applicant, but denies that the use of the trade-mark by the applicant has caused any damage to the opposer, P. Lorillard Company, and denies that the P. Lorillard Company is the lawful owner of the trade-mark Beech Nut.

Eleventh: This applicant admits that the manner in which the Beech-Nut Packing Company uses its alleged trade-mark upon and in connection with tobacco products is such as to obviously cause confusion and deception to the purchasing public by leading the purchasing public into the belief that it is buying or accepting, and into buying or accepting the goods of the P. Lorillard Company in place of the goods of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Twelfth: This applicant avers that since 1891 this applicant and its predecessors have used the trade-mark Beech Nut as the predominating trade-name or mark of the business of this applicant corporation and its predecessors and for many years have used the trade-mark Beech Nut as part of the corporate name of the Beech-Nut Packing Company; that the business of the applicant is constantly expanding by adding to the line of manufacture of the applicant many new products which can be marketed through the same channels as its other products, and that the manufacture or sale of a tobacco product logically comes within the general line of expansion of the business of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Q. 31. How is the word Beech-Nut written?

A. It is written same as it always has been, same as on the letterheads, and same as on all printed matter.

Q. 32. Can you produce a collection of labels illustrating the labels used on the Beech-Nut line?

A. I can and do.

By Mr. Hinton: The collection of labels produced by witness is offered and introduced into evidence as Beech-Nut Exhibit Collection of labels.

Summarized statement from Beech-Nut price-lists produced by the witness is offered and introduced in the evidence as Beech-Nut Exhibit Summary of Products.

Q. 33. To what extent has the business of the Beech-Nut Packing Co. been advertised?

A. In dollars and cents, you mean?

Q. 34. Approximately.

A. I could not say, but I would say millions of dollars. I think I can get that information.

Q. 35. Will you please get a statement showing the extent of advertising year by year since 1910, at your convenience?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 36. In what territories has this advertising been done?

A. Nationally.

Q. 37. State whether or not this advertising has featured the Beech-Nut Packing Co.'s label, which you have described and produced?

A. It does.

Q. 38. From your knowledge of merchandising and of the Beech-Nut Packing Co., will you please state what the Beech-Nut label which you have described and produced stands for in the minds of the public?

A. I believe it has stood for the best that could be made of the article on which it appeared.

Q. 39. Will you please state whether or not it was associated in the mind of the public with any particular article.

A. There are various degrees of that.

Q. 40. My question is directed to the fact that whether the presence of the Beech-Nut label indicated that whatever article so marked was a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Co. or whether it was associated solely with a single article.

A. I think it means many articles.

Q. 41. Would these articles be of the same character?

A. No, sir.

Q. 42. I notice from the summarized statement which you have produced that at least as early as 1911, the Beech-Nut Packing Company was selling chewing gum. I understand that this chewing gum bore the same label as applied to the rest of the Beech-Nut products, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. 43. Can you produce a memo. taken from the records of your Company indicating the growth of the business in chewing gum of your Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you kindly write into the records the figures from this memo. which you have, showing sales of chewing gum in boxes by the year.

A. Yes, sir.

1912	829,089
1913	2,955,284
1914	5,124,797
1915	6,428,585
1916	7,231,891
1917	7,404,584
1918	3,392,707
1919	3,646,324

Q. 45. How many packages of gum were in a box?

A. Twenty.

Q. 46. You have testified about the standing of the Beech-Nut label, which you have described and produced, before the public. Upon what do you base your opinion as to the meaning of the Beech-Nut label to the public?

A. I can only say again that the Beech-Nut label means quality to the buyer.

Q. 47. Have you had any conversations which indicate to you that the Beech-Nut label has this meaning before the public?

A. Yes. I have had people say to me 'you can sell anything under the Beech-Nut label.'

Q. 48. How many times has that sort of conversation occurred?

A. Many times. My answer has always been that we had to make goods of high quality if they are to sell under the Beech-Nut label.

Q. 49. In what class of stores are Beech-Nut products sold?

A. In all kinds of stores.

Q. 50. State whether or not the Beech-Nut label, which you have described, is and has been prominently displayed in stores where the goods are sold.

A. It is.

Q. 51. How generally is this true?

A. It is true to the extent of our having used window display material to the extent of thousands of dollars per year, and that material has invariably been placed in the window.

Q. 52. I refer to the actual label on package.

A. Actual labels. All packages without exception bear fac-simile of the label or the package has a label on it. In fact on our chewing gum box there is a reproduction of the package.

Q. 53. How large was the business of the Imperial Packing Company in 1891? How many operatives did they employ at that time?

A. We had only five or six.

Q. 54. What is your monthly business at the present time?

A. Over a million dollars.

Direct examination closed.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Cavanaugh.

X-Q. 55. I understood you to say that the Imperial Packing Company in 1891 packed beef and bacon?

A. No, hams and bacon.

X-Q. 56. Can you produce any of the labels used by the Imperial Packing Co. on these products?

A. Not that I know of.

X-Q. 57. Are you familiar with the labels?

A. We might or might not have had what was called a label in those early months. As I remember it now within a few months of the start we put on the Beech-Nut label, for we realized after we started in business that "Imperial" was not a good name, was not a brand name. It was criticized by some people as being a foreign name, not an American name.

X-Q. 58. You were one of the Trustees of the Imperial Packing Co., were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

> Offered in evidence by Mr. Cavanaugh: I now offer in evidence the certified copy of the Certificate of Incorporation of the Imperial Packing Co., and notary is asked to mark the same P. Lorillard Co. Cross Exhibit 20.

X-Q. 59. I have you herewith a Patent Office copy of registered trade-mark No. 19838 dated July 7, 1891, to the Imperial Packing Co. for hams and bacon, and the drawing of this registration copy shows what is evidently a label. Do you ever recall the Imperial Packing Company used a label like that upon its goods?

A. That was branded on the ham. Branded in with an iron.

X-Q. 60. The entire representation?

A. Yes, without doubt.

X-Q. 61. I also show you a Patent Office copy of trade-mark Reg. No. 24978, dated July 3, 1894, to Imperial Packing Co. for Pork Lard. Do you ever recall that label being used by the Imperial Packing Co. on its goods?

A. That was another brand, used by branding with iron.

X-Q. 62. Do you recall that label?

A. That looks just like an old branding iron to me.

X-Q. 63. I also call your attention to Patent Office copy of registered trade-mark No. 36,444, registered May 21, 1901, by the Beech-Nut Packing Co. Do you recognize that label or mark shown on the drawing?

A. Yes, I recognize that.

X-Q. 64. Did the Beech-Nut Packing Co. use that identical mark?

A. In connection with something else, in connection with label or something.

X-Q. 65. What I want to know, did the Beech-Nut Packing Co. ever use that identical mark shown in that drawing?

A. I think it was used in connection with wording.

X-Q. 66. Did it have a circle?

A. It is evident it had.

X-Q. 67. Likewise the Imperial Packing Co. used the matter shown on the two registrations?

A. Those were brands as I stated.

X-Q. 68. Never used it in the form of a label?

A. I do not remember that. I do remember the brands.

X-Q. 69. Both brands are identical with the drawings?

A. They must have been.

X-Q. 70. I understand you cannot produce any of the labels originally used by the Imperial Packing Co.

A. I do not think we could. Everything we had was burned in 1903, unless we could get something from some outside place.

X-Q. 71. Can you state when the Beech-Nut Packing Co. began the use of the oval in connection with its label or mark?

2164

A. My memory is from the very first.

X-Q. 72. What date was that?

A. I would say in 1892.

X-Q. 73. I understand you used that mark on all its goods?

A. All except the other brands, viz., Mohawk, Holly and Erie, so branded because they were not as good as Beech-Nut.

X-Q. 74. I have called your attention to the trade-mark that showed a circle and showed a beech nut.

A. I think that was used only for burning purposes.

X-Q. 75. Was it used on canned goods?

A. We did not make canned goods at that time. It may have stipulated that, but we did not make them.

X-Q. 76. I am directing your attention to trade-mark 36,440 registered May 21, 1901. It shows a circle with the word Beech-Nut and picture of nut with three leaves in the center. In the certificate of registration it is stated:

> "It is usually displayed on the cans, jars, boxes and other packages containing the goods, by placing thereon a printed label on which the described trade-mark is shown."
> Now, this registration No. 36,444 does not show the oval but it shows a circle. I understood you to state from the beginning you have used the oval trade-mark such as shown on the specimen label you have produced.

A. That is my memory.

X-Q. 77. You do not recall that the concern used that on canned goods?

A. I do not recall that the Company used that other than to burn into the meat.

X-Q. 78. But that trade-mark No. 36,444 is for canned goods.

A. We did not make any canned goods at that time.

X-Q. 79. As I understand it at the time this trade-mark was obtained you did not make canned goods?

A. Yes, that is from the standpoint of glass jars.

X-Q. 80. You do not recall having used that mark?

A. I do not recall. I recognize it as something we used in burning into the brand, and I think on account of the small size of that we had difficulty in making the impression with such a long brand, and I think possibly that was the idea of using that without letters or printed matter.

X-Q. 81. Your recollection is, as I understand it, you used the oval since the Beech-Nut Packing Co. was incorporated?

A. My recollection is we used the oval label on hams and bacon since 1892.

X-Q. 82. Then it appears that although your Company registered trade-marks 24978 and 36,444 in the Patent Office in 1892, you did not at that early date show the present oval label which is shown on the specimen.

Objected to by Mr. Hinton: That question is objected to as being entirely unwarranted. The witness has not been qualified to state that he knows all of the early registrations of the Beech-Nut Packing Co. nor has there been any further evidence offered to indicate how many additional registrations were obtained for that Company.

By Mr. Cavanaugh: The witness was one of the Trustees or officers of the original Imperial Packing Co. and is now an officer of the Beech-Nut Packing Co., and as such is presumed to be familiar with the business.

By Mr. Hinton: He would not necessarily be familiar with the great many registrations of the Company, neither would be necessarily be familiar with the very minor variations in the labels. It is particularly called to the attention of the Court that in Registration No. 19,838, it is stated emphatically: that the various accessories including the name Imperial Packing Company, and other features of the picture with the exception of the word "Beech-Nut" may be varied or omitted, and statement to the same effect appeared in Registration No. 36,444 and in Registration No. 24,-978 of 1894 these words appear:

"The trade-mark of said company consists of the word-symbol "Beech-Nut." This has generally been arranged as shown in the accompanying fac-simile, consisting of an oblong card in the lower left hand corner of which is a representation of the leaf of beech tree resting on an oval, etc."

These remarks are interjected simply to clear up the matter at the proper place.

X-Q. 83. In this summary of goods sold by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, that you have produced, I ask you if the schedule for each year as set out therein is complete as to the general character of the goods put out by this Company?

A. Yes, I think so, taken right from the pricelists.

X-Q. 84. As I understand it, in 1919, the Beech-Nut Packing Company packed and marketed bulk goods, ham and bacon; sliced bacon and beef in glass; Sauce, Catsup, Preserves of various sorts; Jellied Fruit; Chewing Gum and Candies. Is that right?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 85. That is about a complete list of goods. Have not mentioned every article that appeared on the list.

A. Yes.

X-Q. 86. Did you put out any cigarettes?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 87. When did you put out the cigarettes?

A. I could not tell you the exact date.

X-Q. 88. It was in the year 1919, was it not?

A. I could not say that for sure.

X-Q. 89. Are you putting out any cigarettes or other tobacco products today?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 90. When did you stop putting them out?

A. We only made two or three sales of cigarettes. I do not know that there was more than one sale. I could not tell you when.

X-Q. 91. Would your records show that?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 92. Would you mind telling me the name of the party you sold them to?

A. I will get it later.

X-Q. 93. I note that your application for registration of trade-mark for cigarettes No. 119,930, and which is involved in this opposition proceedings, claims a trade-mark use of the word Beech-Nut for cigarettes since June 12, 1919. Will that assist in refreshing your recollection as to the date when the Beech-Nut Packing Company began to put out cigarettes.

A. I have to be governed by what the records show.

X-Q. 94. Did the Beech-Nut Packing Co. ever put out other tobacco products outside of cigarettes?

A. Not that I know of.

X-Q. 95. How large a quantity of these cigarettes was put out?

A. I would have to refresh on that by the actual sale.

X-Q. 96. Did I understand you to say that you had available at the present time a sample package of the cigarettes?

A. I do not know if we have or not. I could find out by inquiring.

X-Q. 97. Did you ever see one of these packages of cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 98. Can you describe it to me? How was it labeled?

A. I cannot describe it. I cannot give what might be called a good description.

X-Q. 99. What was the color of the box?

A. I would have to see it to give you an accurate description. I would not want to say it was white and red and then have it turn out blue and red.

X-Q. 100. How was the word Beech-Nut printed on?

A. Will see if I can find a package.

> The witness produced a package of cigarettes bearing the word "Beech-Nut" thereon. Hands it to the counsel for Lorillard Co.

X-Q. 101. This package represents the cigarettes as they were packed and put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Co.?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 102. This package does not show the oval label or picture of Beech-Nut and Beech-Nut inside the oval, does it?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 103. So you did not use on these cigarettes the oval label which you use on the other Beech-Nut goods?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 104. To the best of your recollection the Beech-Nut cigarettes which you sold were packaged and labeled as shown in the specimen box you have produced?

A. I would not want to answer that because we might have some labels with the oval.

X-Q. 105. For how long a period did you sell cigarettes or were they on the market under this Beech-Nut name?

A. I think we made one sale.

X-Q. 106. That was since 1919?

A. Whatever our sales show in the books.

X-Q. 107. Did the Imperial Packing Co. ever make tobacco products and sell them under the name "Beech-Nut"?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 108. Who made those cigarettes?

A. I think the American Tobacco Co.

At this point the witness furnished 2 oval labels and makes the verbal statement: my memory is we could not get those labels for ten days or two weeks but they were ordered. If we sold more we would have sold them with that label.

Mr. Hinton: By that label you mean the label just produced?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 109. But this Beech-Nut label which you just produced was never used on the goods, on that one sale?

A. I do not know of any. I could not tell you.

X-Q. 110. Did you see the labels in the Patent Office?

A. No, I did not see them. This was looked after by our attorney.

X-Q. 111. You say the American Tobacco Co. made these cigarettes?

A. No, I would not say so.

X-Q. 112. At the present time you do not know who made the cigarettes?

A. My memory is that someone told me they were made by the American Tobacco Co. That is all I know about it.

X-Q. 113. That is all you know about it?

A. Yes, that is all I know about it.

X-Q. 114. Does the Beech-Nut Packing Co. handle or pack tobacco products of any sort at the present time?

A. No sir.

X-Q. 115. Up to the present time the only tobacco put out was one order. Is that correct?

A. My memory is that the only cigarettes we bought and sold was this particular lot. They might be sold to more than one person. I would have to be governed by what the books say.

X-Q. 116. You will furnish me a statement as to whom you sold that order of cigarettes?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 117. I call your attention to trade-mark No. 35,-731, reg. January 8, 1901, by Beech-Nut Packing Company for cured, dried and smoked beef, and direct your particular attention to the drawing of the registration. Do you recall that identical mark being used on the labels?

A. No, I do not remember that ever having been used except it was for branding purposes. I know we bought some of those burr branding iron and when we tried to brand the burr in it always burned, it never was a success.

X-Q. 118. You do not recall the design or mark being used?

A. I do not recall it being used for label. We might have used it for a branding iron. It does not mean anything to anyone without wording or anything of that kind.

X-Q. 119. Were you present with Mr. Bartlett Arkell at an interview or conference at the office of the P. Lorillard Co. about July, 1919?

A. I remember calling on Mr. Mahoney and some other gentlemen, but I do not know the date. It was the only time I was ever there so it must be the time you mention.

X-Q. 120. What was the subject matter discussed?

A. It was a general talk, about the Beech-Nut label being used by the Lorillard Co.

X-Q. 121. That is all you recollect?

A. I recall it was a pleasant interview. I do not recall anything special about it. I know when we came away the general feeling was we had not accomplished very much.

X-Q. 122. You knew the Lorillard Co. intended to put out a Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. They told me they did. They showed me a package of cigarettes.

X-Q. 123. You do not recall the date?

A. I think it is within two years. Maybe a little over a year. I know the one thing that impressed me that made me feel that Lorillard really had taken advantage of us—I may not be exact in this—but I remember this sort of a slogan on the cigarettes and it was more or less red—"The first cigarette of Beech-Nut quality ever offered to the trade."

X-Q. 124. You knew the Lorillard Co. were putting out tobacco product under Beech-Nut label, did you not?

A. Certainly.

X-Q. 125. Before you started to put out cigarettes, you knew it?

A. I remember Mr. Mahoney said they had ordered a lot of labels. We talked about their changing the label. It was some sort of a conversation like this. We said the labels on the Beech-Nut cigarettes, for instance, looked like a Beech-Nut label, had same style of letters. There was some talk as to if or not they would change, at least the lettering, and the same color of label so that they did not copy our letters, copy our color and should change their slogan so that it did not mean "Beech-Nut" to the average person.

X-Q. 128. It was not a question of the word "Beech-Nut"?

A. We never got to that. We had doubts about it, but I do not remember there was anything said about it. We had a long talk but I do not remember every word.

X-Q. 127. The main discussion in your interview, as you remember it, was the label?

A. Style of letters, color, etc. When we came away we felt that we had not gained anything—that we had not found a common ground. I think my memory is pretty clear on this that Mr. Mahoney inferred if we would consider reimbursing them for the amount they had paid out for the labels, they would change the label or discontinue. That is the impression he gave me. I would not say that was really spoken, but I gathered if we said to him we would make goods for the money put into these labels, he would have said they would quit. Possibly he did not intend that at all.

X-Q. 128. As you understand it, if you had reimbursed them for the labels he would have changed the style of labels?

A. I would not say that he said that, but that was the inference—he would change it or something like that.

X-Q. 129. Did your Company as early as 1915 know that the Lorillard Co. was putting out a tobacco?

A. We knew it as soon as they put it out. If it was 1915, we knew it within a month. A man wrote us in July, an old stockholder of the Beech-Nut Packing Co., and sent us an order for a certain amount of Beech-Nut tobacco. That is five years after they started to put out that tobacco, and while this man was a stockholder in this Company and supposed to be fully conversant with all the Beech-Nut products, he did not know but that the Beech-Nut Packing Co. made these goods.

X-Q. 130. What do you do with these orders for Lorillard Co.?

A. We refer them to Lorillard Co.—many, many of them.

Redirect Examination.

Rd-Q. 131. You said that orders were received by you for Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco. These orders were sent to the Lorillard Co.?

A. I do not say that we sent them, but referred the customer to the Lorillard Co.

Rd-Q. 132. What did you do that for?

A. We did that as we wanted the buyer to know that we did not make tobacco.

Rd-Q. 133. Did you want the buyer to get some response to his inquiry: in other words, why did you not ignore them?

A. We could not ignore them. These are all good customers of ours, men who order without even putting in the price or without requesting price, simply order 25 cases, 50 cases, a gross—whatever it may be. We want a man to get a response to his order so we reply.

Rd-Q. 134. To what extent, to your personal knowledge, have these orders been received?

A. We have received numerous orders. I think the records will show a considerable number. I do not know how many.

WALTER H. LIPE.

By Mr. Cavanaugh: Copies of trade-mark registrations 19,838; 24,978; 35,731 and 36,444 are fastened together to form one exhibit and are introduced in the evidence, and notary is asked to mark the same "P. Lorillard & Co. Cross Exhibit 21."

The oval cigarette label, Beech-Nut Brand, produced by the witness, Mr. Lipe, is offered in evidence, and notary is requested to mark the same "P. Lorillard & Co. Cross Exhibit No. 22."

Thomas Lynch,

a witness called on behalf of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, first being duly sworn, in answer to interrogatories propounded by Mr. Hinton, deposes and says. (Formal notice of this witness being waived.)

Question 1. Please state your name, residence, age and occupation.

Answer. Thomas Lynch, 43 Cliff St., Canajoharie, 76, retired.

Q. 2. Were you ever employed by the Beech-Nut Packing Co.? If so, between what years?

A. I was first employed by the Imperial Packing Co., January 1, 1892, and I continued in their employ until April, 1917.

Q. 3. What did you do for the Company during the year 1892?

A. I traveled on the road and sold Beech-Nut hams and bacon to Beech-Nut customers, through the Eastern states, New York and Pennsylvania. After that I took charge of the plant as foreman and continued as such for several years until the business was divided. Then I took charge of the bulk meat department until I retired.

Q. 4. What was the Company selling in 1892?

A. Hams, bacon and lard.

Q. 5. Did these products bear any label when they were put on the market?

A. They did.

Q. 6. Can you describe a label that was on the ham?

A. I would have to describe it from the present label. Oval label with the word "Beech-Nut" on the top, ham at the bottom, a red border and design of beech nut burr in the center.

Q. 7. Did the word Brand appear on the older labels?

A. Not at that time.

Q. 8. What sort of a label was used on the bacon in 1892?

A. The same style of printing but the label was oblong and had rounded corners instead of the oval label.

Q. 9. How long did these labels continue to be used?

A. During my whole service.

Q. 10. Can you produce some of the stationery used by the Imperial Packing Co. in 1892?

A. I can.

Q. 11. Where did you get this sheet?

A. In the first place, I got it from the office of the Imperial Packing Co. After I stopped traveling for the Company, I put that away in my desk at home with other papers and it has been there ever since.

Q. 12. Is this one of the sheets you carried with you in 1892?

A. It is. There is also a small size sheet.

Sheet produced by the witness is offered in evidence as Beech-Nut Exhibit Stationery of 1892.

Q. 13. Do you know Mr. Clarence Lindholm?

A. I do.

Q. 14. Did he ever have any connection with you in connection with the Beech-Nut Packing Co. or its predecessor? If so state same.

A. He was employed by the Imperial Packing Co. while I was traveling on the road in 1892, and he continued in the employ of the Company after I became foreman of the Company.

Q. 15. What was his duty?

A. Helping to handle the meat, wash it, bring it to the smoke and take it out of smoke, and as a boy his work was to label the hams and bacon and some times cut the sacks.

Direct examination closed.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Cavanaugh.

X-Q. 16. Mr. Lynch, I call your attention to the copies of trade-mark registrations which are numbered 19,838, 24,978, 35,731 and 36,444. Do you recall that design of label of 19,838?

A. No, I do not.

X-Q. 17. Do you recall design of label of 24,978.

A. I really do not remember the label that was put on the lard but it was an oval label and we had a hard time to make the label stick.

X-Q. 18. You do not remember that particular label?

A. No.

X-Q. 19. Do you recall 35731. Do you recall seeing that design?

A. No, I do not know where we would use that design with circle. As I remember it all the labels had the other design on them.

X-Q. 20. Did they have circles?

A. There were none in my department.

X-Q. 21. As to label 36,444, do you remember it?

A. I remember Beech-Nut Brand in that manner and this design of the beech nut.

X-Q. 22. Do you recall the circle?

A. No.

X-Q. 23. Did you ever sell Beech-Nut Tobacco?

A. Never heard of it before.

Cross-examination closed.

Deposition closed.

THOS. LYNCH.

Clarence Lindholm,

a witness called on behalf of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, first being duly sworn, in answer to interrogatories propounded by Mr. Hinton, deposes and says. (Formal notice of this witness being waived.)

Question 1. Your name is Clarence Lindholm, you are forty-five years of age, residence Canajoharie, N. Y., present employed by the Beech-Nut Packing Co. in its Traffic Department. Is that not correct?

Answer. That is correct.

Q. 2. When did you first begin to work for the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes.

Q. 5. When did you return to the Company?

A. About six years ago—in 1914.

Q. 6. Do you know Mr. Thomas Lynch?

A. I do.

Q. 7. Was he employed by the Company when you first came with the Company?

A. He was.

Q. 8. What was he doing?

A. On the road traveling for the Beech-Nut Packing Co.

Q. 9. What were your relations subsequent?

A. My job was to put labels on the hams and bacon, cut the sacks and take meat out of smoke.

Q. 10. Did you work under Mr. Lynch?

A. Yes.

Q. 11. Can you describe from memory the labels employed by the Imperial Packing Co. on hams and bacon in 1891 and 1892.

A. Yes. The ham label was an oval label with Beech-Nut trade-mark, with Beech-Nut burr in the center and had a red margin upon it.

Q. 12. What was the bacon label like?

A. The bacon label was a long label with rounded corners with the word "Beech-Nut Bacon" with the same trade-mark as Beech-Nut Ham and the word Beech-Nut hyphenated in both instances.

Q. 13. Are any of these labels available at the present time?

A. No, sir.

Q. 14. Why not?

A. Fire destroyed the records of the old labels.

Q. 15. Can you relate any circumstance in addition to the fact that you actually did the labeling, which makes your recollection of these labels clear?

A. Yes, I can. We had a stringer in the room and on that stringer we had a number of labels. Hams were placed thereon,—gone out of existence now.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Cavanaugh.

X-Q. 16. I call your attention to certain U. S. trade-marks Nos. 19,838, 24,978, 35,731 and 36,444. Will you examine these and tell me if you recall the use of any or all of these labels as shown on the drawing on the packed products of either the Imperial Packing Co. or the Beech-Nut Packing Co.?

A. Lard label No. 24,978 was used after my employment. We did not handle lard. No. 35,731 and 36,444 are cuts representing a branding iron. 19,838 represents a brand—a brand put on by a branding iron.

Witness is pointing to device showing the ham and picture of which appears in the panel.

X-Q. 17. As to trade-mark 24978, you never saw that used by the Company?

A. No, I did not.

X-Q. 18. As to the No. 19,838, did you ever see or know of any brand used by the Company showing the oval panel, that is with the words "Sweet Beech-Nut Ham, Imperial Packing Co., Canajoharie, N. Y.," with the center rectangular shaded, strips across the oblong in addition to the brand on the ham itself, which was already pointed out: in other words, did you ever see that complete device used upon any Beech-Nut products?

A. No, I did not.

X-Q. 19. You say that the mark or device shown in the drawing of No. 36,444 represents a brand?

A. Represents the impression that a branding iron makes on the side of a ham.

X-Q. 20. That is including the circle?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 21. I call your attention to 36,444 is for canned goods and that it says, "It is usually displayed on the cans, jars, boxes and other packages containing the goods, by placing thereon a printed label, on which the described trade-mark is shown." Do you recall a printed label on canned goods of the Beech-Nut Packing Co. showing that circle?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 22. Note that on canned goods they did not show the oval entirely but also used circle.

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 23. That was while you were with the Company?

A. No. Wait—at the time, 1891 and 1892 there were no canned goods. That was ahead of my time.

X-Q. 24. This was in 1901.

Mr. Hinton.

Rd-Q. 25. You were not connected with the Company in 1901?

A. No.

Mr. Cavanaugh.

Rx-Q. 26. We had reference to canned goods. So you do not know anything about these marks?

A. No, and still I do in a way because I handled the goods although I did not work for the Beech-Nut Packing Co. I sold them over the counter in retail store.

Rx-Q. 27. Did you handle any Beech-Nut goods with a circle on them like that?

A. Yes. As I recall it the label on the Conserves had a circle inside.

Rx-Q. 28. Ever handled any tobacco under the name of Beech-Nut?

A. No, sir.

Rx-Q. 29. Do not handle any now?

A. No.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Hinton.

Rd-Q. 30. As I understand it, the hams were branded and labeled both?

A. Yes.

Rd-Q. 31. Where was the brand put?

A. On the back or hide of the ham.

Rd-Q. 32. Where was the label put?

A. The label was put on the outside of the ham. Most of the hams were canvased and the label would be on the outside of the canvas.

Rd-Q. 33. The brand is out of sight?

A. Yes, out of sight.

Cross-examination closed.

Deposition closed.

Convened Aug. 4, 1920, 10:00 A. M.

Present as before.

W. C. Arkell,

a witness called on behalf of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, first being duly sworn, in answer to interrogatories propounded by Mr. Hinton, deposes and says. (Formal notice of this witness being waived.)

Question 1. Your name is W. C. Arkell, age 32, residence Canajoharie, N. Y., you are Assistant Secretary of the Beech-Nut Packing Co. Is that true?

Answer. That is true.

Q. 2. How long have you been connected with the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. In one way or another since the Spring of 1911, except during the war.

Q. 3. Has the Beech-Nut Packing Co. to your knowledge received orders for Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco?

A. It has.

Q. 4. To what extent and from whom?

A. Numerous orders. They came from jobbers mainly who buy our other products.

Q. 5. What has been done with the originals of these orders in most instances?

A. At first the customers were advised that we did not manufacture that product, after that they were sent direct to Lorillard Co., in a number of instances and still later sent to you.

Q. 6. Were some of these orders returned to customers?

A. I do not believe the orders were returned to them, they were written. The original order was not on an order blank but simply on a letterhead.

Q. 7. Is it your practice to make for inter-departmental use, copies of correspondence received from customers?

A. Yes, to a considerable extent.

Q. 8. Can you produce an illustrative collection of inter-departmental copies of correspondence received from customers and letters addressed to customers in connection with orders received by your Company for Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco?

A. Yes.

Stipulated that the copies produced by witness may be used in place of and with the effect of the originals. Copies produced by the witness are offered and introduced into the evidence as Beech-Nut Exhibit Correspondence.

Q. 9. Have you at the present time a stock of labels used for cigarettes, corresponding to Lorillard Cross Exhibit 22?

A. We have.

Q. 10. Are you prepared to continue the exploitation of cigarettes after the solution of the present controversy with the Lorillard Co. is settled?

A. We are.

Q. 11. How long has the Beech-nut Packing Co. had under discussion the sale of cigarettes under the Beech-Nut label?

A. That matter has been considered as far back—I forget—possibly two or three years before the war, something like 1914, 1915, 1916. I went in the army in 1917 and it was way ahead of that. I can only say in that connection, at one time or other possibly everything that could be sold in a grocery, drug or confectionery store has been considered. Our favorite method of considering products is to take a wholesale grocery, drug and confectionery catalogue and see what items could be merchandised through our company.

Direct examination closed.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Cavanagh.

X-Q. 12. Did you have anything personally to do with the getting up of the Beech-Nut cigarettes put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Co.?

A. They made several sales.

X-Q. 22. Can you give an idea of the quantity of these sales?

A. They were not large sales. Not any more than any product when first put out.

X-Q. 23. Did you ever sell tobacco products under the name Beech-Nut from this plant here at Canajoharie?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 24. You are not now selling it?

X-Q. 25. Mr. Arkell, I show you copy of a letter purporting to be written by James R. Offield, counsel for the Beech-Nut Packing Co., to yourself, dated July 22, 1919. Do you remember seeing that letter?

July 22, 1919.

MR. W. C. ARKELL,
c/o Beech-Nut Packing Co.,
Canajoharie, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

In re. Beech-Nut Stogie Company.

In reply to your letter of June 10th, the fact that you were aware of the existence of the Beech-Nut Stogie Company and have actually filled their orders with your goods without making any complaint will, of course, have a bearing upon the question of damages in the event you sued them, but I doubt if it would have any bearing upon your right to stop the use by them of your mark. Of course, the time to have taken the matter up was upon the first shipment, but that is now past and I think it would be a good idea to call this matter to the attention of the Lorillard Company and let them take steps against the Beech-Nut Stogie Company as they are in a much better position to do so than the Beech-Nut Packing Co.

Very truly yours,
JAMES R. OFFIELD.

X-Q. 26. I understood you to testify that you sent a number of orders which you received for Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco to the Lorillard Co. Why did you do this?

A. Most of these customers who sent in these orders are good customers of ours, and as a matter of common honesty to the customer we would have to do a thing of that kind.

X-Q. 27. You knew all the time that the P. Lorillard Co. was putting out a tobacco product under the name Beech-Nut?

A. It depends on what you mean by all the time. I do not suppose we knew when it was first put out.

X-Q. 28. I mean at the time you received these letters and sent them to Lorillard Co.

A. Certainly.

X-Q. 29. You knew the P. Lorillard Co. had Beech-Nut tobacco on the market before you ever had your Beech-Nut cigarettes made, did you not?

A. Yes

X-Q. 30. Did you ever put out a cigarette with label like P. Lorillard Cross Exhibit No. 22 on it?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 31. You never used that label?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 32. Yesterday during the examination of Mr. Walter H. Lipe, I requested him to produce an invoice for orders showing the sale to customers of your Beech-Nut cigarettes, and after his examination he kindly produced an invoice from the American Tobacco Co., Order No. 19122, showing that the American Tobacco Co. on July 12, 1919, sold to the Beech-Nut Packing Co. and shipped to three separate parties:

B. Arkell,
Equitable Bldg.,
New York City, N. Y.
James R. Offield,
1223 Monadnock Bldg.,
Chicago, Ill.
New Jersey Tob. Co.,
Jersey City, N. J.

2060 Beech-Nut cigarettes, total net cash value of $11.85. Can you tell me if that represents all of the Beech-Nut cigarettes made for and sold on behalf of the Beech-Nut Packing Co.?

A. No, I cannot.

X-Q. 33. You do not know if there were any other sold?

A. No.

X-Q. 34. Did you know there were only one or two orders sold?

A. No.

X-Q. 35. Did you know there were only one or two orders sold?

A. There were several orders. I do not know if there were one, or two or three. There were several.

X-Q. 36. Do you mean that there were other sales than those indicated by this invoice of July 12, 1919?

A. There were several billings from us. That would not constitute a billing by us, that was a billing to us. There were several billings by us. I do not know the details without looking up our records. I do not carry that in my mind.

X-Q. 37. Would your records here show all sales and shipments by the Beech-Nut Packing Company of Beech-Nut Cigarettes?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 38. Will you produce for me records showing such shipments and reference to whom the goods were shipped?

Mr. Hinton: I have no objection to the witness examining the records, but I do not want the witness to supply the Lorillard Co. with names of Beech-Nut Packing Co.'s customers for cigarettes. He can ascertain whether or not additional sales have been made and state the facts from the records.

Mr. Cavanagh: This witness has testified that his concern has made several sales of Beech-Nut cigarettes. Certainly to investigate the truth of his story on his testimony I am entitled to know the persons to whom such sales were made. It is very evident as the witness has testified that there were relatively few sales and that no sales are now being made and that we are entitled to know the extent of such sales.

X-Q. 40. Did any other concern other than the American Tobacco Co. make Beech-Nut cigarettes for the Beech-Nut Packing Co.?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 41. Does this invoice of July 12, 1919, represent the total amount of cigarettes made for your concern by the American Tobacco Co.?

A. To the best of my knowledge and belief.

X-Q. 42. The Beech-Nut Packing Co.'s business is that of packing shipping food products, is it not?

A. I should say it includes the packing and shipping of food products. It would not say that it was exclusively confined to the sale of food products.

X-Q. 43. What other products does it pack and ship outside of food products?

A. Chewing gum, beverages, tinfoil, formerly made corrugated boxes, and makes those by a subsidiary company now.

X-Q. 44. Does the Beech-Nut Packing Co. make and sell tinfoil under the name Beech-Nut?

A. It does not brand each piece of tinfoil, but it is sold by the Beech-Nut Packing Co.'s Foil Department.

X-Q. 45. Does the Company sell it under the trade-mark Beech-Nut?

A. I would not say it was under the trade-mark Beech-Nut, but I would say that the trade-mark "Beech-Nut" is on the top of our letterheads.

X-Q. 46. If you wanted to purchase a jar of Beech-Nut Bacon and went to a store and the man handed you a package of Beech-Nut tobacco, would you take it in the place of bacon?

A. No.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Hinton.

Rd-Q. 47. There has been read into the record copy of letter dated July 22, 1919, from Mr. Offield to Mr. W. C. Arkell, which apparently was forwarded by Mr. Bartlett Arkell to the P. Lorillard Co. At the time this correspondence occurred, state whether or not negotiations looking toward a settlement of this controversy were (foreseen)?

A. They were.

Rd-Q. 48. Were the negotiations successful?

A. No, sir.

Rd-Q. 49. If you went into a store and desired to purchase a bottle of Beech-Nut Ginger Ale made by your Company, would you accept in its place mustard, ham, chewing gum or sliced bacon?

A. I certainly would not.

Recross Examination by Mr. Cavanagh.

Rx-Q. 50. Do you know when this controversy over Beech-Nut tobacco between P. Lorillard Co. and the Beech-Nut Packing Co. started?

A. No.

Rx-Q. 51. Do you know that as early as 1915 the Beech-Nut Packing Co. had some correspondence with the P. Lorillard Co. regarding the use by Lorillard Co. of the trade-mark Beech-Nut for tobacco?

A. I understand so.

Rx-Q. 52. Then you knew that for a number of years or until about 1919 there was nothing further done in the matter until the question of its use by the P. Lorillard Co. for trade-mark for cigarettes came up?

A. I would not state nothing was done. I would state that the matter was being considered by at least one person in that place all the time.

Rx-Q. 53. This letter from Mr. Offield to you is dated July 22, 1919. I note that the Beech-Nut trade-mark application involved in this opposition was filed complete June 25, 1919. In the application, the Beech-Nut Packing Co. claimed date of use since June 12, 1919. So approximately about a month or thereabouts prior to the writing of this letter received by you, the Beech-Nut Packing Co. had started to use the trade-mark for cigarettes and had filed an application for such registration for trade-mark "Beech-Nut."

A. I do not recall the dates. If you state so from the official papers, they must be correct.

Guy W. Sharpe,

a witness called on behalf of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, first being duly sworn, in answer to interrogatories propounded by Mr. Hinton, deposes and says. (Formal notice of this witness being waived.)

A. I have.

Q. 14. Can you state from your knowledge of the trade and public, obtained in actual selling experience, what the impression has been and is in the minds of the trade and public as to this product?

A. It has been quite generally and is quite generally believed that this product was put out and merchandised by the Beech-Nut Packing Co.

By Mr. Cavanagh: That question and answer is objected to upon the ground it is evident attack to lay foundation for charge of unfair competition and which issue is not involved in procedure of this character.

It is stipulated that this objection may stand as to similar questions along this line put to this witness.

Q. 15. Upon what do you base your answer just given?

A. Upon the conversations with dealers and general public in which the question has been frequently asked whether or not it was a Beech-Nut product, and frequently the admission has been made that they presumed it was a Beech-Nut product.

X-Q. 22. When did the Beech-Nut Co. add Peanut Butter to its list?

A. My answer would be rather indefinite as to candy, I think the latter part of 1914 or early part of 1915.

X-Q. 24. What would be your answer as to Catsup?

A. I cannot give a definite answer on any of those as to the dates. It was prior to my connection with the Company.

A. Yes, I have.

X-Q. 31. Who asked you that?

X-Q. 42. As an intelligent man, if you saw that package with the Lorillard name on it and did not find the Beech-Nut Packing Co.'s name, would you think the Beech-Nut Packing Co. made it?

A. I would not.

X-Q. 43. Referring to charts which were produced by Mr. Lipe and which shows the labels of the various Beech-Nut products, as I understand it you do not know the particular date upon which any of those products were first put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Co.

A. I could not give you the dates.

X-Q. 44. If you went into a store to purchase one of the products indicated by the labels on this chart, would you permit the leader to sell you Lorillard Beech-Nut Tobacco in place of such products?

A. Certainly not.

X-Q. 45. So you would not make the mistake in taking tobacco for any of those products?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Hinton.

Rd-Q. 46. Mr. Cavanaugh asked whether if you went into a store to purchase any one of the products on the collection of labels produced by Mr. Lipe, would you accept a package of scrap tobacco in its place and you answered you would not.

I ask if you went into a store for the purpose of purchasing any one of the products, such, for instance, as sliced bacon which labels are displayed in this collection, would you accept in its place any of the other products, such as Cranberry Sauce?

A. I would not.

"Beech Nut."

Depositions of Witnesses.

Testimony taken on behalf of Beech-Nut Packing Company at the office of Offield, Poole & Hinton, 1737-38 S. Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois, and 1143 E. 55th Street, Chicago, Illinois, beginning December 16, 1920, at 2:00 P. M. before Sarah E. Harvey, a Notary Public, acting as special examiner by consent.

Present: Sebastian Hinton for Beech-Nut Packing Company, Richard B. Cavanagh for P. Lorillard Company.

Mrs. Matilda Wedel,

a witness called on behalf of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, first being duly sworn, in answer to interrogatories propounded by Mr. Hinton, deposes and says:—

Question 1. Please state your name, residence and occupation.

Answer. My name is Matilda Wedel, 3312 N. Leavitt Street. My business is in the cigar business. I own the business.

Q. 2. Where is your cigar business located?

A. Monroe Building. Monroe and Michigan. Large office building. Contains sixteen floors.

Q. 3. How long have you conducted the cigar stand in the Monroe Building?

A. Four years in April.

Q. 4. Do you employ any assistance in running that cigar business?

A. Two people work in the stand. One relieves.

Q. 5. I show you a package of chewing tobacco, which is a duplicate of a package in evidence in this case as Lorillard Exhibit 16, and ask if you handle this product in your cigar stand?

A. I have handled it until the last two months. I am not handling it now. I am too busy. It dries out. When a man comes in and says, "Ain't you got Beech-Nut Scrap." I say I haven't it now. If you want it now, I will get it for you. I have had it all the time.

Q. 6. How long have you handled Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco?

A. Four years. I have had Beech Nut Scrap Tobacco all the time, where I don't have other tobacco.

Q. 7. Will you tell me whether you now know who makes Beech Nut Scrap?

A. I know its made by Lorillard now.

Q. 8. How long have you known it was made by the Lorillard Company?

A. Since one week ago.

Q. 9. By whom were you first advised that this tobacco was made by the Lorillard Company?

A. The salesman Mr. Lewis came in with another man. He was connected with the Beech-Nut concern also. I don't try to remember names. He was talking about Beech-Nut cigars. I said something about the Beech-Nut tobacco, and he says, "Well, you think that Beech-Nut tobacco is made by the same concern?" (I was saying how good it was.) I said yes, I thought so. And he says, "Well, what makes you think so." Well, because it has the same trade-mark, the same oval mark. I have heard different remarks, but I couldn't mention names, because I never gave it a thought. For years I have heard that.

Mr. Cavanagh: Last part of question is objected to as hearsay.

Q. 10. Do I understand you to say that for years you have heard customers * * *?

A. Often. We talked about Beech-Nut. "Everything is good about Beech-Nut." "Even Beech-Nut Scrap is good." "Do you think they make it." I said "Yes." "Sure." "I guess so."

Q. 11. By whom do mean when you say "they"?

A. The Beech-Nut Products.

Q. 12. Do you mean the same people who make other Beech Nut products?

A. Yes. Not Lorillard. Didn't know that until a week ago.

Q. 13. Do I understand you to say that you were first advised that the Beech-Nut Company did not make Beech Nut Scrap Tobacco, by a Beech-Nut Packing Company representative about a week ago?

A. Yes.

Q. 14. And until that time you believed it was a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. I did.

Q. 15. What other products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company do you handle, Mrs. Wedel?

A. I handle. * * * To specialize the items—all their mint products and all their products like lemon and sour drops, I would call it. That's all there are.

Q. 16. Do you handle chewing gum?

A. Oh! yes.

Q. 17. What made you believe that Beech Nut Scrap Tobacco was made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Again I will say, it was the same label, the same trade-mark, their oval stamp, and the later ones that they have on cough drops. They even have a narrow striped cough drop—blue, and this is red.

Q. 18. You mean that the Beech-Nut Packing Company has this same label on all their products.

A. Yes. And the Horehound drops.

Q. 19. But do you mean that the oval label appears on other Beech-Nut Packing Company products?

A. On all products, they have their label, their oval label. On all I have seen. Mints and sour drops I have stated I have handled and also that tobacco.

Q. 20. What is the standing of the Beech-Nut Packing Company's products, which you have described, in the public mind? Do you know?

A. I don't just understand.

Q. 21. What does the public think of products with that label on it?

A. There are loads more like myself, as I make the statement. I have had that same thought brought to me over the counter, and I haven't been in business to handle Beech-Nut, and never thought of it, until somebody made the remark to me, and when I handled Beech-Nut tobacco I saw it had the same label as the gum. The gum was the first item I handled and Beech Nut Scrap tobacco was the second I handled. Until I handled those two I was so sure they were together.

Q. 22. Do you know whether or not the public regards with favor any product bearing the oval Beech-Nut label?

A. Whether they prefer the oval Beech-Nut label? They would have it sooner than anything. Some are skeptical about other things. When I take Beech-Nut and say, I have not Life Savers, but this is far superior. I can say that. I just know that of myself.

Q. 23. When customers, however, asked you about the Beech Nut Scrap Tobacco, by whom have you told them it was made?

A. We never had that discussed. It was just an off-hand way.

Mr. Hinton: Direct examination closed.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Cavanagh.

X-Q. 1. What did you say is your line of business?

A. I am in the cigar business and light candy. Packaged.

X-Q. 2. Do you own the business?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 3. Buy goods yourself?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 4. From whom did you buy your Beech Nut Tobacco?

A. From Thorwart & Roehling. Somewhere on Lake Street.

X-Q. 5. Do you know where located?

A. On Lake Street somewhere.

X-Q. 6. In what quantities did you buy that tobacco?

A. Every week. One dozen packages just like that.

X-Q. 7. I presume that you can read?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 8. What is the name on that package?

A. Lorillard.

X-Q. 9. Do you find the name Beech-Nut Packing Company on that package?

A. Not at all. If I had ever stopped to read, I would have never said this was Beech-Nut Packing Company's product.

X-Q. 10. If you had stopped to read the package you would never have said it was Beech-Nut Company's?

A. No.

X-Q. 11. What brands of cigarettes do you handle?

A. All popular brands. Means most established.

X-Q. 12. Do you handle Murad?

A. All. All of Lorillard.

X-Q. 13. You know Lorillard is a good tobacco concern?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 14. If you had ever taken the slightest trouble to examine that package you would have connected it with the Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir. Lorillard.

X-Q. 15. And a good responsible concern?

A. Yes, I would say that. Until now I have never seen that Lorillard.

X-Q. 16. Never took trouble to look for it?

A. No. It was scrap tobacco. We only notice those things as what the people ask for. We get it from a jobber. If we were dealing wth the people direct, like with Beech-Nut people, then we would know what people made the goods.

X-Q. 17. You handle lots of Lorillard tobacco products, do you not? How do you know that goods like Murad or Mogul are Lorillard?

A. A salesman comes in. They say, I am the Murad man from P. Lorillard. I am salesman. Or I am manager, and once in a while he will leave a sample package of cigarettes. I thank him and he may have an order and he may not.

X-Q. 18. Now. On this Beech Nut Tobacco. I understand it is the only scrap tobacco that you sold?

A. At the present time. Within the last six months.

X-Q. 20. You never bought any direct from Lorillard? Only from some jobber?

A. Yes. Before I go any further. All cigarettes are handled through a jobber that I buy.

X-Q. 21. You were speaking about a horehound package and you said it had some lines on it. What did you mean?

A. It is a long package. Did you see their lemon drops?

X-Q. 22. No.

A. Long package three-fourths (¾) inch in diameter. About three to three and one-half inches long. It has blue instead of red. I don't know whether they come wider. Straight lines.

X-Q. 23. As you are in the candy and tobacco business, if a customer came in to you and wanted to buy some Beech Nut Tobacco, would you be so confused as to sell him that horehound candy package for this Beech Nut tobacco package.

A. No. I would say to him "Beech Nut Scrap"? or something like that.

X-Q. 24. Wouldn't be confused into selling Beech-Nut candy?

A. He wouldn't take it. I wouldn't give it to him. If I had known it made such a difference, I would have noticed the name.

X-Q. 25. Can you tell me whether the oval on this Beech Nut package of tobacco is like or different from the oval on the chewing gum?

A. They have same label all over on Beech-Nut goods.

X-Q. 26. Would you say that this particular oval is exactly like or different?

A. Not exactly like. But at a slight glance, a person not noticing the name and handling it for years would think it was the same. That oval circle there or trademark.

X-Q. 27. The only Beech-Nut products you handle are candy?

A. Yes. In the name of Beech-Nut.

X-Q. 28. Who do you buy your Beech-Nut candy products from?

A. I buy them direct and jobbing.

X-Q. 29. You buy some direct from Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes. And some from a jobber. Jobber handles candy, gum and other things.

X-Q. 30. You never ordered any tobacco from the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. No. Tobacco and cigars are ordered through a jobber. By one jobber. By the cigar jobber.

X-Q. 31. You never ordered any Beech-Nut tobacco from Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Never.

X-Q. 32. You do not order Beech-Nut tobacco from the same man as you order Beech-Nut candy from.

A. No. But they handle the gum.

X-Q. 33. Which jobbers?

A. Thorwart & Roehling, that I order my cigars from. A jobber that handles cigars, handles all tobaccos, all cigars, and handles candy, and mints and gums, sometimes. I am not saying that these people always have them, but I have gotten them from them.

X-Q. 34. What kind of jobbing business are they in?

A. Cigar jobbing.

X-Q. 35. Exclusively tobacco jobbing?

A. Yes.

X-Q. 36. I thought you said they handled gum?

A. I can get it there.

X-Q. 37. What else do they handle besides tobacco?

A. Certain brands of cigars that they are distributors for. All brands of cigars—if they haven't got them, they will get them for you. All tobaccos, smoking and chewing. That's all that I know that's in my mind, and gum. I told you that before. That's what I can buy from them.

X-Q. 38. You buy your Beech-Nut gum from those people?

A. Wherever I can get it.

X-Q. 39. Then where did you get it?

A. When the market is scarce on Beech-Nut goods, like last two years, we had to buy it where we could get it.

X-Q. 40. If you ordered from this jobber one dozen packages of Beech Nut Tobacco, and he sent you one dozen packages of Beech-Nut Gum, what would you say?

A. I would say I didn't want them and send them back.

X-Q. 41. You wouldn't possibly confuse the two.

A. I wouldn't make a mistake. Might be mistake on the order, but I couldn't make a mistake.

Mr. Cavanagh: That's all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Hinton.

Rd-Q. 1. Do your customers, Mrs. Wedel, ever come in and say "Give me a package of Beech-Nut?"

A. Yes.

Rd-Q. 2. And what do you give them?

A. Gum.

Recross Examination by Mr. Cavanagh.

Rx-Q. 1. Suppose he is a big, strong, rough-looking, healthy man, who comes in to your place, weighing two hundred pounds, chewing a wad of tobacco, and he takes it out of his mouth, throws it on the floor, and says "Give me some Beech Nut." What would you give him?

A. I would give him gum.

Rx-Q. 2. You would give that big longshoreman gum?

A. Scrap tobacco is only used by working class and they are not customers in the building. I am handling it for the people in the building.

Rx-Q. 3. But did I ask you that? I asked you, if a big, longshoreman, weighing two hundred pounds comes in chewing Beech Nut, would you hand him gum?

A. Yes. He had to say Scrap.

Rx-Q. 4. Suppose he said tobacco. He would get tobacco?

A. Yes.

Rx-Q. 5. This package?

A. Yes.

Rx-Q. 6. If he asked for tobacco, you wouldn't give him gum?

A. No.

Rx-Q. 7. You would disregard all other Beech-Nut products?

A. Yes. Unless he says what he wants, Beech-Nut gum was on the market before anything I know of.

Rx-Q. 8. Do you know how long Beech-Nut gum has been on the market?

A. No.

Recross examination closed.

Q. 29. When a customer comes into your store and asks for Beech-nut, what do you give him?

Q. 9. The question was, could you give a complete list of all the products made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company from memory—could you or could you not?

A. No. I don't think I could.

Q. 10. In other words, the Beech-Nut Packing Company makes products which you could not mention offhand?

A. No.

Q. 11. How would you tell from examination of the product whether or not it was made by Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Naturally the first thing is "Beech-Nut."

Q. 12. Have you seen in the course of your experience from time to time new products come out with the Beech-Nut Company's label on them?

A. Yes. Sure.

Q. 13. Have these products been different from every preceding products, which bore the same label?

A. They have.

Q. 14. How have such products, although new, been received by the public?

A. My experience has been that the Beech-Nut was that when they had an article that suited them with the name Beech-Nut on it, it impressed the public very satisfactorily. That is, they buy without very much recommendation just because Beech-Nut was on it. I know from my standpoint, not the public, that it is easier to sell a Beech-Nut article that has given satisfaction.

Q. 15. What does the Beech-Nut label stand for in the mind of the public?

A. First quality goods. Purity of goods.

Q. 16. How long as the Beech-Nut label been displayed to and before the public?

A. Twelve or thirteen or fourteen years. Has been added to very extensively since that time. Other lines.

Q. 17. I show you a package, a duplicate of which is in evidence as opposer's Exhibit No. 16, and ask you whose product you thought this was when you first saw it?

A. Beech-Nut.

Q. 18. You mean the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. I do. My very first impression.

Q. 19. Why did you think it was their product? The product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Advertisement there is so much similar to the Beech-Nut. First thing that came to my mind.

Q. 20. From your contact daily over the counter with customers, what can you say as to what the public would think in that respect?

Mr. Cavanagh: Objected to as calling for an opinion.

A. I believe the public would think just as I have. They would say it was a Beech-Nut product.

X-Q. 9. If a man came into your grocery store and asked you for a package of Beech Nut tobacco, would you sell him preserves or Beech-Nut Peanut Butter, or candy, or chewing gum for the Beech-Nut tobacco.

A. I wouldn't sell it because I did not handle it.

X-Q. 10. Would you confuse Beech-Nut tobacco with a Beech-Nut can of Peanut Butter?

A. No. If we were handling it he would get Beech Nut tobacco.

X-Q. 11. Would not hand him Beech Nut Peanut Butter for tobacco.

A. No.

X-Q. 12. There would be no confusion in your mind as to the kind of goods?

Q. 11. By whom did you think this product was made before Mr. Lewis told you?

A. By Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Q. 12. What made you think that?

A. I had several occasions. One time when I was down here in a cigar store, a man was trimming a window for Beech-Nut, and knowing Mr. Lewis, I asked him if Mr. Lewis was still with the firm. And he said yes, and spoke like he knew him very well—he is a good fellow and everything. Then I asked him how long they had been putting up this tobacco. Thought it was product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. He didn't make any definite answer, so I went away thinking it was naturally a Beech-Nut product put up by Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Q. 13. Mr. Lewis is a salesman for the Beech-Nut Packing Company, is he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 14. How does the label on the package of scrap tobacco compare with the standard Beech-Nut label?

A. Well, after you make a close examination of it, it isn't quite like it. But I never gave it a second thought. It has an oval label. Never gave it a second thought.

A. Don't hardly know what you mean.

A. Anywhere you mention Beech-Nut, it is high grade article.

Q. 17. Have you in your experience seen new products come out from time to time, put out by Beech Nut Packing Company and marked with its standard label.

A. Yes.

Q. 18. How have such products been received by the public when offered?

A. Very good. No more than two weeks ago put spaghetti and macaroni on market. It is moving.

Q. 19. Did you ever hear any comment in this store about Beech Nut tobacco?

A. Yes, I have. Just one instance I remember. May be more. Just last week a man walked in here previous to time Mr. Lewis was out here, I had this picture of the Xmas basket.

Q. 20. Beech Nut basket.

A. Yes. "I see Beech-Nut is going into the packing game quite extensively." I said I never knew that they put up anything besides lozenges and Beech-Nut tobacco.

Q. 21. He was a customer or salesman?

A. I don't quite know who it was. We were talking about Beech Nut goods. Wasn't Beech-Nut salesman. Salesman from some other house or customer.

Direct examination closed.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Cavanagh.

X-Q. 1. You don't know the name of the man that made that statement?

A. No, sir. I don't remember who he was. Man walked in here.

X-Q. 2. What was name of man you spoke to that was decorating the window?

A. I don't know. Can tell you where he is. He is driving Ford machine.

X-Q. 3. Don't know his name?

A. Not acquainted with him at all.

X-Q. 4. You smoke?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 5. Do you use cigarettes?

A. Only.

X-Q. 6. Do you know of the Murad cigarette?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 7. The Mogul.

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 8. And the Egyptian Diety?

A. Yes, sir.

X-Q. 9. Whose cigarettes are they?

A. I don't know that. I don't even know who puts out the cigarette I smoke.

X-Q. 10. Did you ever hear of P. Lorillard Tobacco Company?

A. No, sir. Never in my life.

X-Q. 11. Would you look at this package, which is like Exhibit No. 16, and tell me what name is on it.

A. Lorillard.

X-Q. 12. Do you find the name of the Beech-Nut Packing Company on it?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 13. Did you ever know of any Beech-Nut products to have these red radiating lines on them?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 14. As one engaged in the grocery business, if I came into your store and asked you for a package of Beech Nut tobacco would you sell me a Beech-Nut ham, or a Beech-Nut package of Peanut Butter or Beech-Nut candy?

A. Why no.

X-Q. 15. You wouldn't confuse the goods?

A. Why, no. If anyone asked for Beech Nut Chili Sauce, I wouldn't sell him Peanut Butter.

X-Q. 16. You wouldn't sell him tobacco?

A. No, sir.

X-Q. 17. You would think a man who would take Beech-Nut Chili Sauce for tobacco crazy, wouldn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Hinton.

Rd-Q. 1. Do you sell chewing gum in this store?

A. No, sir.

Rd-Q. 2. If a man asked you for any Beech-Nut product, would you give him some other Beech-Nut product?

A. In regards to what?

Rd-Q. 3. Well, for instance if a man asked you for Beech-Nut marmalade, would you give him Beech Nut gum?

A. No, sir. I would explain to him that we didn't handle either of them here. We have been out of chili sauce and couldn't get ahold of it. They asked for Beech-Nut Chili Sauce. "I am out of it." "I have the catsup." Lots say "Give me the catsup." Nearly alike. Catsup and Chili Sauce, are about same. One is seasoned a little more.

Rd-Q. 4. You wouldn't offer her Beech-Nut ham in place of Chili Sauce?

A. No.

Recross Examination by Mr. Cavanagh.

Rx-Q. 1. The Beech-Nut products you sell here are in the grocery line and not tobacco line?

A. Yes, sir.

Rx-Q. 2. Those are two distinct lines of business?

A. Yes, sir.

WALTER PEABODY.

Ludwig Nurnberg,

a witness called on behalf of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, first being duly sworn, in answer to interrogatories propounded by Mr. Hinton, deposes and says:

Question 1. Please state your name, age, residence and occupation.

Answer. Ludwig Nurnberg, 5507 University Ave., grocery man.

Q. 2. You are the proprietor of the Busy Bee Grocery located at 1143 E. 55th Street?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 3. How long have you been in the grocery business altogether?

A. Since 1895.

Q. 4. How long have you been proprietor of the Busy Bee?

A. 10½ years. 11 in April.

Q. 5. Have you dealt in the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Sure.

Q. 6. How long have you dealt in the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. I should judge at least fifteen years, if not more. Fifteen anyhow. I used to sell them where I was working.

Q. 7. What sort of a reputation has the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Quality.

Q. 8. I show you a package which is a duplicate of opposer's Exhibit No. 16. When you first saw this package, by whom did you think this product was made?

A. Naturally Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Q. 9. What made you think that this was made by Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. The trade-mark. Are these supposed to be Beech-Nuts? I suppose so. Beech Nut is that same thing. (Witness picks up package).

Q. 10. Had you ever seen this package before it was shown you?

A. Once when you was here. That was first time.

Q. 11. Mr. Lewis showed you that package?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. 12. Mr. Nurnberg, could you recite a list of all the products the Beech-Nut Packing Company makes?

A. Pretty near all. According to what I handle. What I don't handle now, I have handled.

Q. 13. Has it been your experience that the Beech-Nut Packing Company from time to time comes out with new products different from preceding products?

A. Certainly.

Q. 14. And how does the public receive these new products?

A. In general, with favor.

Q. 15. How are the goods of the Beech-Nut Packing Company marked? Do they all have the same style of label?

A. Yes. The oval part, yes. The trade-mark "Beech-Nut," yes.

Q. 16. Do I understand that the rest of the wrapper may be different in different packages?

A. Yes. The label is most always the same, as far as I know.

Q. 17. Do you handle chewing gum in this store?

A. No.

Q. 18. What stores handle chewing gum?

A. Drug stores, billiard rooms, candy shops; I guess that's about all.

Q. 19. Do you smoke?

A. Yes, sir.

Direct examination closed.

Cross-Examination by Mr. Cavanagh.

Cross-question 1. Did you ever sell tobacco?

Answer. No, sir.

X-Q. 2. Whose name is on that package?

A. Lorillard.

X-Q. 3. You have heard of Lorillard Company?

A. Well! I might and I might not. Lorillard? I might have heard of them. I can really not say. That I really don't know, because I don't use smoking tobacco. I know they don't make cigars. I have never seen them.

X-Q. 4. Did you ever see a Beech-Nut Packing Company's package with radiating red stripes (like Lorillard's Exhibit No. 16)?

A. No. I don't think I did.

X-Q. 5. You spoke of the Beech-Nut Packing Company's bringing out new lines of goods from time to time.

A. Yes.

X-Q. 6. This lines all relate to the grocery business or candy business?

A. Grocery and candy business mainly. Yes.

X-Q. 7. And if a man wanted some Beech-Nut groceries or Beech-Nut candy you wouldn't sell him Beech-Nut tobacco?

A. Not unless he asked for it.

X-Q. 8. Wouldn't confuse it with Beech-Nut tobacco?

A. No.

X-Q. 9. And if you want to see who puts out a package of goods you look for the name on it?

A. Not necessarily. Not necessarily. If I look at whole of package of goods, the first impression is what counts. If I see package of Fould's Macaroni, the yellow package draws my attention. That is Fould's Macaroni if I don't see name on it. If I see Heinz's Beans, a light blue can, I know that is Heinz' beans.

X-Q. 10. The word Beech-Nut on here attracts you?

A. Yes. Absolutely on that. "Beech-Nut" and the oval brand, and this little ding-a-lings. (Witness points to red Beech Nut in center of label.)

X-Q. 11. And you said that the Beech-Nut wrappers were different colors. What colors have they had?

A. The baked beans have now a brown label, brown colored. The trade-mark—I couldn't say exactly what color that is. It is oval o nthem. The macaroni, that's too new. I don't remember now what the color is on that. I know it has got oval trade-mark label with Beech-Nut mark on it. I know that. That's what I show when I have goods displayed. I am very careful that I have the package shown so that they can see the name of Beech Nut with oval label because that stands for quality.

X-Q. 12. What other colors do they use?

A. Jams, jellies, catsup? That I really cannot now recollect. Really I cannot say what colors.

X-Q. 13. In the grocery business tobacco is regarded as different from food products?

A. In grocery store of my kind. I have lot of people coming in, from smaller towns for package of tobacco. People do that naturally. Whenever anybody does come in. * * * *

X-Q. 14. Tobacco is different thing from food?
A. Naturally. Naturally.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Hinton.

Redirect Question 1. I understand you to say that in smaller towns people expect to find tobacco for sale in store which also sells groceries?

A. Absolutely. Absolutely. If I take an automobile trip and I go to a small place in the country, in general store, little country store, I go in there. One out there to Dunning and those places. Small stores. You find groceries, you find candies, you find ham, tobacco, cigarettes, cigars, and you even find stockings and those things.

Recross Examination by Mr. Cavanagh.

Recross Question 1. If you went into one of those country stores and asked for package of Beech Nut tobacco, but he handed you Beech-Nut Peanut Butter, you would think him crazy, wouldn't you?

A. I suppose so. Absolutely.

LUDWIG NURNBERG.

Stipulation.

It is stipulated by and between the parties hereto through their respective counsel that if Harry F. Stickney, 1154 54th Place, Chicago, Illinois, were called on, he would testify as follows:

My name is Harry F. Stickney, of lawful age. I am owner and manager of University Market, located at 1357 E. 57th Street, Chicago, Illinois.

I have for many years carried the Beech-Nut Packing Company's products and am familiar with its labels. The Beech-Nut label has stood for quality. It has been my experience that whenever the Beech-Nut Packing Company has come out with a new product different from previous products, bearing the same label, the public has very favorably received the new product. We do not handle chewing gum in our store. Chewing gum is generally carried by drug stores, candy stores, cigar and tobacco stores. When I saw Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, a duplicate of the package, Opposer's Exhibit No. 16, I immediately accepted this as a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company by reason of the fact that the oval label on the package was the same as that which has appeared on the Beech Nut products I have for many years handled. I could not myself give a list of Beech-Nut Packing Company products. The only way I could tell whether a product was a Beech-Nut product would be to examine it and if I saw the Beech-Nut label on it, I would take it to be a Beech-Nut Packing Company product.

I do not sell tobacco, and therefore do not handle packages of tobacco like that shown by Exhibit 16. Furthermore if a purchaser came into the store, and asked me for a food product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, such as preserves, Beech-Nut Peanut Butter, chewing gum, or the like, I would not be confused into selling him a package of Beach Nut tobacco, like Exhibit No. 16, for a food product.

It is stipulated further by and between the parties hereto through their respective counsel, that if Louis Worthen of Chicago, Illinois, were called, he would testify as follows:

My name is Louis Worthen. I am of legal age and owner and manager of a grocery and confectionery on Sheridan Road, Chicago, near Irving Park Boulevard. This region is a region of apartment houses with a more or less mixed class of population.

I have for many years handled Beech-Nut products. The Beech-Nut oval labels stands for quality. It has been my experience that whenever this label appears on a new product the public will favorably accept that new product. I could not tell from memory what products the Beech-Nut Packing Company is making. In order to tell whether a product was a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, I would look for the Beech-Nut oval label.

I have seen during the past few years, the Beech Nut Scrap Tobacco, such as shown in Opposer's Exhibit No. 16. I always believed that this was a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company by reason of the similarity of the label on this package to the Beech-Nut label. I do not handle tobacco products. I continued to believe that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco referred to was the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company until I was advised by Mr. Lewis, a salesman of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, that this product was not made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. Mr. Lewis, left, perhaps by accident, a package of scrap tobacco in my store. This was laid on the shelf in the back part of the store.

Shortly after the package was placed there, a man came in to repair the telephone, observing the package, he said to me, "I didn't know that the Beech-Nut Company was putting out tobacco."

It is my opinion and belief that the public, familiar with the Beech-Nut Packing Company's label, through the very heavy advertising of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, would believe as I did that the Beech Nut Scrap Tobacco was part of the Beech-Nut Packing Company's line.

As above stated, I do not handle tobacco, and therefore do not sell this package like Exhibit No. 16.

I cannot recall the name of the man who stated that he did not know that Beech Nut Packing Company was putting out tobacco. Furthermore, if a customer came into my store and asked me for a package of Beech Nut Tobacco, I would not be confused into selling him chewing gum or a food product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, such as preserves or Peanut Butter for a package of Beech-Nut Tobacco. Neither would I sell him preserves if he asked for macaroni, nor would I sell him any one food product in place of any other.

By Mr. Cavanagh: Attorney for P. Lorillard objects to such parts of the depositions of the witnesses Mrs. Matilda Wedel, Roy S. Yunker, Joseph Fleming, Walter Peabody, and Ludwig Nurnberg as relate or appertain to matters of alleged unfair competition, as being immaterial and irrelevant, in that such matters are not pertinent to or proper in connection with this opposition, and it is stipulated and agreed between counsel that this objection may stand as if made in detail in connection with the objected parts of the testimony of each of said witnesses.

v.
BEECH-NUT PACKING COMPANY.

Trade-Mark Opposition No. 2805.
Beech Nut.

NOTICE OF OPPOSITION.

Honorable Commissioner of Patents:

Sir: In the matter of the application of the Beech-Nut Packing Company of Canajoharie, New York for the registration of the trade-mark Beech Nut filed June 25, 1919, Serial No. 119,930, for Cigarettes, in the Class of Tobacco Products; and published in the Official Gazette of September 9, 1919, at page 282, Vol. 266; P. Lorillard Company, a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey, and having its office and principal place of business at Number 119 West 40th Street, City, County and State of New York, believes that it would be damaged by such registration and hereby gives notice of its intention to oppose, and does hereby oppose, the registration of said trade-mark.

The grounds for opposition are as follows:

First.—That opposer is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey and having an office and principal place of business at No. 119 West 40th Street, New York City, N. Y., and is and has been for many years past engaged in manufacturing and marketing in large quantities throughout the United States, Tobacco Products in various forms, such as cigars, little cigars, cigarettes and chewing and smoking tobacco of all kinds.

Second.—That for many years past, to wit, since about 1899, or prior thereto, the word symbol Beech Nut, has been continuously used by the opposer, P. Lorillard Company, or its predecessors in business and title as a trade-mark for Tobacco Products and particularly scrap tobaccos which are adapted to and utilized for both chewing and smoking purposes.

Third.—That the opposer, P. Lorillard Company, is now the owner of all the right, title and interest in and to the said trade-mark Beech Nut for Tobacco Products.

Fourth.—That at all times since the adoption of this trade-mark Beech Nut, about 1899, or prior thereto, it has been continuously used by the opposer or its predecessors in business, from whom it derived title, in connection with and as a trade-mark for Tobacco Products and particularly scrap tobaccos which are adapted to and utilized for both chewing and smoking purposes.

Fifth.—That since its adoption in 1899, or prior thereto as aforesaid, the said trade-mark has been uniformly known and recognized as indicating the true origin of the goods and as being the true property of the opposer or its predecessors.

Sixth.—That the Tobacco Products of opposer, the P. Lorillard Company and its predecessors in business, marketed under the said trade-mark Beech Nut have had for many years and now have an enviable reputation as of superior quality.

Seventh.—That the trade-mark Beech Nut sought to be registered by the Applicant, the Beech-Nut Packing Company, as aforesaid, conflicts with and is an infringement upon the aforesaid trade-mark Beech Nut of this opposer.

Eighth.—That the goods for which Applicant seeks to register the trade-mark Beech Nut are of the same descriptive property and belong to the same class as those upon which the trade-mark of the opposer has been and is now being used.

Ninth.—That the trade-mark Beech Nut of the opposer has been in actual and continuous use as a trade-mark by the opposer and its predecessors since a date prior to the use of the word symbol Beech Nut as a trade-mark by the Applicant, Beech-Nut Packing Company, for any Tobacco Product, and, as opposer believes, prior to any use of the word symbol Beech Nut as a trade-mark by the Applicant, Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Tenth.—That the word symbol Beech Nut sought to be registered by the Beech-Nut Packing Company as a trade-mark is so similar in form, appearance, sound and other characteristics to the trade-mark Beech Nut of the opposer, as to be identical therewith, to be liable to cause confusion, and to cause confusion to the purchasing public, to be liable to cause damage, and to cause damage to this opposer, P. Lorillard Company, as the lawful owner of the trade-mark Beech Nut as aforesaid.

Eleventh.—That the manner in which the Applicant, Beech-Nut Packing Company, uses its alleged trade-mark upon and in connection with Tobacco Products, is such as to obviously cause confusion and deception to the purchasing public by leading the purchasing public into the belief that it is buying or accepting, and into buying or accepting the goods of the Applicant so marked for and in place instead of the goods of P.

Lorillard Company, this opposer, the owner of the trade-mark aforesaid.

Wherefore, this opposer prays that the said alleged trade-mark of the Applicant herein opposed, be refused registration, as equity and good conscience demands.

DEPOSITIONS OF WITNESSES.

PRIMA FACIE PROOFS OF P. LORILLARD COMPANY.

Depositions taken on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, pursuant to notice, before H. S. Ivie, a Notary Public, at the office of P. Lorillard Company, No. 119 West 40th St., New York City, beginning this 19th day of May, 1920, at 2 P. M.

Present: R. B. CAVANAGH, for Meyers, Cavanagh & Hyde, attorneys for P. Lorillard Company;
JAMES R. OFFIELD, attorney for Beech-Nut Packing Company.

It is hereby stipulated by and between the parties to the above-entitled interference as follows:

1. By virtue of an assignment, an instrument in writing duly acknowledged and dated the 29th day of October, 1903, the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company sold, assigned and transferred to the Continental Tobacco Company all its property and business, including amongst other matters and things, its business of manufacturing and selling tobacco in its various forms, together with certain trade-marks and brand pertaining thereto, including the trade-mark Beech Nut, and the authenticity of said assignment is admitted.

2. That by virtue of an assignment, an instrument in writing duly acknowledged and dated the 17th day of December, 1903, the Continental Tobacco Company sold, assigned and transferred to Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company, amongst other matters and things, all the right, title and interest of the said Continenta! Tobacco Company in the business of manufacturing and selling chewing and smoking tobacco bearing the trade-name or trade-mark Beech Nut together with the good will and reputation attaching or connected with said trade-name or trade-mark for smoking and chewing tobacco and the authenticity of said document is admitted.

3. By an assignment, an instrument in writing dated the 1st day of September, 1913, Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company sold and assigned to P. Lorillard Company, the Opposer herein, all its assets and business as a going concern wheresoever situated, including all brands and trade-marks owned by it with the business thereon, and the good will thereof, and the authenticity of said assignment is admitted.

4. That Harry Weissinger Tob. Co. registered the trade-mark or brand Beech Nut for smoking tobacco with Connorton's Bureau of Registration for Tobacco Brands, as set forth on page 378 of Connorton's Tobacco Brand Directory of the United States for the year 1898, as follows: "Beech Nut granulated, Harry Weissinger Tob. Co., Louisville, Ky." That in Connorton's Tobacco Brand Directory of the United States for the year 1899 the trade-mark Beech Nut of the

Harry Weissinger Tob. Co., of Louisville, Ky., is listed as follows on page 172, under the heading "Smoking Tobaccos": "Beech Nut, Harry Weissinger Tob. Co., Louisville, Ky." That in Connorton's Tobacco Brand Directory of the United States for the year 1903, on page 328, under the heading "Smoking Tobaccos," the brand Beech Nut is listed as follows: "Beech Nut (scrap) Harry Weissinger Tob. Co., Louisville, Ky."

5. Concerning certain witnesses noticed to be called by P. Lorillard Company in the presentation of its prima facie case, it is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between the parties hereto, that if the following witnesses were called on behalf of the Lorillard Company and sworn under oath, each of said witnesses would testify as follows:

DAVID HAINES BALL.

My name is David Haines Ball; I am fifty years of age; address No. 119 West 40th Street, New York City; residence No. 327 E. Sidney Ave., Mt. Vernon, N. Y., and I am Vice-President of the P. Lorillard Company, which concern is engaged in the tobacco business. I have charge of the selling of smoking and chewing tobacco products of P. Lorillard Company.

I have been engaged in the tobacco business for the past thirty years and since 1911 I have been Vice-President of P. Lorillard Company. Prior to that time I was associated with The American Tobacco Company as a departmental head with particular reference to smoking tobacco.

The original Lorillard tobacco business was established by Pierre Lorillard in 1760, and the present company is a successor of this original house and is, therefore, to the best of my knowledge and belief the oldest tobacco concern in the world. It is also one of the largest and at the present time is doing business of approximately eighty million dollars per year. Its business extends all over the United States and in foreign countries. This concern has twenty-five branches in twelve cities, with very large factories in New York City, N. Y., Richmond, Va., Baltimore, Md., Middletown, Ohio and New Jersey. P. Lorillard Company employs approximately 12,000 people. It manufactures and sells tobacco products of every character and description, except snuff. It owns, manufactures and markets some of the most prominent tobacco brands known to the public and to the trade. For example, it puts out such well known smoking tobacco as "Union Leader," "Sensation," "Mechanics' Delight," "Omega," "Just Suits," "Stag," and others. In cigarettes it owns the S. Anargyros Co., who manufacture and market such well known brands as "Egyptian Dieties," "Murad," "Mogul," "Helmar," "Turkish Trophies" and others. In chewing tobacco it owns, manufactures and markets "Climax," "Planet," "Neptune," "Mechanics' Delight," "Beech Nut," and "Red Cross." Amongst the fine cut tobaccos of this country are "Tiger," "Pioneer," "Old Fashioned," and "Eureka." As scrap tobaccos it owns, manufactures and markets "Honest," "Polar Bear," "Beech Nut," "Bag Pipe," "Old Nut" and others.

Referring particularly to the trade mark Beech Nut, the Lorillard Company has marketed and is marketing both chewing and smoking tobacco under this name and has made all its preparations for making and selling a cigarette under this name, though the cigarette has not yet been put upon the market.

So far as the history of Beech Nut as a trade mark for tobacco products is concerned my personal knowledge dates more particularly from the year 1915, when the Lorillard Company began actively pushing this brand on the market; but I do know that for many years prior to 1915 the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co., a predecessor of P. Lorillard Company, had been making and marketing tobacco for chewing and smoking under this trade mark.

I have been furnished a statement from the books of this company and that of Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company showing the sales of the tobacco products under the brand Beech Nut, by years from 1904 to 1919 inclusive, by these companies hereto annexed as P. Lorillard Co., Exhibit 1.

In February, 1915, the Lorillard Company began to actively push this Beech Nut brand of tobacco under the trade mark "Beech Nut" and put it up in the form of both plug and smoking and chewing tobacco known as scrap and I submit herewith and make a part hereof as P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit 2 a sample package of the P. Lorillard Beech Nut scrap tobacco in the form in which it has been put upon the market since 1915. It will be noted from the schedule which I have submitted as Exhibit 1 that from 1915 down to the present year the sales of this Beech Nut scrap tobacco have increased by leaps and bounds, until in the year 1919 the total sales of this Beech Nut tobacco by P. Lorillard Company amounted to nearly twenty-six and one-half million pounds, with a money value of approximately fourteen millions of dollars. Its importance can be appreciated when it is realized that by these figures the Lorillard Company's business in Beech Nut tobacco for the year 1919 was approximately one-sixth of its entire business.

Beech Nut tobacco in packages, like Exhibit 2, has been sold in practically every State in the United States, and to the majority of the largest tobacco houses and dealers. In New York, it has been sold in great quantities to such well known tobacco jobbers and tobacco concerns as The Metropolitan Tobacco Company, the United Cigar Stores and Schulte Cigar Stores. It is well known that the Metropolitan Tobacco Company is the largest jobber and distributor of tobacco products in the United States and that there are hundreds of United Cigar Stores and Schulte Cigar Stores in the large cities throughout the United States.

I also submit herewith as P. Lorillard Co., Exhibit 3, a carton or pasteboard box in which the smaller or retail packages of Beech Nut scrap tobacco are packed and it will be noted that this carton has the word "Beech Nut" prominently displayed thereon, together with the word "Lorillard's."

Beech Nut in my opinion is recognized as the trade mark of the Lorillard Company when applied to tobacco products. The Lorillard Beech Nut tobacco has been extensively advertised since 1915 in various ways, has been displayed by advertisements, placards, window displays and window posters, and by the distribution of samples. I submit herewith as P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit 4 certain posters which are used in advertising the Lorillard Beech Nut scrap tobacco, packed as shown by Exhibit 2.

In the tobacco industry, cigarettes are recognized as belonging to the same general class of goods as smoking, chewing and plug tobacco of various forms, that is to say, cigarettes are a tobacco product just as smoking, chewing and plug tobacco are tobacco products, and the goods are of course sold by the same class of jobbers and dealers, for example, through retail tobacco stores.

Therefore, in my opinion should any other person, or concern than the P. Lorillard Company place upon the market a cigarette or other tobacco product under the name Beech Nut, it would cause confusion in the tobacco trade, lead both the dealers and the purchasing public to believe that they were obtaining a Lorillard product when in fact they would be obtaining the late-comer's product, who would be selling his brand of tobacco upon a reputation established by the Lorillard Company for its Beech Nut brand, and consequently would naturally cause a loss of sales to the Lorillard Company and would interfere with its business thus causing it damage and injury.

In this connection another serious factor would be that the Lorillard Company, which has been established over 150 years, has a world wide reputation for the excellence of superior standard. The tobacco business requires men of peculiar skill and knowledge of the business and were Beech Nut tobacco to be put out by a concern not familiar and experienced in the manufacture and sale of tobacco products it could not but hurt the reputation and standard of the Beech Nut tobacco products put out by the Lorillard Company.

S. E. SPENCE.

My name is S. E. Spence; I am forty-nine years of age; address, No. 119 West 40th Street, New York City, and am District Manager for P. Lorillard Company; a corporation engaged in the manufacture and marketing of all kinds of tobacco products, except snuff. I have been in the tobacco business about seventeen years and have been with the P. Lorillard Company since December, 1911. From August, 1903, to December, 1903, I was associated with the Continental Tobacco Company, and from January, 1904, to December, 1911, I was Secretary and Auditor for Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co. While I was with the Continental Tobacco Company in 1903 I know that it took over the property, business, trade marks, good will and the like of the the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company of Louisville, Ky., including the trade mark Beech Nut which Weissinger used on tobacco, and that subsequently the Continental Tobacco Company transferred this brand Beech Nut together with the business and good will thereof to Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company, and that subsequently Luhrman & Wilbern was taken over by the Lorillard Company together with all its business, trade marks and the like, and I was a witness to the written document of sale and assignment of the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co. to the P. Lorillard Company. I also know of my own knowledge that from 1904 to the time Luhrman & Wilbern was taken over by P. Lorillard Company it manufactured and marketed such brands of tobacco as "Polar Bear," "Old Nut," "Scrap Iron," "Bag Pipe" and "Beech Nut," except the years noted.

As to the Beech Nut tobacco I produce herewith and mark it P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit 5 one of the paper bags or packages in which Luhrman & Wilbern packaged and sold Beech Nut tobacco from 1904 to 1911. During the early years that Luhrman & Wilbern were putting out this Beech Nut tobacco, after taking over the business of Harry Weissinger Tob. Co., it sold what was quite a quantity for those days, although the same might appear small today. The brand was sold in those days particularly through such States as Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. It was sold in Pittsburgh to such concerns as Jenkins, Ewart, Arbuckles and others, and in Cumberland, Md., to J. C. Orrick & Sons Co. I refer to the table of sales forming part of the stipulated deposition of Mr. Ball, Vice-President of the Lorillard Company, Exhibit 1, and make particular reference to that portion of the table covering the years 1904-1911 when I was Secretary and Auditor of Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company. This table was made from the books forming the records of the Luhrman & Wilbern Tob. Co., and it will be noted that the sales gradually diminished until 1910 but twenty-five pounds were made and sold. Luhrman & Wilbern did not make and sell any Beech Nut Tobacco during the years 1911-1914, as shown by said table, for the brand was not pushed during those years, as other brands were being actively marketed, and in the tobacco business, as in any other business it is necessary to actively push a brand and keep it before the public in order to keep up the sales. However, the brand and trade mark was not dropped or abandoned, for Luhrman & Wilbern during those years had on hand the necessary materials such as the formula, tobacco, wrappers and packages necessary to fill any order received from a customer for Beech Nut tobacco, and I, as Auditor and Credit man for this concern, would have O. K.'d any genuine order received from a responsible concern for this tobacco during those years. In February, 1915, the Lorillard Company as owners of the trade mark and brand again began to actively push this Beech Nut tobacco and it has had large sales ever since, until today it is one of the most prominent brands of tobacco owned and marketed by the P. Lorillard Company. During the time I was with the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co., this Beech Nut trade mark for tobacco was recognized as the property of Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co., as successors of the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Co., as it is today recognized as the trade mark of the P. Lorillard Company for tobacco products as the successor of the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company. The Continental Tobacco Co. held the mark and business for a short time before it transferred it to Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co.

As one long engaged in the tobacco business, and familiar therewith, it is my opinion that should any other person or concern enter the market with a tobacco product, such as a cigarette, under the name or trade mark "Beech Nut," such action would be injurious and damaging to the P. Lorillard Company, for the reason that this concern in the tobacco industry is recognized as the owner and manufacturer and seller of Beech Nut tobacco. This company has an enviable reputation for the excellence of its tobacco product, and is one of the largest tobacco manufacturers in the United States, if not in the world, and also one of the oldest. Purchasers would in my opinion confuse the late-comer's tobacco with the P. Lorillard Company's Beech Nut tobacco, resulting in lost sales and consequent injury and damage to the business of P. Lorillard Company. The manufacturer of tobacco, particularly the blending thereof, requires a high degree of skill and experience, and the injury to P. Lorillard Company would be aggravated did the late-comer place upon the market a tobacco under the name or trade mark "Beech Nut," not up to the Lorillard's standard or not suitable to the public taste, as this would have a very bad effect upon the reputation of the Beech Nut tobacco now sold by P. Lorillard Company, and of great popularity as shown by the millions of pounds sold annually.

BENJAMIN I. BELT.

My name is Benjamin I. Belt and I am of lawful age. I reside at the Hotel Marie Antoinette in New York City, and am now a Vice-President of P. Lorillard Company, as I have been ever since the organization of the present Lorillard Company.

The Lorillard Company is one of the four largest makers and distributors of tobacco products in the United States, having outstanding securities as follows:

Preferred Stock	$11,307,600.00
Common Stock	30,311,200.00
5% Bonds	10,617,450.00
7% Bonds	10,208,300.00

For the year 1919 the aggregate retail money value of its output was something over $80,000,000.00. It has twenty-five branches located in twelve different cities of the United States. It makes and sells all manner of tobacco products with the single exception of snuff.

I am in direct charge of the selling of cigarettes for the Company and my knowledge of its products has more particular reference to cigarettes, but I do know that the Company has been for a good many years actively making and selling a tobacco under the trade mark "Beech Nut," which is adapted and used for both chewing and smoking, and that the term "Beech Nut" as applied to tobacco products has come to be known in the tobacco trade as indicating a product of the Lorillard Company.

Prior to coming with the P. Lorillard Company in December, 1911, I was connected with The American Tobacco Company as head of its cigarette selling department, and I have been in the tobacco business, principally connected with the selling of cigarettes, for the past 20 years.

In or about the summer of 1916, this Company conceived the idea of making and marketing a blended cigarette, for which purpose it selected the trade mark "Beech Nut," as being a trade mark already owned by this Company for tobacco products and known throughout the tobacco world as indicating Lorillard tobacco products. For this purpose printers and lithographers were approached in order to obtain labels, wrapping material and advertising matter, with the result that after the trying-out of many different color schemes, there was adopted the package for this brand of cigarette, a sample of which is herewith filed and marked P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit No. 6. Raw material was acquired and a blend selected for the cigarette, and all preparations were made, and the Company had prior to May, 1919, put itself in a position of entire readiness to make this brand and place it on the market, but though many of the cigarettes were made up and packed into these packages, and the internal revenue stamps affixed and cancelled, no cigarettes under the brand "Beech Nut" had yet been sold, the reason being that the Company considered the time, for various reasons, unfavorable to an attempt to make and market this brand. The Company has in no wise abandoned its idea of making and marketing the cigarette under this trade mark. It is simply postponing so doing until what it considers a favorable time for the purpose.

I herewith file as an Exhibit, P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit No. 7, a letter to this Company from Wolcott Brothers Company, dated August 25th, 1916, and as P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit No. 8, an order O. K.'d by me under date of September 15, 1916, for one million

"Beech Nut" cigarette shells for the purpose of making and marketing this brand.

My experience in the tobacco business and my knowledge of the extent to which this Company has made and sold tobacco products under the trade mark "Beech Nut," makes me feel certain that the attempt by any other concern to make and market a tobacco product under the trade mark "Beech Nut" would operate most injuriously to the interests of this Company, as it would be a seller by the last comer on the reputation established for "Beech Nut" as a tobacco trade mark by the Lorillard Company, and if the product of the last comer were inferior, that inferiority would be charged by the trade against the products made and sold by the Lorillard Company under the trade mark "Beech Nut."

Furthermore, it would cause confusion in the trade and induce the public to buy the product of the last comer in the belief that they were thereby getting the product of the Lorillard Company with its usual standard of manufacturing excellence and quality. This would undoubtedly result, in my opinion, in the loss of sales by P. Lorillard Company, and consequently would result in damage, and inevitably loss and injury, to the business, reputation and finance of this Company.

ALFRED W. HAYWOOD.

My name is Alfred W. Haywood, of lawful age, residing at 536 West 113th St., New York City, and am an attorney at law by profession. During the year 1915 and for several years thereafter I was Assistant Counsel for P. Lorillard Company, tobacco manufacturers and distributors, No. 119 West 40th Street, New York City. In due course of business, on May 27th, 1915, June 10th, 1915, and June 19th, 1915, I wrote certain letters to the Broecker Tobacco Company of New Albany, Indiana, on behalf of the P. Lorillard Company, requesting them to desist in the use of the name Beech Nut for twist tobacco as this trade mark for tobacco product was the property of the P. Lorillard Company. I received a reply acknowledging these communications, which reply in reference thereto stated, in substance that our notice was sufficient. July 14th, 1915, I replied to this communication on behalf of the P. Lorillard Company stating that I understood the Broecker Tobacco Company would refrain from using the name "Beech Nut" tobacco. This "Broecker" correspondence is submitted herewith as P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit No. 9.

On October 1st, 1915, on behalf of the P. Lorillard Company, I addressed a letter to C. E. Schutz, Esq., Evansville, Indiana, calling attention to an earlier letter of September 16, 1915, wherein Mr. Schutz was requested to discontinue using the name Beech Nut for twist tobacco. On October 9, 1915, a reply was received from Mr. Schutz agreeing to discontinue as per our request. This "Schutz" correspondence is submitted as Lorillard Exhibit No. 10.

My recollection is that I also notified one or two other parties who were attempting to use Beech Nut for tobacco products, and that these parties also agreed to discontinue.

JACOB LEVY.

My name is Jacob Levy, of lawful age, address No. 22 Fourth Ave., New York City, and am buyer for the Metropolitan Tobacco Co., which is generally regarded in the tobacco industry as the largest jobber of tobacco products in the United States. In the year of 1915, and since that time the Metropolitan Tobacco Company has purchased hundreds of thousands of pounds of Beech Nut tobacco from the P. Lorillard Company which is recognized as one of the oldest and largest tobacco manufacturing concerns in the United States. The Metropolitan Tobacco Company has in turn sold the Lorillard Beech Nut tobacco to numerous customers in the State of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and other States. The Metropolitan Tobacco Company in and since 1915 has continually purchased this tobacco from the P. Lorillard Company, and is so purchasing it today. It is a very popular brand, has a wide sale, is recognized in the tobacco industry as the brand of P. Lorillard Company, that is to say, "Beech Nut" as applied to tobacco products is recognized as P. Lorillard Company's trade mark. Cigarettes in the tobacco business are recognized, of course, in the same category as smoking and chewing tobacco, cigars, plug, etc., as all are tobacco products, and are sold by cigar stores, tobacco dealers and others dealing in tobacco products. In my opinion should any other person or concern place a Beech Nut cigarette or other form of tobacco product upon the market it would be injurious and damaging to the business of P. Lorillard Company, and confusing to the public and dealers in tobacco, because it would lead the public and dealers to believe that the late-comer's brand of tobacco was that of the P. Lorillard Company, because of the use of the same name Beech Nut, would result in lost sales to the P. Lorillard Company, and if the late-comer's brand was not up to the recognized excellence of P. Lorillard Company's product, this would also seriously affect the reputation and sale of the P. Lorillard Company's Beech Nut tobacco.

MONROE W. ROTHSCHILD.

My name is Monroe W. Rothschild; I am of lawful age; address, World Building, New York City; have been in the tobacco business for fourteen years and am Sales Manager for the Schulte Company which has hundreds of Schulte Cigar Stores throughout the United States, these cigar stores being located in the principal large cities.

In 1915, and each year since then, up to the present time, the Schulte concern has purchased thousands of pounds of Beech Nut tobacco, under this name, from the P. Lorillard Company, and has sold this Beech Nut tobacco of P. Lorillard Company in the various Schulte stores throughout the country. It is a very popular brand of tobacco and has a wide sale through the Schulte stores. It is sold in the form shown by the Exhibit No. 2 of Mr. Ball's stipulated deposition, and it is also sold in plug form. In the tobacco industry, in which I have been engaged for the past fourteen years, Beech Nut, as applied to tobacco products, is recognized as the trade mark of P. Lorillard Company. In the trade cigarettes are recognized of course as a tobacco product and are sold by the same class of dealers as those dealing in other forms of tobacco, smoking and chewing, cigars and the like. In my opinion should another concern other than P. Lorillard Company place a tobacco product, such as a cigarette, on the market under the name Beech Nut, it would be damaging and injurious to the business of P. Lorillard Company by reason of causing confusion in the trade resulting in the sale of the late-comer's product as that of the P. Lorillard Company, thus resulting in lost sales to the latter concern. Beech Nut tobacco has been and is ordered by the Schulte Company from the Lorillard Company under the name Beech Nut, and has been and is sold in our stores as Beech Nut tobacco, the name appearing prominently on the packages.

JESSE R. TAYLOR.

My name is Jesse R. Taylor; I am of lawful age, address, No. 44 West 18th Street, New York City, and I am Vice-President of the United Cigar Stores Company of America. This company has hundreds of retail cigar stores throughout the United States, in practically all the principal cities of the United States. Beginning in 1915, and yearly and continuously thereafter it has purchased and sold hundreds of thousands of pounds of Beech Nut tobacco made by the P. Lorillard Company. It has purchased from the P. Lorillard Company and sold to customers hundreds of thousands of packages of Beech Nut tobacco like that exemplified by Exhibit No. 2 of Mr. Ball's stipulated deposition, and has also purchased and sold great quantities of the Beech Nut plug made by P. Lorillard Company. The P. Lorillard Company's Beech Nut tobacco is a very popular brand and has a tremendous sale, to my knowledge, through the United Cigar Stores. In the tobacco business cigarettes are recognized as a tobacco product, and are sold in our stores along with other forms of smoking and chewing tobacco, cigars and the like. The Beech Nut trade mark for tobacco products is recognized in the tobacco industry as the trade mark of the P. Lorillard Company, and should any other tobacco product be put upon the market by any other concern than the P. Lorillard Company under this name or trade mark Beech Nut, it would in my opinion be injurious and damaging to the P. Lorillard Company's business, particularly as affecting the Beech Nut tobacco business of this concern, by reason of the fact that confusion would in my opinion occur in the trade and also to the public by reason of the identity of the names, and the latecomer's product would be confused with that of the P. Lorillard Company, thus affecting injuriously the sales of the latter's product. Furthermore the P. Lorillard Company's products, particularly Beech Nut tobacco, have a high reputation for excellence, and the appearance of another tobacco product than that of the P. Lorillard Company under this name Beech Nut would in some measure feed upon and reap the benefit of the reputation of the P. Lorillard Company's brand to the disadvantage financially and otherwise of the P. Lorillard Company.

J. LEWIS ORRICK

being first duly sworn, deposes and says as follows:

I am of lawful age, a resident of Cumberland, Maryland, and am Secretary and Treasurer of the J. C. Orrick & Sons Co., of Cumberland, Maryland, wholesale grocers and jobbers. This concern has been continuously engaged in business for over half a century, being established in 1863, and incorporated in 1887. Its trade now, as in the past, extends throughout Maryland and the neighboring states. My father, Mr. C. J. Orrick, now deceased, was formerly President of the company, and I, myself, have been connected with this concern for many years past, and am, and have been, familiar with its business and its records.

I know that the J. C. Orrick & Sons Co., purchased, kept in stock and sold "Beechnut" tobacco for many years and it is at the present time, purchasing "Beechnut" tobacco and "Beechnut" plug tobacco from the P. Lorillard Company and is selling such "Beechnut" tobacco to its customers.

I have recently had occasion, at the request of certain representatives of P. Lorillard Company, to examine our old records, or rather the records of the J. C. Orrick & Sons Co., in my charge, for the purpose of endeavoring to ascertain when and from whom the J. C. Orrick & Sons Co. purchased "Beechnut" tobacco. As a result of this examination of the records of my company, and which records have been kept in due course of business, I produce herewith, certain paid invoices, showing that in 1902, in the months of February and November, the J. C. Orrick & Sons Co., purchased "Beechnut" tobacco from Harry Weissinger Tob. Co.; that in February and March, 1903, this concern, the J. C. Orrick & Sons Co., purchased "Beechnut" tobacco, from the Continental Tobacco Co.; and that in December, 1906, and January, 1908, the J. C. Orrick & Sons Co. purchased "Beechnut" tobacco from Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co.

For the sake of convenience, I now set forth in this affidavit, a tabulated statement of these invoices:

HARRY WEISINGER TOB. CO.

Jan. 24, 1908	71958 (1—100 Beech Nut)	Feb. 3, '08

The four original Weisinger Invoices are herewith submitted and made a part of this affidavit, and are marked "P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit No. 11."

The three original Continental Tobacco Co. in-voices, are herewith submitted and made a part of this affidavit, and are marked "P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit No. 12."

The Luhrman & Wilbern Tob. Co., original invoices, are herewith submitted, and made a part of this affidavit, and are marked "P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit No. 13."

I might also state that in my examination of our records, I find that one of our stock books shows the following:

January	1, 1907—	"Beech Nut" in stock
December	31, 1908	do
January	1, 1910	do
August	4, 1910	do
March	1, 1911	do

From any familiarity with the records of the J. C. Orrick & Sons Co., and the system then employed in keeping the same, I can state that these entries mean that at the time of "taking stock," at or about the dates appearing, we had on hand, "Beechnut" Tobacco.

I will further state that some months prior to the making of this affidavit, a representative of the P. Lorillard Company, called at the place of business of the J. C. Orrick & Sons Co., here in Cumberland, Maryland, and made inquiry as to our having purchased and sold "Beechnut" tobacco in years gone by. I told him I thought we had some very old "Beechnut" tobacco still in stock, and upon looking into the matter, I found this to be so, and I sold the gentleman a large carton containing small retail packages of "Beechnut" tobacco, which the label on the package shows, was the product of the Harry Weissinger Tob. Co. of Louisville, Kentucky. I produce herewith as Exhibit No. 14, one of these small packages of tobacco, identical with those in the carton sold to the P. Lorillard Co. representative, and it will be noted that it bears a red label, with the word "Beechnut" thereon, the picture of a squirrel, the words "Chewing and Smoking Tobacco" and the name of the manufacturer or producer, "Harry Weissinger Tobacco Co."

To the best of my knowledge and belief, this Harry Weissinger Tobacco Co., "Beechnut" tobacco, which the J. C. Orrick & Sons Co., recently sold to the P. Lorillard Co. representative, had been in our stock for many years, prior to such sale, and we always stood ready and willing to sell the same to any responsible purchaser who might call for it.

I have been connected with the J. C. Orrick & Sons Co., in one capacity or another, for nearly twenty years, and I know to my own personal knowledge, that this concern, during the first years of my connection therewith, was selling "Beechnut" tobacco which, to the best of my knowledge and belief, was purchased from Harry Weissinger Tob. Co., Continental Tobacco Co. and Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co.

Arnold, Charles C. St. Clair, T. F. Coyle and H. O. Evans, being waived.

SEBASTIAN HINTON, ESQ., on behalf of Beech-nut Packing Company.

The direct testimony of W. H. Nichol, a witness called on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, is hereby stipulated as follows, subject to cross-examination, the introduction in evidence of the record book referred to by the witness being waived.

W. H. NICHOL.

Being first duly sworn by the said Clarence A. Williams, acting as Examiner, by consent, deposes and says as follows:

I am of lawful age, a resident of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and am connected with Allen Kirkpatrick & Company, wholesale grocers and jobbers, located at 903 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

I have been connected with this concern for about twenty-five years, and I know that during the years of 1901-1902 to 1903, Allen Kirkpatrick & Company purchased tobacco, under the name or mark, "Beechnut," and sold this tobacco to the trade. Since 1915, and to the present time, Allen Kirkpatrick & Company have continuously purchased, from P. Lorillard Company, large quantities of tobacco, under the name or mark, "Beechnut," and put up in packages similar to that shown by P. Lorillard Company Exhibit No. 16.

Recently, I was asked by Mr. A. C. Hursh, a representative of the P. Lorillard Company, to examine some of our old records, for the purpose of ascertaining when and from whom "Beechnut" tobacco was purchased. Upon examining our Cost Book records, I find that the first purchase Allen Kirkpatrick & Company made of "Beechnut" tobacco was on the 25th of July, 1901, from Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, of Louisville, Kentucky. In 1901, Allen Kirkpatrick & Company made six separate purchases of this "Beechnut" tobacco from Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company; in 1902, six purchases; in 1903, one purchase, from Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company.

For the sake of convenience and clearness, I set forth here below a true copy of the entries appearing upon these records of Allen Kirkpatrick & Company, relating to "Beechnut" tobacco, as follows:

These cost or price books form a part of the permanent records of this office, and the entries therein were made by me in due course of business.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

By MR. HINTON:

XQ. 1. What was your capacity in Allen Kirkpatrick Company for the years 1901 to 1903?

A. I was buyer and general clerk.

XQ. 2. Did you continue to be buyer after 1903. That is, how long?

A. Up to the present moment.

XQ. 3. You are still buyer?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 4. Do you know why the Allen Kirkpatrick Company did not buy any tobacco manufactured by Luhrman & Wilbern or Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company under the name "Beechnut" after the year 1903?

A. Do I know why they did not buy during those years? I presume the reason was that it was taken over by another tobacco company.

XQ. 5. When was it taken over by another tobacco company; do you know?

A. I can't answer that without looking at the records.

XQ. 6. Assuming that this brand had been taken over by another tobacco company, would that account for the fact that Allen Kirkpatrick & Company did not buy any more of it after 1903?

A. Please repeat that question.

(Question read.)

A. Well, I think we did buy more of it after 1903.

XQ. 7. You think you did?

A. Yes.

XQ. 8. But you haven't any records, have you?

A. Our official cost book will show. That is the complete accurate record of all the purchases from that time to this date.

XQ. 9. Your cost books have been produced in evidence in the form of certain copies therefrom and I have just examined these cost books and do not find any purchases of tobacco under the name "Beechnut" after the year 1903. If this examination was accurate, would that indicate that your concern did not buy this tobacco after 1903?

A. We have bought the tobacco after 1903.

XQ. 10. And prior to 1915?

A. I would have to look at the records to be certain as to that statement. The records are complete.

XQ. 11. Do these records to which you refer comprise these books out of which these entries have been copied?

A. They do.

XQ. 12. These are your cost books?

A. Those are our cost book records.

XQ. 13. They contain entries up to 1908 and 1909, if my examination is correct?

A. Yes, sir. They contain them not only for the years you mention, but right up to the present moment. Now, you understand, it is a loose leaf book; some of the pages have been put in the transfer bindings, but the records are complete.

XQ. 14. In other words, those books there are complete records?

A. Yes, sir, absolutely.

XQ. 15. It is a fact, isn't it, that those books do not contain a record of any purchase of tobacco under the name, "Beechnut" after the year 1903? At least, I have been unable to find any in the books, and I have just examined them.

A. You say after 1903. Do you mean after that date up to the present time?

XQ. 16. Yes, for 1903 and prior to 1915.

A. I would have to examine the books myself to make a positive statement on that.

XQ. 17. Would you mind looking them over? (To Mr. Cavanagh.)

(Mr. Cavanagh states that he has examined the record books that were submitted by Allen Kirkpatrick & Company and referred to by the witness, and finds no entries therein concerning the sale of "Beechnut" tobacco to Allen Kirkpatrick & Company after 1903 and until 1915.)

By Mr. Hinton:

XQ. 18. Mr. Nichol, how much personal recollection have you of the dealings in this "Beechnut" tobacco purchased by your concern around 1903, besides what you gather from these old records?

A. Well, I am not and was not the tobacco buyer, and my knowledge of it would be simply the record as it is recorded in the books.

XQ. 19. Who was the tobacco buyer at that time?

A. Mr. Charles C. St. Clair.

XQ. 20. Where is he located now?

A. Right here.

XQ. 21. Is he still tobacco buyer?

A. He is.

XQ. 22. You have no personal knowledge, then, of the reason that Allen Kirkpatrick & Company stopped buying "Beechnut" tobacco in 1903, if they did so stop?

A. No personal knowledge; no.

XQ. 23. You never, then, attempted to buy this tobacco or know of such an attempt being made prior to 1915, which attempt was unsuccessful?

A. I can't answer, because I was not the buyer—not the tobacco buyer.

W. H. Nichol.

CHARLES C. ST. CLAIR,

a witness produced on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By MR. CAVANAGH:

Q. 24. Please state your name, age, residence and occupation.

A. Charles C. St. Clair; age 50 years; residence, 1924 Perrysville Avenue, North Side, Pittsburgh, Pa., buyer, wholesale grocery business, Allen Kirkpatrick & Company.

Q. 25. How long have you been buyer for Allen Kirkpatrick & Company?

A. Twenty-five years.

Q. 26. Do you recollect ever purchasing "Beechnut" tobacco from that concern?

A. I do.

Q. 27. From what concern?

A. My first recollection is Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company.

Q. 28. Will you please state in your own words, exactly what your recollection is as to the purchase of tobacco under the brand or name "Beechnut?"

A. I recall very definitely buying frequently "Beechnut" tobacco from Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company, and we bought it in pretty large quantities later on from P. Lorillard Company. I don't know just the dates; I haven't got that in my mind. Those are the only two concerns that I remember buying distinctly "Beechnut" tobacco from.

Q. 29. Do you recollect buying any "Beechnut" tobacco from Harry Weissinger, personally?

A. I do not.

Q. 30. State the reason, if you know it.

A. There was another buyer prior to that time that looked after the tobacco business entirely.

Q. 31. What did your concern do with the "Beechnut" tobacco that it bought from Luhrman & Wilbern?

A. We sold it to the retail trade.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

By MR. HINTON:

XQ. 32. Do you know when your company stopped buying "Beechnut" tobacco from Luhrman & Wilbern?

A. I can't tell you that without referring to the records.

XQ. 33. You have no recollection of why your company stopped buying "Beechnut" tobacco?

A. I have not.

XQ. 34. Can you make any supposition as to the reason?

A. Well, my only opinion would be that they were unable to get it; it was not manufactured; no other reason that I know of.

XQ. 35. Can you recall at all, Mr. St. Clair, when Allen Kirkpatrick—or about when they stopped buying "Beechnut" tobacco from Luhrman & Wilbern Company?

A. No, I cannot. If you had asked me privately I would have said that we have been buying it all these years. I did not recall that it was off the market.

XQ. 36. Your cost records on that would be accurate, I suppose?

A. Absolutely. We enter every foreign bill that we get in our Cost Book. There is no question about that.

XQ. 37. I understand that you keep your correspondence in letter press books.

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 38. And have done so since when?

A. Well, now prior to my time. To my knowledge twenty-nine years.

XQ. 39. And the letters that you received, how long do you keep those?

A. They are filed away by months and those are kept in these cabinets here for I think five months. I think that is all they will hold. Then they are transferred to "Jumbo" letter files. Those are filed away upstairs.

XQ. 40. How long do you keep them?

A. I may say six years. When they get too numerous we simply take the old ones and destroy them. We feel that they are of no value after six years.

XQ. 41. You don't conduct a retail business, do you?

A. No, sir.

CHAS. C. ST. CLAIR.

(The direct testimony of William M. Gormly, a witness called on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, is hereby stipulated as follows, subject to cross-examination, the introduction in evidence of the record book referred to by the witness being waived.)

WILLIAM M. GORMLY,

being first duly sworn, deposes and says as follows:

I am of lawful age, a resident of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and am buyer with S. Ewart Company, 921

Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. This concern, S. Ewart Company, is engaged in the wholesale grocery and tobacco business, and does a large wholesale and jobbing business in Pennsylvania and neighboring states. I have been connected with this concern for about thirty years and am familiar with its method of doing business, its trade and its records.

I know that S. Ewart Company purchased and sold tobacco under the name and brand "Beechnut," beginning about 1901 and for several years thereafter, and that since 1915, to and including the present year, it has continuously purchased and sold large quantities of tobacco under the name or brand "Beechnut," which is manufactured by and obtained from P. Lorillard Company.

Recently, I had occasion, at the request of a representative of P. Lorillard Company, one Mr. A. C. Hursh, to examine certain old records of the S. Ewart Company for the purpose of endeavoring to ascertain when and from whom the S. Ewart Company purchased tobacco under the name or brand, "Beechnut." As a result of this examination of the records of S. Ewart Company, and which records were kept in due course of business, I find that the price or cost book of this concern shows the following purchases of "Beechnut" tobacco from the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, of Louisville, Kentucky, on the dates herein mentioned. For the sake of convenience, I now set forth in this affidavit a copy of the entries appearing in this price book:

Dec.	27	40	Boxes	"	10	"	40	"	"	360.35	10%	9.00	81.00	"

I have been shown a package of "Beechnut" tobacco with the representation of a red squirrel thereon, and bearing the name, "Harry Weissinger Tobacco Co.," and which is marked "P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit No. 14," and to the best of my recollection, knowledge and belief, it is similar to such "Beechnut" tobacco packages as were purchased from Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company by S. Ewart Company in the years 1901-1902, and which were sold by the S. Ewart Company to the trade.

I have to submit herewith a package of "Beechnut" Chewing and Smoking Tobacco, which I have marked "P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit No. 17." It will be noted that this package of tobacco bears the word "Beechnut," the picture of a squirrel and the words, "Harry Weissinger Tobacco Co., Incorporated, Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co., Successor." It will further be noted that the cancellation on the revenue stamp bears the date April 6, 1905. This package of tobacco, Exhibit No. 17, has been in the sample case of S. Ewart Company for many years. On June 3rd, 1920, I took this package of "Beechnut" tobacco from the sample case, along with a similar old package of "Beechnut" tobacco, the revenue stamp of which bore the cancellation date of May 3, 1905. Both these old packages are similar to or facsimile specimens of "Beechnut" tobacco which was bought and sold by S. Ewart Company around about the period of 1905, the cancellation dates of the revenue stamps. Packages like Exhibit No. 17 were, to the best of my recollection and belief, purchased from the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co., the concern whose name appears upon the Exhibit package.

I have also been shown P. Lorillard Company Exhibit No. 16, and can state that this is similar to the package of "Beechnut" tobacco which I have been purchasing on behalf of S. Ewart Company from the P. Lorillard Company since 1915, in large quantities, and am so purchasing at the present time.

I might further say that the cost book or record above referred to, and from which the entries have been copied, is very large and bulky, being of the general dimensions of a large ledger, and it forms a part of the permanent records of this office. The entries, so far as concerns "Beechnut" tobacco, appearing therein, in 1901 and 1902, were made by Mr. H. H. Arnold, and I am familiar with his handwriting.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

By MR. HINTON:

XQ. 42. How long have you been tobacco buyer for S. Ewart Company?

A. Well, full line, ten years.

XQ. 43. Who was tobacco buyer prior to your coming with the Company?

A. J. S. Arnold.

XQ. 44. Did you have charge of the tobacco buying of S. Ewart Company in any way prior to 1910?

A. Yes, in a way, but not as a full line.

XQ. 45. Where is J. S. Arnold at the present time?

A. J. S. Arnold is at Atlantic City.

XQ. 46. Can you give me his address?

A. Why I can get it for you. I understand he has left this year; he has retired.

XQ. 47. Do you know what he is doing?

A. Nothing; walking the boardwalk.

XQ. 48. He is broken down in health, is he?

A. No, not exactly; but he retired several years ago and went to Atlantic City.

XQ. 49. He was buyer prior to 1910?

A. He was one of the firm; the firm was then S. Ewart & Company; Samuel Ewart and J. S. Arnold.

XQ. 50. He was one of the partners?

A. Yes, he was the active member.

XQ. 51. You have produced a package of tobacco, Lorillard Exhibit No. 17. Will you please state fully where you got this package of tobacco?

A. Out of that old drawer of samples downstairs, that has been out of use—the drawer as a sample drawer has been out of use for ten years.

XQ. 52. What are the contents of that sample drawer?

A. Samples of various manufacturers' cut and dry.

XQ. 53. What is the condition of the drawer?

A. Of the drawer?

XQ. 54. Or of the samples that are in the drawer?

A. I guess they are pretty well dried out now, and the drawer was full until such time as we abstracted the "Beechnut."

XQ. 55. I noticed in that drawer, which you kindly showed me, a large number of packages of tobacco. Would you tell me how completely that line of tobacco in there represents the packages of tobacco which were on the market at the time Lorillard Exhibit No. 17 went into the drawer?

A. That drawer was supposed to be complete. Like all other sample cases, it never was.

XQ. 56. Was it nearly complete, in your opinion?

A. As complete as we could get it, because we would fill it up and some person would come and borrow one and put it in his pocket. It was supposed to be complete but never was.

XQ. 57. The drawer is nearly full at the present time. In your opinion, does it contain most of the samples that were originally in there?

A. I would think so.

XQ. 58. In other words, that drawer would give one a pretty fair idea of the kinds of packages of tobacco which were on the market when this Lorillard exhibit went in there?

A. It would give a very good idea of the different kinds and different sized packages that we sold at that time.

XQ. 59. You have no intention of destroying that drawer, or breaking it up in any way, have you?

A. No definite intention now, except that it should have been done long ago.

XQ. 60. You are willing to preserve that drawer in its present condition for a little while, aren't you?

A. Well, until housecleaning.

XQ. 61. When will housecleaning be?

A. I don't know; as soon as we can get enough niggers to go to work.

XQ. 62. That drawer has been there in practically its present condition how long?

A. I guess about fifteen years. I know I have told people that have asked me several times for a package of tobacco to go there in that drawer and get some. They would take it on account of its age. That it wasn't my brand is the only thing that saved it.

XQ. 63. Have you any display case for tobaccos which you are now offering to the trade?

A. No; practically, no. There are some samples down there, but we are out of it more oftener than we have it and simply pay no attention to it.

XQ. 64. Have you any idea, Mr. Gormly, why the S. Ewart Company stopped buying "Beechnut" tobacco in packages corresponding to Lorillard Exhibit No. 17?

A. No, I don't know. Possibly just a lack of call for it.

XQ. 65. You have no definite recollection of that?

A. No.

XQ. 66. Mr. J. S. Arnold was in charge of those matters at about that time?

A. Yes, he had full charge of matters of that kind.

XQ. 67. How long do you preserve correspondence here?

A. I would hate to tell you. I found some the other day dated 1867.

XQ. 68. You are in the custom of preserving all your old correspondence?

A. Not if we have to look it up, we don't.

XQ. 69. You mean by that, that if you are asked to find it, it is destroyed?

A. Nothing doing on that.

XQ. 70. Well, just for general information, do you classify your correspondence, when it is filed away, by the name of the person to whom the letter is addressed?

A. We file everything in a cabinet file and when that file gets full, we put it in the transfer, and when we get a pile of them, case them and put them away.

XQ. 71. That correspondence is all more or less classified?

A. Oh, yes.

XQ. 72. So that you could pick out correspondence of any particular concern if you wanted to do so?

A. Oh, it could be done; yes.

XQ. 73. Will you do me the favor, Mr. Gormly, of letting me know before you destroy that old drawer of "Beechnut" tobacco? Would you be willing to do that?

A. Why don't you buy it and be done with it? We are not going to destroy it, as far as I know.

XQ. 74. The reason I don't want to buy it is because it would not be of much value to me as evidence only as it is. I am perfectly willing to buy all the packages in there if you will keep them for me as they are.

A. We are not going to destroy it, I don't think.

We offered to give it away several times and no person would take it on account of its age. Then it wasn't my kind and I don't use it.

XQ. 75. You don't run a retail business here?

A. No.

RE-DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By MR. CAVANAGH:

RDQ. 76. Can you recall, Mr. Gormly, from what representative of the Weissinger company you first purchased "Beechnut" tobacco for S. Ewart Company?

A. John Davis.

RDQ. 77. Where was he located?

A. He was located here in the city. He was a resident agent.

RDQ. 78. For whom?

A. Weissinger.

RDQ. 79. And you first bought from John Davis?

A. Yes.

RDQ. 80. And subsequently from Luhrman & Wilbern?

A. Yes, I have bought it—I don't recall the name. John Davis was the original man. He had been with J. & W. Jenkinson a great many years and left there on account of his health and got hold of Weissinger's account.

RDQ. 81. You don't preserve all the old records here, do you?

A. No.

RDQ. 82. What do you do with them?

A. Burn them up. Every once in a while we find an old box with a lot of old junk in it. I think that drawer was forgotten.

W. M. GORMLY.

It is further stipulated, by and between the parties hereto, that if H. H. Arnold were called as a witness on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, he would testify as is set forth under oath below, production and examination of this witness being waived.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, }
COUNTY OF ALLEGHENY, } ss.:

H. H. ARNOLD,

being first duly sworn deposes and says as follows:

I am of lawful age, a resident of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and have been connected with the S. Ewart Company, 921 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, wholesalers and jobbers of groceries and tobacco, for over thirty years.

I have been asked to examine a cost or price book of the S. Eward Company, for the period of 1901 and 1902, with particular relation to certain entries therein, covering the purchase of "Beechnut" tobacco from Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company. I may say that these entries covering "Beechnut" tobacco, as well as vast numbers of other entries in this book or record, are all in my handwriting and were made at or about the time the invoices for the goods were received.

H. H. ARNOLD.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 15th day of June, 1920.

CLARENCE A. WILLIAMS,
(Seal) Notary Public.

My commission expires January 19, 1923.

The direct testimony of T. F. Coyle, a witness called on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, is hereby stipulated as follows, subject to cross-examination, the production of the bound price lists referred to by the witness being hereby waived:

T. F. COYLE,

being first duly sworn, deposes and says as follows:

I am of lawful age, a resident of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and am a buyer, connected with Arbuckles & Company, 808 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, which concern is engaged in the wholesale grocery business, with a trade extending through Pennsylvania and neighboring States. I have been connected with this concern for at least twenty-five years past, and have purchased vast quantities of goods for it, including tobacco of various brands.

I distinctly recall purchasing "Beechnut" tobacco for this concern in the early 90's and as late as 1908. This tobacco was first purchased by Arbuckles & Company from Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, of Louisville, Kentucky, and subsequently from the Continental Tobacco Company and Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company.

Recently, I was asked by Mr. A. C. Hursh, a representative of P. Lorillard Company, concerning purchases of tobacco under the name or mark "Beechnut," in the early 90's, and referring to our permanent records, I find that our printed price lists, which are in the form of bound volumes, show that we had in stock and were offering for sale this "Beechnut" tobacco. The first mention of this "Beechnut" tobacco appears in our price list of November 2nd, 1901, and the last mention of "Beechnut" tobacco appears in our printed price list of November 28th, 1908. These printed price lists were issued by Arbuckles & Company, and then fortnightly, and all the price lists for each year were bound in a single volume, each yearly volume being about four inches thick, eight inches wide and about one foot in length. In each weekly or semi-monthly price list, from November, 1901, to November, 1908, "Beechnut" tobacco, together with the price thereof, appears listed, and this means that we had this tobacco in stock and were ready to sell it to our customers.

Since 1915, to and including the present time, Arbuckles & Company have been continuously purchasing from P. Lorillard Company large quantities of "Beechnut" tobacco, like P. Lorillard Company Exhibit No. 16.

It is stipulated by counsel, that:

Witness on Cross-Examination testifies that he was handling, from 1901 to 1908, a very large number of items, possibly five thousand, and that he has no distinct personal recollection of dealings in the old "Beechnut" tobacco, except that he knows that he bought this commodity.

He has no knowledge of the reason for discontinuing the sale of the old "Beechnut" tobacco; but he does know that he bought the old "Beechnut" tobacco a great many times, like the Weissinger package, Exhibit No. 14, and the Luhrmann & Wilbern package corresponding to Exhibit No. 17; and that when an item appears in the price lists of Arbuckles & Company, that shows that that item is in stock. If they should happen to run out of the item for a week or two, it is stricken from the weekly price list of that week in which it was not in stock.

At the request of counsel for P. Lorillard Company, Mr. Hinton states on the record that he has examined several of the weekly and fortnightly price lists for the year 1901 and the year 1908, and finds therein the name, "Beechnut."

THOMAS F. COYLE.

The direct testimony of H. O. Evans, a witness called on behalf of P. Lorillard Company, is hereby stipulated as follows, subject to cross-examination, the production in evidence of the books referred to by the witness being waived:

H. O. EVANS,

being first duly sworn, deposes and says as follows:

I am of lawful age, a resident of Knoxville Borough, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, and am buyer for the wholesale grocery firm of Thomas C. Jenkins Company, 16 Terminal Way, Pittsburgh, Pa. I was connected with this firm for twenty-four years. This firm of Thomas C. Jenkins Company was established in 1863; retired April 30, 1920, and did a large jobbing and wholesale business throughout Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and West Virginia. During my connection with this concern, I have had occasion to familiarize myself with its records and have purchased great quantities of goods for the company.

I know, of my own knowledge, that Thomas C. Jenkins Company purchased, kept in stock, and sold, "Beechnut" tobacco, particularly during the period covered by the years of 1901, to and including 1907.

I also know that Thomas C. Jenkins Company has continuously purchased tobacco, known to the trade as "Beechnut" brand, from P. Lorillard Company since 1915, and is now so purchasing this "Beechnut" tobacco for their trade to April, 1920, from the P. Lorillard Company in large quantities, approximately about one hundred gross of ten cent packages per week.

I have recently had occasion, at the request of certain representatives of P. Lorillard Company, to examine the old records of Thomas C. Jenkins Company, for the purpose of endeavoring to ascertain when and from whom the Company purchased "Beechnut" tobacco.

As a result of the examination of these records, I find that in 1901 and 1902, the Thomas C. Jenkins Company purchased from the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, of Louisville, Kentucky, certain quantities of tobacco under the name or trade-mark, "Beechnut"; that in 1903, tobacco under the trade-mark or brand "Beechnut" was purchased from the Continental Tobacco Company; and that in 1904, 1906 and 1907, tobacco under the trade-mark or brand "Beechnut" was purchased from Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company. This tobacco was, of course, sold in due course of our wholesale business.

I have before me the cost records or books of the Thomas C. Jenkins Company, covering the periods above mentioned, that is, from 1901 to and including 1907, and for the sake of convenience, I now set forth in this affidavit a tabulated statement of the entries appearing in these records or cost books. I might say that these cost books or records were kept in due course of business and that most of the entries appearing therein, particularly those from 1901 to 1907, are in my handwriting. The entry appearing in 1901 was made by a party who is no longer connected with this concern and who is not available.

From my familiarity with the records of the Thomas C. Jenkins Company and from the fact that practically all of these entries were made by myself, I can state that following the usual practice, they were made in due course of business, on arrival of invoice.

I may further state that I distinctly recall, and can therefore positively state, that Thomas C. Jenkins Company, during the period embraced by the years 1901 to 1907, inclusive, bought tobacco put up in packages bearing the name, "Beechnut," and with the names of the manufacturers thereon.

I also produce herewith, make a part of this affidavit, and mark as "P. Lorillard Company Exhibit No. 16," a package of "Beechnut" tobacco, such as Thomas C. Jenkins Company has been purchasing from P. Lorillard Company continuously and in great quantities since the year 1915, down to and including the present year of 1920.

I might state that our records do not show any purchases of "Beechnut" tobacco during the years 1908-1914, inclusive.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

By MR. HINTON:

XQ. 83. Were you tobacco buyer in 1901?

A. No.

XQ. 84. What was your capacity with this house at that time?

A. 1901? Why—what is the first entry there under——

MR. CAVANAGH: That is October 8, 1901.

THE WITNESS: No, the first entry in my writing.

MR. CAVANAGH: That is 1902.

A. Well, at that time, I was probably working on the day books.

XQ. 85. You were a bookkeeper at that time?

A. Yes, on the day books.

XQ. 86. When did you become a buyer?

A. Let's see; I think it was 1914; I think it was shortly after the war began.

XQ. 87. Then you have no personal recollection of the dealings in "Beechnut" tobacco in the period 1901 to 1907, except as shown by these books?

A. Well, this 1902 is my entry here from the invoice. That is, this invoice from this firm here, see, is my entry.

XQ. 88. Who was the buyer at that time?

A. Mr. T. Clifton Jenkins.

XQ. 89. Do you know why the Jenkins Company stopped buying "Beechnut" tobacco after 1907 up to 1915?

A. While the record doesn't show that they did buy it, that record does not prove that they did not buy it. The entries here will show that it was a very small factor in our business. The entries show that we bought it in 100 pound lots; that is a very small item for tobacco, and if we should drop any tobacco that we purchased in 100 pound lots, it is not a factor in our business, accustomed as we are to buy in carload lots. If we should stop buying any tobacco at all that we buy in five or ten case lots, it means nothing at all, because we pick up more than that every day in jobbing trades.

XQ. 90. You have no personal recollection of having stopped buying or why they stopped buying it, or anything of the kind?

A. I don't say that we had stopped buying; the record doesn't prove anything.

XQ. 91. You have no personal recollection?

A. No.

XQ. 92. How long do you preserve your correspondence here?

A. Oh, let's see—maybe two years.

XQ. 93. You destroy everything that is more than two years old?

A. Some records, yes; probably letters, useless letters, etc. There would be some files like this—of course this isn't a correspondence file—this cost record goes back to '97; but our letters would be destroyed every two years—useless letters.

XQ. 94. Supposing you had correspondence with the Weissinger Tobacco Company——

A. We don't have it.

XQ. 95. You never had it?

A. We don't have it.

XQ. 96. Suppose you had had, in 1908-9, in that period, would you be apt to have it?

A. We wouldn't have it at all. We moved over here from Penn Avenue about eleven years ago, and we had a clean-up of files at that time; and then, after coming over here, we put in new filing cases—cleaned out the old stuff then, and it has been gone over every two or three years since. We have been over here eleven years.

XQ. 97. Where is Mr. T. Clifton Jenkins?

A. He left for home about a half hour ago.

XQ. 98. He is still here?

A. Yes.

XQ. 99. You are a wholesale concern?

A. You are speaking of the Thomas C. Jenkins Company? They retired, you see, on April 30th.

XQ. 100. You say you are a wholesale concern?

A. We were a wholesale concern; yes.

XQ. 101. In the period 1901 to 1907?

A. Yes, until 1920.

XQ. 102. Wholesale exclusively?

A. Yes.

RE-DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By MR. CAVANAGH:

RDQ. 103. Mr. Evans, on what theory are these entries made? Is an entry made every time an article is purchased?

A. Whenever there is any change, either in the size of the case, size of the package, price or terms, or the supplier—whenever there is any change of record necessary to indicate a different person bought from, or a difference, a change in terms, different price, different size package or different size case.

RDQ. 104. So that, so far as this record is concerned, there might have been other purchases of "Beechnut," which are not shown?

A. Yes; this record does not prove that we stopped buying. The entries prove that they were bought at that time.

RE-CROSS-EXAMINATION.

By MR. HINTON:

RXQ. 105. Can I see your last entry here of "Beechnut" tobacco?

A. What is the name of the firm?

MR. CAVANAGH: Luhrmann & Wilbern.

A. Is this it? (Referring to book.) That isn't our last record, you know; that is our last entry in this book. That check mark I put at the end of all the records, when we changed our system over to cards. We started our system and transferred the records over to cards after this.

RXQ. 106. Then, you have additional records beyond this?

A. Yes; do you want to see them?

RXQ. 107. I would like to, if you have them handy. handy.

Witness produces other records, on four cards, which are examined by counsel.

A. I don't have any stock records previous to 1917.

RXQ. 108. You have no other records between this book and 1917?

A. No; the stock cards would have proven that, but they are destroyed. Did you see these? (Referring to cards.)

RXQ. 109. I saw those.

A. I think that is what we had the other day.

RE-RE-DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By MR. CAVANAGH:

RRDQ. 110. These cards that you have produced, 1915, 1917 and 1919, show purchases of "Beechnut" from P. Lorillard Company?

A. Yes. That follows the record here, doesn't it? (Referring to book.)

RRDQ. 111. I am not sure.

Witness examines book.

A. When did Lorillard——

RRDQ. 112. 1915.

A. Well, that is probably when Lorillard's started in that size package, I guess—(Referring to card)—different sized cases or something, you see—yes, there you are—they were in 100 pound cases previously.

A. Well, I could not say how they run it.

XQ. 31. You said in your direct examination that the Luhrman & Wilbern Tob. Co. was run as a separate business, I am not interested in question of ownership, of stock or the like, I am interested in the manner in which the Luhrman & Wilbern business was run

XQ. 52. Was 100 lbs. the smallest batch?

A. That would be the smallest.

XQ. 53. How much of a stock of bags similar to P. Lorillard Exhibit 17 did you have on hand here after 1909, do you recollect?

A. I could not answer that question, we usually have several million bags.

A. We usually have a millon or so of bags on hand of most any brand.

XQ. 55. Did you ever have occasion to investigate how many bags, corresponding to Lorillard Exhibit No. 17 you had on hand during 1909 and 1914?

A. No.

XQ. 56. I notice that on plaintiff's Exhibit No. 17 Luhrman & Wilbern Tob. Co. are indicated to be the successor of Harry Weissinger Tob. Co., in your knowledge of tobacco sales what was the reason for this statement appearing on this?

A. I cannot answer this question.

XQ. 57. Do you suppose it would have any influence on the sales of the tobacco?

A. I would think that would be the reason.

XQ. 58. In order that customers recognizing the package put out by Harry Weissinger Tobacco Co., P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 14 and would recognize P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 17 as being the same stuff? Would that be the reason?

A. I would think so.

XQ. 59. What becomes of correspondence from jobbers and dealers received at this factory?

A. We keep them so long, and then destroy them.

XQ. 60. How long do you keep them?

A. I do not know.

XQ. 61. Do you follow the same practice with orders?

A. I could not answer this question.

XQ. 62. As far as you know you then still have, except for individual accidents, all the orders which have been received at this factory?

A. I do not know, our bookkeeper could answer those questions.

XQ. 63. I call your attention to a bag of tobacco, P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 16, where was this and similar bags made?

A. All made by the Western Paper Goods Co.

XQ. 64. Where are they located?

A. Cincinnati, Ohio.

XQ. 65. Who got up this bag?

A. I do not know.

XQ. 66. Did you have anything to do with it?

A. Not a thing.

XQ. 67. Where was it gotten up?

A. I do not know that.

XQ. 68. Do you know whether it was gotten up here at Middletown?

A. I know it was not.

XQ. 69. Now Mr. Boykin in what form did you receive instructions then being manager of this factory, to manufacture Scrap Tobacco pack it in bags similar to P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 16, ship it or sell it?

A. They sent Mr. Thomas Smith here to instruct myself how to manufacture this particular brand, we then received orders in the regular way for shipment to different customers.

XQ. 70. Who is Mr. Thomas Smith?

A. Manager of the Marion Branch of the P. Lorillard Co.

XQ. 71. And he told you how to put together the ingredients of this tobacco and pack it similarly to Lorillard Exhibit No. 16?

A. That was his business.

XQ. 72. Then you did not follow the same formula by which you had previously made the tobacco package in P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 17?

A. Neither in tobacco nor package.

XQ. 73. Did you circulate from this factory through the trade, advertising or posters, placards or the like for the purpose of advertising the tobacco package similarly to P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 16.

A. No advertising done that I know of from this factory.

XQ. 74. Did you see any such advertising?

A. Whatever I seen in stores.

XQ. 75. Can you describe it?

A. A girl holding a package, occasionally I see empty cartons in a window.

XQ. 76. Would you say that this tobacco P. L. Exhibit No. 16 was extensively advertised or not?

A. I do not think it needed advertising, the quality of the tobacco was sufficient.

XQ. 77. It became immediately popular did it?

A. Wherever the chewer got a hold of it.

XQ. 78. Coming back to your instructions the manufacturer of this tobacco P. L. Exhibit No. 16 in 1915, were any of these instructions given you in writing?

A. They were from Mr. Thomas Smith.

XQ. 79. I suppose he gave you a new formula in writing and that you subsequently had in addition thereto other correspondence?

A. I had no other correspondence, except I received the formula from Mr. Thos. Smith in writing.

XQ. 80. The bags you got sent here on order originating elsewhere?

A. Yes.

XQ. 81. Mr. Boykin, have you absolutely no idea whatever as to who got up the bag P. L. Exhibit No. 16?

A. I do not know.

XQ. 82. Did you ever hear any talk about that?

A. No.

XQ. 83. Did you ever hear anybody connected with your company make a guess as to why this particular design was selected?

A. I never heard anything.

By Mr. Cavanagh: While counsel for P. Lorillard Co. is glad to give counsel for Beech Nut Packing Co. every latitude in cross-examination, it is not seen that such questions as XQ. 83 are within the scope of a proper cross-examination of this witness. At the time of opening depositions in this case on or about May 19, 1920, Mr. Offield, a partner of Mr. Hinton, and counsel for the Beech Nut Packing Co. was in the P. Lorillard Co. general offices in New York City, when the stipulations covering advertising and the like of the Lorillard Beech Nut brand were entered into, and had he deemed it necessary he could have obtained first named all of the information now sought from this witness, as to the design of the bag, advertising and the like. P. Lorillard Co. has absolutely nothing to conceal in this respect, and if counsel for Beech Nut Packing Co. desires such information, counsel for the P. Lorillard Co. now informs him that upon return to New York he will be glad to obtain this information and furnish it to counsel of Beech Nut when available.

By Mr. Hinton: Mr. Offield is not present, it is therefore requested that such remarks as he may wish to make in this connection may be inserted here in the record. I personally was not in the New York conference nor have I seen or otherwise obtained knowledge of any stipulations such as referred to, immediately above.

XQ. 84. Do you keep here at this factory a museum or collection of all kinds of packages of Scrap Tobacco which have been on the market?

A. No we do not.

XQ. 85. Do you know where there is such a collection?

A. No, I do not, I do not think there is such a one.

By Mr. Hinton: In view of the witness' answers to XQ. 43, 44, 45, 46, 47 and 62, the witness' answer to Q. 10 of the direct examination is objected to as not the best evidence based on hearsay and as being a mere conclusion of the witness.

(Cross-examination closed.)

By Mr. Cavanagh: In reply to Mr. Hinton's statement counsel for Lorillard Co. would say that obviously the witness properly referred book record matters to the bookkeeper here, and such old records as are available will be produced at the witness Mr. Bowman, and the present witness' testimony from the manufacturing end at the factory appears to be competent.

RE-DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By MR. CAVANAGH:

RDQ. 87. Both P. Lorillard's Exhibit 17 and P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 16 are made up of Scrap Tobacco, are they not?

A. Yes.

RDQ. 88. Who has charge of the actual tobacco manufacturing of this factory?

A. I have.

(No cross-examination.)

(Deposition closed.)

HERBERT C. BOYKIN.

Middletown, Ohio, June 11, 1920.

Met pursuant to adjournment, parties present as before.

RALPH BOWMAN,

a witness called on behalf of P. Lorillard Co. being first duly sworn deposes and says in answer to questions asked him by Mr. Cavanagh as follows, formal notice of the production of this witness being waived.

Q. 1. State your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. Ralph Bowman, 36 years, No. 601 Tytus Ave., bookkeeper and cost clerk, assistant cashier of P. Lorillard Co., Middletown Branch, Middletown, Ohio.

Q. 2. In what business is P. Lorillard Co. engaged and what does it manufacture here?

A. Manufacturers of Scrap Tobacco, we manufacture Beech Nut, Honest Scrap, Polar Bear, Old Nut, Bag Pipe, Pan Handle, Scrap Iron and Natural Leaf at this factory here in Middletown.

Q. 3. Just what are your duties here at the factory?

A. My duties are to take care of all records.

Q. 4. How long have you been connected with this factory here at Middletown?

A. I have been connected with the factory here at Middletown for the past twelve years, I came to work here about 1908, and at that time the factory was known as the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co., since about 1911 it has been changed to the P. Lorillard Co., Middletown Branch.

Q. 5. How long to your knowledge has Beech Nut Tobacco been made and shipped from this factory?

A. Beech Nut has been manufactured and shipped from this factory since 1904 to the present time, with the exception of four years, 1911, 12, 13, 14.

Q. 6. Can you produce any books or records or other documentary evidence in connection with your last answer?

A. Yes, I produce books which were kept by our factory Superintendent, Mr. Willer, showing the pounds manufactured for the period from 1904 to 1910, inclusive. The book which I have marked with the letter "A" in red pencil is a stamp record book, which is a book in which a record is kept of the revenue stamps which are used upon the packages of the various brands of tobacco. For example, in connection with Beech Nut Tobacco I refer to page 88 where the entry Beech Nut 1960 LBS. 15 oz. appears and opposite which I have placed a red check mark. This entry appears under the date of March, 1904. On page 187 appear entries for Beech Nut, under August, 1906, this being one of the last pages of this book. Other entries appear throughout the book intermediate these pages, which will be seen from an examination thereof. The entries in this book "A" extend down to August, 1906. I also produce a stamp record book, which I have marked "B" in red pencil and which begins in September, 1906, and extends down to June, 1910. This is a continuation of book "A." On page 2 of this book "B" I have checked in red pencil an entry referring to "Beech Nut" which appears under the heading date of September, 1906, and on page 270 of this book "B" I have placed a red check opposite an entry relating to Beech Nut which appears under the heading date of April, 1910. Other entries relating to Beech Nut appear throughout this book "B" intermediate this page. I also produce six sheets which were kept in our order department representing the shipments by months and the totals for the year of our various brands. I have fastened all of these sheets together with a brass tag, and have marked the letter "C" thereon, in red pencil, as well as numbering the pages in red pencil. For example will be seen that Beech Nut is shown on page 2 beginning with 1904 to page 4 for 1910.

I also produce a small record book which I have marked "D" in red pencil, and which is a record of shipments. The entries in this small book "D" begin on the last page and run forward. It will be seen that the book begins with entries about 1901. So far as "Beech Nut" is concerned, on the sixth page from the back of the book, under the date of 1904, appear entries relating to this brand and on the page covering the dates for years 1909 and 1910, and through which I have run a brass tag, appears entries under the name Beech Nut.

Q. 7. In whose handwriting do the entries in these records appear, if you know? In answering this question I wish you would take up these records in the order in which you have produced the same, you may simply refer to these records by the letter by which you have designated them?

A. Book "A" was kept by our Superintendent Mr. Willer, book "B" was also kept by Mr. Willer, the handwriting with which I am familiar. Sheets marked "C" were kept by one of the clerks in our Order Department and I am not familiar with the handwriting. The records shown in book marked "D" were kept by Mr. E. A. Stahl, Mr. Weishaar and Mr. Hall, I am familiar with all these handwritings.

Q. 8. I hand you herewith a package which has been introduced as evidence in this case as P. Lorillard Exhibit 17, and will have to ask you if you can identify the same, and if so tell us what it is?

A. I identify this package of Beech Nut Scrap Tobacco as packed by us during the period from 1904 to 1910.

Q. 9. I hand you herewith package which is in this case as P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit 16, and ask you if you can identify the same and if so tell me what it is?

A. I identify this package of Beech Nut Tobacco as the package which we are now using for this brand, we have been using this style package since 1915 to the present time.

Q. 10. I hand you a package of sheets which I have fastened together for convenience and marked with the letter "E" in red pencil, and ask if you can tell me what they represent?

A. The package of sheets marked "E" represent copies of invoices to our various customers, referring to Beech Nut brands.

Q. 11. What became of the original of these invoices?

A. The original invoices were forwarded to the customers on date of shipment.

Q. 12. From the standpoint of prominence and volume of sales how does Beech Nut brand, at the present time compare with the other brands which you make and ship from this Middletown factory?

A. We produce more Beech Nut than all of the other brands manufactured here, and the demand is much greater than our production and it is very hard for us to keep up with our orders for this brand.

By Mr. Cavanagh: The books "A," "B" sales sheets "C" and small book "D" and invoice sheets "E" are now offered in evidence, and are marked P. Lorillard Co. Exhibits No. "A," "B," "C," "D," and "E," respectively.

(Direct examination closed.)

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Hinton:

XQ. 13. In examining the sheets "C" large which you have produced, I notice reference to Beech Nut tobacco, can you say of your own personal knowledge without reference to these sheets that Beech Nut tobacco packages corresponding to P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 17 was made at this factory prior to 1911?

A. Yes.

XQ. 14. You have a distinct recollection of this package Exhibit No. 17?

A. Yes.

XQ. 15. At that time a certain part of the factory was devoted to the manufacture of Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco products, was it not?

A. Yes.

XQ. 16. How long did a special separate part of the factory continue to be devoted to the manufacture of Luhrman & Wilbern products?

A. Until 1911.

XQ. 17. What happened then?

A. The name was changed then to the Middletown Branch, P. Lorillard Co.

XQ. 18. I notice in these sheets that you have produced and marked "C" with reference to Polar Bear, Old Nut, Bag Pipe and Scrap Iron, were these Luhrman & Wilbern products?

A. Yes.

XQ. 19. Is P. Lorillard Co. still manufacturing and selling the four brands just referred to?

A. Yes.

XQ. 20. I purchased last night a bag of Polar Bear Tobacco; you handed me this morning an identical empty bag, is this the bag in which P. Lorillard Co. sells Polar Bear Tobacco?

A. Yes.

XQ. 21. This same tobacco was sold prior to the purchase of Luhrman & Wilbern by P. Lorillard, by the former company, was it not?

A. Yes.

XQ. 22. I wish you would examine the empty bag you have just identified and state how it compares with the bag in which Polar Bear Tobacco was sold by Luhrman & Wilbern?

A. The empty bag used for packing Polar Bear Scrap Tobacco was used by Luhrman & Wilbern Tob. Co. printed the same with exception the words P. Lorillard Co., successor.

By Mr. Hinton: The bag referred to by the witness is produced, offered and introduced into evidence as Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 1.

XQ. 23. Can you and will you produce at this session a specimen of the Polar Bear bag used by Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co. prior to the acquisition of that company by P. Lorillard Co?

A. We have none of these bags on hand at this time.

By Mr. Hinton: Counsel for P. Lorillard Co. is requested to furnish counsel for Beech Nut Packing Co. with specimens of the bags in which Luhrman & Wilbern sold Polar Bear, Scrap Iron, Old Nut and Bag Pipe.

By Mr. Cavanagh: Counsel for Lorillard Co. will be very glad, indeed, to furnish counsel for Beech Nut Packing Co. with any and all of the above specimens, if the latter are obtainable. On his return to New York he will have a search made and if the specimens turn up we will gladly furnish to counsel.

XQ. 24. I hand you a bag and ask if this is the bag in which P. Lorillard Co. at the present marketing Scrap Iron Tobacco?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Hinton: The bag identified by witness is produced, introduced and offered in evidence as Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2.

XQ. 25. How does this bag compare with the bag in which Luhrman & Wilbern offered Scrap Iron Tobacco?

A. I cannot recall whether this bag is made up in the same manner as that used by Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co.

XQ. 26. I am not interested in the fine type concerning the factory No. and notice at the bottom of the bag to which you referred just prior to your answer to XQ. 25 as it appears on the record. Can you not state excluding this fine type whether or not that bag is the same except for the printing P. Lorillard Co. successors, to that bag in which Luhrman & Wilbern offered Scrap Iron Tobacco?

A. If I remember correctly the bag was printed in different colors than now used and did not show P. Lorillard Co. as successors.

XQ. 27. In what colors was the Luhrman & Wilbern Scrap Iron bag printed?

A. I do not remember just what colors these bags were printed in at that time.

XQ. 28. You apparently have a very clear recollection of exactly the kind of packages in which Beech Nut Tobacco was packaged by Luhrman & Wilbern, according to these sheets "C" and other records appears that Scrap Iron sold considerably in excess of Beech Nut. How do you account for the fact that your recollection of the old Scrap Iron label is so vague and that of Beech Nut so clear?

Mr. Cavanagh now hands the witness the large sheets "C" and he is instructed that he may examine these sheets in connection with XQ. 28 and ascertain if the statement of what those records show, as set forth by the counsel of the Beech Nut Co. is correct.

A. I recall the style of the Beech Nut bag as being the one used at that time, the only difference in the Scrap Iron bag is the colors used in printing.

XQ. 29. What were those colors?

A. I do not remember what the colors were.

XQ. 30. You have not available here any of those Old Scrap Iron bags used by Luhrman & Wilbern?

A. Not to my knowledge.

XQ. 31. Will you please investigate and see if you can find any counsel for P. Lorillard having expressed his willingness to have these produced?

A. Yes.

XQ. 32. Coming to a bag which bears the name Old Nut, is this the bag in which P. Lorillard is now selling Old Nut tobacco?

A. Yes.

(The bag identified by the witness is produced, introduced and offered as Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 3.)

XQ. 32a. You have just produced a bag marked Polar Bear, is this the bag in which Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co. sold this tobacco?

A. Yes.

(The bag identified by the witness is produced, introduced and offered in evidence as Beech Nut X Exhibit No. 1-A.)

XQ. 33. You have just handed me a bag marked Scrap Iron Scrap which is substantially larger than Beech Nut Exhibit No. 2. Will you please state what the bag referred to is?

A. This bag was used first in the manufacture of Scrap Iron Scrap tobacco by Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co., and was later changed to the different style in printing.

(The bag identified by the witness is produced, introduced and offered in evidence as Beech Nut X Exhibit No. 2-A.)

XQ. 34. According to your recollection did not Luhrman & Wilbern put out Scrap Iron tobacco in a package containing the name Luhrman & Wilbern prior to the time P. Lorillard put out the package X Exhibit No. 2?

A. There was a bag used with the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co. name thereon with the exception of P. Lorillard Co. successors, at that time it was printed stock owned by P. Lorillard Co.

XQ. 35. This last bag to which you have just referred was otherwise identical except possibly for the fine type referring to the Factory No. and so on, with Beech Nut X Exhibit No. 2, was it not?

A. Yes.

XQ. 36. Now what I want to know is was there not a bag substantially identical with X Exhibit No. 2 except that it did not contain the name P. Lorillard Co.

A. Yes.

XQ. 37. And this last bag which you have described in answer to XQ. 36 immediately preceded on the market Beech Nut X Exhibit No. 2. Did it not?

A. Yes.

XQ. 38. You have stated that Beech Nut X Exhibit No. 3 is a bag in which P. Lorillard puts up Old

Nut tobacco; I understand that you have been unable to locate a specimen of the bag in which Luhrman & Wilbern put up this brand of tobacco. Is this correct?

A. Yes.

XQ. 39. Will you please state how the bag in which Luhrman & Wilbern put out Old Nut tobacco compared with the bag X Exhibit No. 3?

A. To the best of my knowledge Luhrman & Wilbern used the same bag which we are now using.

XQ. 40. I hand you a bag marked Bag Pipe, and ask you to state whether or not this is the bag in which P. Lorillard is now selling Bag Pipe tobacco?

A. Yes it is.

XQ. 41. I understand that you have been unable to find a specimen of the bag in which Luhrman & Wilbern put out Bag Pipe tobacco, is this correct?

A. Yes.

XQ. 42. Will you please state how the bag in which Luhrman & Wilbern put out Bag Pipe Tobacco compared with the bag you have just identified and which is produced, introduced and offered in evidence as Beech Nut X Exhibit No. 4?

A. To the best of my knowledge this is the same bag used by the Luhrman & Wilbern Tob. Co.

XQ. 43. To sum this up therefore, we have five brands altogether in which P. Lorillard is claimed to have succeeded Luhrman & Wilbern as follows: Polar Bear, Scrap Iron, Old Nut, Bag Pipe and Beech Nut. With respect to Polar Bear, Old Nut, Bag Pipe, and Scrap Iron P. Lorillard used the same bag as immediately prior to the change in the business by Luhrman & Wilbern except that where the old bag bore the name Luhrman & Wilbern, the name P. Lorillard was added thereto as successor.

With respect to Beech Nut the old package P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 17 was dropped and the package P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 16, adopted, is that correct?

By Mr. Cavanagh: The question is objected to as indefinite in the use of the word "dropped" if counsel is referring to the general dress of the package then he is asked to state so.

A. Yes.

XQ. 45. I understand that Beech Nut, Polar Bear, Scrap Iron, Bag Pipe and Old Nut were all the Luhrman & Wilbern Scrap Tobaccos manufactured at this factory, is that correct?

A. Yes.

XQ. 46. What other brands of Scrap Tobacco were manufactured at this factory prior to the acquisition of Luhrman & Wilbern by P. Lorillard Co.?

A. Honest Scrap, Natural Leaf, Pan Handle.

XQ. 47. To whom did those brands belong prior to the time that P. Lorillard Co. acquired Luhrman & Wilbern?

A. I do not know.

XQ. 48. Were any of these three brands owned by P. Lorillard before the acquisition of Luhrman & Wilbern by P. Lorillard?

A. Not to my knowledge.

XQ. 49. They were owned then by some company other than Luhrman & Wilbern or P. Lorillard?

A. Yes.

XQ. 50. Was any change made in the Honest Scrap package at the time of the acquisition by P. Lorillard of this brand?

A. Not to my knowledge.

XQ. 51. Honest Scrap was always a big seller, was it not, since your connection with the business?

A. Yes.

XQ. 52. Have you not as definite a recollection of the Honest Scrap packages as you have exhibited with respect to Bag Pipe, Polar Bear, Scrap Iron and Old Nut?

A. Yes, but cannot recall all the printing as shown on the bags.

XQ. 53. You mean the fine type referring to the factory number and manufacturer's notice, if so let us disregard this entirely?

A. I do not refer just to the manufacturer's caution on these, but all of the printing on the bag.

XQ. 54. As a matter of fact, you are quite sure, are you not, that at the time P. Lorillard acquired Honest Scrap no substantial change was made in the packing?

A. Not to my knowledge.

XQ. 55. Is the same true of Pan Handle?

A. Yes.

XQ. 56. And Natural Leaf?

A. Yes.

XQ. 57. Mr. Boykin referred yesterday to a bookkeeper who was expected to testify today; are you the bookkeeper?

A. Yes.

XQ. 58. Do you know whether the bags for Bag Pipe, Polar Bear, Old Nut and Scrap Iron were ordered from this factory after P. Lorillard acquired these brands, or were they ordered from New York?

A. Our requisitions are forwarded to our Supply Dept. for execution in New York City.

XQ. 59. Did you have anything whatever to do with getting up the package P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 16?

A. No.

XQ. 60. Did you ever hear any statement made by your business associates as to why this particular package was selected?

A. No.

XQ. 61. We have discussed a total of eight brands of tobacco; how many brands altogether do you make at this factory?

A. Eight brands—Beech Nut, Honest Scrap, Polar Bear, Bag Pipe, Pan Handle, Scrap Iron, Old Nut and Natural Leaf.

XQ. 62. You have nothing to do with the actual manufacture of tobacco, have you?

A. No.

XQ. 63. Do you know whether the formulas of Bag Pipe, Polar Bear, Old Nut and Scrap Iron or any of these was changed when P. Lorillard acquired these brands?

A. Not to my knowledge.

By Mr. Cavanagh: Question objected to as incompetent, because the witness stated that he had nothing to do with the manufacture of these brands; it is immaterial and irrelevant because it does not relate to this issue, which is on the trademark "Beech Nut" in an opposition, and furthermore it is not proper cross-examination because it is without the scope of the direct examination.

By Mr. Hinton: In answer to Q. 5, Q. 8 and other questions of the direct examination the witness has testified his direct personal knowledge of the fact of manufacture, without reference to records, and furthermore from the witness' intimate associations with this business he unquestionably has knowledge of many details of the business, besides those over which he has direct personal supervision.

XQ. 64. As a matter of fact, if there had been any change in the formulas of Bag Pipe, Old Nut, Scrap Iron and Polar Bear, at the time P. Lorillard acquired those brands, you would through your general familiarity with this business have known about it, would you not?

A. No.

XQ. 65. Have you ever heard anything during your association with this business, which has made you believe that the formulas of the four brands just referred to were changed at the time of their acquisition by P. Lorillard?

A. No.

By Mr. Cavanagh: Same objection as to XQ. 63 and it is stipulated that this objection will stand as to all similar questions along this line.

XQ. 66. In answer to XQ. 58 you said that your requisitions are forwarded to the Supply Dept. in New York, how long has this practice been carried out?

A. Ever since I have been employed here.

XQ. 67. And when P. Lorillard acquired the eight brands you have named in answer to XQ. 61, were all these brands except Beech Nut you simply continued to requisition bags as you had before; is that correct?

A. Yes.

XQ. 68. And with respect to Beech Nut, all you know about it in this connection is that when instructions were received in 1915 to make and sell or ship this tobacco, the bags similar to P. Lorillard Exhibit

No. 16 were sent from New York or on order originating in New York with which you had nothing to do; is that correct?

A. This is a peculiar question. Our requisitions are forwarded to our Supply Dept. for execution regardless of the style material, as we order only by the name and brand, specifying what kind of material.

XQ. 69. What do you mean by material?

A. So many Beech Nut bags, cartons or containers.

XQ. 70. Do you happen to remember whether your first order or lot of bags corresponding to P. Lorillard Exhibit 16 (the present Beech Nut package) were received here on a requisition for Beech Nut bags sent by you to New York, or whether the first order or shipment of these bags came to you without requisition?

A. I do not remember.

(Counsel for P. Lorillard Co. states that during the noon recess he had the witness make a search for old bags to comply with the request made in the morning by counsel for Beech Nut Co.; that after search the witness produced the Scrap Iron bag, Beech Nut Exhibit No. 2-A, and he now produces two additional bags which counsel for P. Lorillard will hand to counsel for Beech Nut Packing Co. with the statement that before resuming his deposition, just after the recess the witness showed these two additional bags to P. Lorillard's counsel, who glancing at the same casually saw that they both had printed thereon the name P. Lorillard Co., and presuming that they were merely substantial duplicates of X-Exhibit No. 2, did not consider them to be any more than repetitions. However, in view of the subsequent cross-examination he has called the counsel of Beech Nut attention to these two bags and now hands them to him for such use as he may desire.)

By Mr. Hinton: The two bags just referred to are produced, introduced and offered in evidence as X-Exhibit No. 2-C, and Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2-D, Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2-C, bearing the name Luhrman & Wilbern Tob. Co., with a rubber stamp thereon reading "Stock owned by P. Lorillard Co."; X-Exhibit No. 2-D having the same legend printed thereon.

XQ. 71. Your attention being invited to Beech Nut X Exhibit No. 2 C, is it not a fact that this is the package in which Luhrman & Wilbern sold Scrap Iron tobacco, except that X-Exhibit No. 2-C bears a rubber stamp notice "Stock owned by P. Lorillard Co." prior to the acquisition by P. Lorillard of that stock—I mean immediately prior to that acquisition?

A. Yes, it is.

XQ. 72. Then to get this thing straight, Luhrman & Wilbern first sold Scrap Iron in a package like Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2-A; they next sold Scrap Iron in a package like Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2-B, without the rubber stamp; then Lorillard sold Scrap Iron in a package like Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2-C, Lorillard next sold Scrap Iron in a package like Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2-D, Lorillard next sold Scrap Iron in a package like Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2, which is the present style of package; is this correct?

A. Yes.

XQ. 73. At the beginning of your cross-examination XQ. 24 and following you testified that the package of Scrap Iron tobacco sold by Luhrman & Wilbern was, you believed, of different coloring from that of Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2, the present Scrap Iron package. You were asked to look for the old labels in order to refresh your recollection during the recess, and when we convened you produced Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2-A, which is not colored differently from Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2; at the end of your cross-examination you produced Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2-C and 2-D which have the same coloring as Beech Nut X-Exhibit No. 2. This prompts me to ask you if in the search you made during the recess you found any old bags used for Bag Pipe, Polar Bear or Old Nut, which you did not produce when we convened?

A. During my search I found Polar Bear bags which were used by Luhrman & Wilbern Tob. Co., but did not find any Bag Pipe or Old Nut bags. The Polar Bear bags were handed to Mr. Hinton.

RALPH BOWMAN.

By MR. HINTON: Counsel for P. Lorillard is requested to furnish counsel for Beech Nut the specimens of the bags used for Honest Scrap, Natural Leaf, and Pan Handle tobaccos prior to and after the acquisition of these brands by P. Lorillard.

By MR. CAVANAGH: While not acknowledging the right of counsel for Beech Nut Co. to make this request, as all this appears to be immaterial to the present issue, counsel for P. Lorillard Co. assures counsel for Beech Nut Co. that he will be glad to oblige him in this or any similar request if it is within his power to do so.

A. We did.

Q. 6. Can you produce any books or records in support of or in connection with your last answer, and by this question I have particular reference to any printing in connection with the Beech Nut brand of the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company?

A. I can. (The witness here produced a large Sales Journal).

Q. 7. What is this book?

A. This is a Sales Journal.

Q. 8. What dates or period does this Sales Journal cover?

A. Commencing June 15, 1896, and ending with October 30, 1897.

Q. 9. Is this a book of original entry?

A. It is.

Q. 10. Was it kept in the regular order of business?

A. Yes.

Q. 11. Does it form a part of the regular records of this company?

Q. 12. Will you turn to this record and read into your deposition any entries you may find therein referring to printing done for The Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company in connection with the Beech Nut brand?

10 M. Beech Nut Wrappers 2 oz 5.00 5.

Q. 13. Please state, if you can, what "H. W. Tob. Co." means?

A. Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company.

Q. 14. Where was that concern, The Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, located?

A. It was located in Louisville, Kentucky, on Floyd Street, between Breckinridge and Caldwell Streets.

Q. 15. Will you please look at the entries in the original book, which you have read into the record, and state in whose handwriting those entries appear?

A. The entry of April 7, 97, is in the handwriting of my sister, Miss Ethel Sheltman, who was our bookkeeper at that time. The entry of June 15, 97, looks like my handwriting. The entry of June 28, 97, looks like mine.

The entry of July 9th, 97, is my sister, Ethel's, writing.

The entry of August 9, 97, I think is my handwriting.

Q. 16. To the best of your knowledge were those goods or this printing delivered to the Harry Weissing Tobacco Company?

A. Yes.

CROSS-EXAMINED BY MR. SEBASTIAN HINTON FOR THE BEECH NUT PACKING COMPANY.

XQ. 17. According to your records the sale of these printed wrappers stopped in 1897; did it? I mean the Beech Nut wrappers such as appear in the entries above read into the record?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 18. What does "wrapper" mean?

A. I don't know exactly how they used it, but it was to enclose tobacco. It means just what the word expresses. If you were to go down to one of these tobacco stores you would find a package of tobacco put up in a wrapper and when the wrappers were originally printed they were flat sheets and in some way they fold them up into a package and paste the ends together and there is a tight package of tobacco. I don't know how they do it, but I know they do it.

XQ. 19. You have no personal recollection of and had no personal connection with the actual sale of Beech Nut Tobacco, did you?

A. No, sir; none at all.

(No redirect examination.)

WADE SHELTMAN.

(The further taking of these depositions was then adjourned by consent to the office of The Al Gans Tobacco Co., Sixth Street, between Main and Market Streets, Louisville, Ky.)

ALBERT P. GANS,

a witness called on behalf of The P. Lorillard Company, being first duly sworn, in answer to questions propounded to him by Mr. R. B. Cavanagh, deposes as follows:

Q. 1. Please state your name, age, residence and occupation.

A. My name is Albert P. Gans; my age is forty-eight; my residence is 119 West Oak Street, Louisville, Kentucky; my occupation, President of the Al Gans Cigar and Tobacco Company.

Q. 2. How long have you been in the tobacco business?

A. Steadily for thirty-three years.

Q. 3. With what concern were you connected?

A. The C. C. Bickel Company up until March 31, 1920, and from that time to the present, here.

Q. 4. For how long a time were you with the C. C. Bickel Company?

A. For thirty-three years.

Q. 5. In what line of business was the C. C. Bickel Company?

A. They were manufacturers of cigars and jobbers of tobacco.

Q. 6. Did you know of the concern, The Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company of Louisville?

A. I did. We bought goods from them.

Q. 7. Can you name some of the brands of goods you bought from the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company?

A. Yes. "Hold Fast," "Burr Oak," "Weissinger Special," lots of odd brands and various smoking tobaccos. Those were the standard brands and sometimes there were brands that we bought only very little of.

Q. 8. Can you recall any other brand that you bought from them?

A. Yes; there was one called Curly Cut tobacco or thread cut called Burr Oak—no, Burr Oak was a plug —that was Beech Nut.

Q. 9. Will you please state in your own way just what you recall of this brand and what you recall of the circumstances of purchasing Beech Nut tobacco from Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company?

A. There was only one lot of Beech Nut tobacco that I remember we ever bought and that was away back there. That was about 1897, I think. It was merely a lot they wanted to introduce around town. I think they must have just started it. They sold it around town and I purchased one gross.

Q. 10. Who sold it around town?

A. Their man, David Bell.

Q. 11. What was David Bell's occupation?

A. He was a salesman for the Weissinger Tobacco Company.

Q. 12. Do you know what became of David Bell?

A. Dead. He died several years ago.

Q. 13. How do you fix this date of purchase as about 1897?

A. From personalities, you might say. I was married in 1900 and I married a young lady who was with the Weissinger Tobacco Company and this was about three years prior to that.

Q. 14. Can you describe how this thread cut tobacco was packaged?

A. My recollection is that it was a rolled package; it was a long thin cut tobacco known then as thread cut. It was not in a bag, but it was rolled with a string around it and the stamp was pasted over the string. There is some tobacco on the market now and, in fact, was then that is similar, called Five Bros.

Q. 15. I show you a package marked "Five Bros. Pipe Smoking Tobacco, John Finzer and Bros., Louisville, Ky." Is that the Five Bros. package to which you refer as being similar to Beech Nut?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 16. I hand you herewith a piece of paper which I have marked for identification "P. Lorillard Company, Exhibit F." Do you recognize this sheet and if you do, let us know what you think about it?

A. I would say that is about the style of sheet used in rolling this tobacco. It is not a bag. They just use paper and they roll it up in a tight package as you can see here. It is very evident that this was the kind of paper they used. My recollection is that this is about the style of paper that was on that. I do not know what was the marking, but my recollection is it had a squirrel over the top. That may have been torn off—it does not show here.

Q. 17. How was that package folded—can you show me with the piece you have in your hand?

A. It would fold over so that the printing would show on the various sides. The ends turned in this way and there was a string placed around it with a stamp covering the string and the ends so as to make it a sealed package.

Q. 18. What became of this Beech Nut special cut tobacco that you purchased from the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company for Bickel?

A. It was sold here in town.

Q. 19. You sold it?

A. Yes, sir. There was only one little lot that we bought and that was sold here in the city. There was very little of this thread cut tobacco sold here in the city. The majority of it was sold around mining camps. It did not prove successful in the general market of Louisville.

Q. 20. Why was that?

A. It was the style of the tobacco—the thread cut. It never has been popular and is not today—there is very little of it sold locally.

Q. 21. Where is it sold?

A. Principally around the mining sections—that is where we sell it—around the Hazard and the Lynch mines. The city trade buys very little of it.

Q. 22. What is such thread cut tobacco used for?

A. Pipe smoking.

Q. 23. Do they ever chew it?

A. I doubt it. It is put up for and intended for pipe smoking.

Q. 24. Did you ever hear why Weissinger put out this Beech Nut thread cut tobacco?

A. It was said at that time it was in competition with Five Bros.

MR. HINTON: We object to this as hearsay.

CROSS-EXAMINED BY MR. SEBASTIAN HINTON FOR THE BEECH NUT PACKING COMPANY.

XQ. 25. Do you know what happened to that old Beech Nut brand that you have been describing?

A. No, sir; I do not.

XQ. 26. Did it continue on the market?

A. I don't know.

XQ. 27. You were in the tobacco business for many years after 1896 in Louisville, were you not?

A. Yes, sir; up until the present time continuously.

XQ. 28. Did you continue to sell this old Beech Nut tobacco?

A. Of that style—no.

XQ. 29. Did you continue to sell any other style of Beech Nut tobacco?

A. Not until the—I believe it was—the Lorillard came out after that with a Beech Nut Scrap of an entirely different style.

XQ. 30. Who made this Beech Nut Scrap?

A. The one that I can recollect now is Lorillard, but there was some one prior to that, one of their factories; I don't know under what name, but Lorillard is one that I recollect of making Beech Nut Scrap.

XQ. 31. The only Beech Nut Scrap you remember is the Lorillard Beech Nut Scrap?

A. As scrap tobacco. The other was a different style. It was what was known as thread cut.

XQ. 32. How is that Lorillard Beech Nut Scrap packaged?

A. In a regular bag.

XQ. 33. Would you say that that bag was in any way similar to this Lorillard Exhibit F about which you have testified?

A. Similar to that? No.

XQ. 34. Was there to your knowledge any connection between the Lorillard Beech Nut Scrap and the Harry Weissinger brand?

A. Nothing more than that the Weissinger Company was taken over by the American Tobacco Company which controlled the Lorillard Company.

XQ. 35. How long has this Beech Nut tobacco been off the market in this territory?

A. I did not know that it was off the market. It did not sell in the local trade.

XQ. 36. I am speaking now about your personal recollection. You have testified that this Beech Nut tobacco, Exhibit F, was sold in Louisville for your store and that subsequently there appeared a Lorillard Beech Nut Scrap.

A. Not at that time; no.

XQ. 37. How long was that interval between those two sales about which you testified?

A. I would say several years elapsed between those times.

XQ. 38. Do you know of any other brand which was previously manufactured by any other manufacturer which was taken over by Lorillard subsequently?

A. Other brands?

XQ. 39. Were there other brands previously manufactured by other manufacturers taken over by Lorillard?

A. Do you mean any specific brand; a particular style of tobacco?

XQ. 40. Yes; any name of tobacco.

A. That was taken over by Lorillard?

XQ. 41. Yes.

A. I don't know whether it was taken over by Lorillard. They were all taken over by the American Tobacco Company. They took in all the brands of Finzer Bros. and of the National Tobacco Works and of Weissinger and also the old Monarch Tobacco Company. They took over all of them. Some of them may have been continued and some of them may have been discontinued. I don't know about that.

XQ. 42. Have you a definite recollection of the packages in which various brands with which you are familiar were offered to the public? In other words, can you remember what kind of packages these old brands were offered to the public in?

A. What brand?

XQ. 43. Polar Bear.

A. Polar Bear was in a package like it is today, but possibly more weight to it.

XQ. 44. The description of the package was the same?

A. Yes; that is my recollection.

XQ. 45. How about Scrap Iron?

A. I don't know anything about that.

XQ. 46. Old Nut?

A. It does not sell and never has.

XQ. 47. How about Big Pipe?

A. That is not sold.

XQ. 48. How about Honest Scrap?

A. That is about the same style of package—a red package—red bag.

XQ. 49. In other words, the bag was not changed in its printing or description?

A. Honest Scrap has only been on this market a few years.

XQ. 50. How long?

A. Oh, I would say about five or six years.

XQ. 51. Are you familiar with Pan Handle?

A. No, sir.

XQ. 52. Natural Leaf?

A. No, sir.

XQ. 53. The Murad Cigarettes were taken over by Lorillard?

A. No, sir; I think that was a creation of Lorillards.

MR. CAVANAGH: This is objected to as not being proper cross-examination, it being beyond the scope of anything testified to on the direct examination and it is stipulated that this objection may stand to all similar questions.

MR. HINTON: It is certainly proper for counsel to test the recollection of a witness who has been called in direct to testify about a package of which there was a very small sale of tobacco in 1896 and 1897.

MR. CAVANAGH: Counsel is certainly entitled to cross-examine the witness to test his recollection on anything relating to anything to which he has testified on direct but not upon any matter which the direct examination has not shown him to be familiar with.

XQ. 54. How about Egyptian Deities?

A. I think that was also one of their original brands.

XQ. 55. Will you, for the purpose of refreshing your recollection, be kind enough to examine those posters which are immediately behind you and look at the pictures of Murad and Egyptian Deities which are on those posters. Look at them and see if they refresh your recollection?

A. What do you want to know about them?

XQ. 56. Did you see on those posters which you have examined the name of S. Anargyros?

A. Yes, which was a part of Lorillard.

XQ. 57. Underneath that "Capital stock owned by Lorillard."

A. Yes. S. Anargyros was one of the branches of Lorillard at the time and is still run that way. They are billed under the Anargyros but the bills are paid to Lorillard. They have always kept them that way.

XQ. 58. You mean there never was any S. Anargyros?

A. Oh, yes.

XQ. 59. Independent of Lorillard?

A. Originally a number of years ago. "Deities" was one of their brands, but I think "Murad" was created afterwards. "Deities" was one of the old Anargyros brands.

XQ. 60. If "Deities" was one of the old Anargyros brands and if it was subsequently taken over by Lorillard and when it was taken over the same style of package was used by Lorillard as had been used by Anargyros with the exception of the words "Capital stock owned by Lorillard" could the difference be distinguished?

A. That would be impossible except for some one who manufactured it or handled it and was distinctly familiar with it. I am taking it in a general way as it comes to me. Some incident may bring our attention to a particular thing and impress it on our memory when generally it may look alike and we might not take in the difference.

XQ. 61. But so far as you know it was the same package?

A. There might be a little difference in the color but generally——

XQ. 62. But generally it was the same package?

A. Yes.

XQ. 63. I show you two bags "Beech Nut Cross Exhibit No. 1 and Beech Nut Cross Exhibit No. 1a" used for Polar Bear tobacco and I call your attention to the fact that these bags are identical except that Cross Exhibit No. 1 contains at the bottom of the panel "P. Lorillard Company, Successor." That is true, is it not?

A. That is one of Luhrman & Wilbern's old brands. Now, what about this?

XQ. 64. Why do you suppose that same bag was used by the Lorillard Company when the brand was taken over from Luhrman & Wilbern?

MR. CAVANAGH: Objected to as calling for an opinion on the part of the witness who is not connected with Lorillard & Company and is not presumed to be within the scope of his knowledge.

MR. HINTON: The witness is familiar with the tobacco business.

A. There may have been various reasons for that. So far as the differences in the packages, there may be a little difference. A firm putting up scrap will sometimes get out some bags that are years back. While the general form is the same if you put the bags together you will find a difference in every one.

XQ. 65. Why do you preserve the same general form?

A. Why?

XQ. 66. Yes?

A. When you establish a thing you want to keep it before the public.

MR. CAVANAGH: That is objected to for the same reason as heretofore.

MR. HINTON: I will stipulate that that same objection will be made to all similar questions.

XQ. 67. Would you say offhand that that is the reason that these two polar bear bags are somewhat similar for the reasons you have just given—for advertising purposes?

A. I would not say because I don't know what their reasons were.

XQ. 68. But your reason, so far as you are concerned, for keeping to the same style package is that you want the customers who like the brand in question to be able to get continuously the same general style of package?

A. That is so in many instances. In other instances where there is a certain thing that does not take, we change the style of package entirely but may still use the same name. That often happens. We have done that on cigars.

XQ. 69. But in general if you want to continue the reputation and good will of any brand, you will preserve the old style of package—generally speaking?

A. Generally speaking.

XQ. 70. Can you call to mind as the result of the study you have given the subject this last few minutes any other brands taken over by P. Lorillard Company from other manufacturers in addition to those we have mentioned?

A. I could not as to the P. Lorillard Company because it was all taken over by the American Tobacco Company and afterwards the American divided up the brands and some brand of some one manufacturer might be divided among three companies.

XQ. 71. About what time, according to your recollection, was the change made from Beech Nut Thread tobacco to Beech Nut Scrap—have you any recollection as to that?

A. I don't know anything about that.

XQ. 71. In your experience as a retail salesman, have you sold other products than tobacco—products of various kinds?

A. I would not be a tobacco salesman if I had not sold any.

XQ. 72. I mean tobacco products generally—pipes and things?

A. I don't get your question.

XQ. 73. Have you sold groceries?

A. No, sir.

XQ. 74. You have never sold anything but what would come under the head of a tobacco salesman?

A. I have not been a salesman generally. I have been more of a buyer.

XQ. 75. You did not have very much to do with selling over the counter?

A. No, sir; I was a buyer mostly.

XQ. 76. You are familiar, of course, with the present Beech Nut Scrap tobacco put out by the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 77. Can you tell me to what extent this tobacco has been advertised in this territory?

A. Very extensively.

XQ. 78. In what form?

A. In the way of signs and window displays. They had men here working. They had quite a crew here several times placing it in several forms in the different stores. It has become one of the biggest sellers in scrap tobacco here.

XQ. 79. Has there been any particular periodical advertising in the newspapers that you are familiar with?

A. I don't remember of seeing anything in the newspapers. It was on signs and window displays and posters and things of that sort.

MR. CAVANAGH: Counsel for P. Lorillard Company now introduces in evidence a package of Five Bros. tobacco produced during the examination of this witness and the Notary is asked to mark same Exhibit G.

(No re-examination.)

MR. HINTON: One more question:

XQ. 80. I notice that Exhibit G has on it "John Finzer & Brothers" and underneath "The American Tobacco Company, Successor." Can you state from your recollection whether the preceding Five Bros. Tobacco was the same general character of package but without the "The American Tobacco Company, Successor" underneath?

A. In general appearance, yes. The carton was marked different from what it is today because the original Five Bros. showed the portraits of the five Fizer Brothers and now they have five Horses Heads.

The general appearance was about the same though I think the original package was a little tighter rolled and somewhat round whereas this is more flat.

XQ. 81. I am talking mainly about the package.

A. The printed matter?

XQ. 82. No, I am talking about the package that immediately preceded this one?

A. I don't know about "immediately preceding" because the last few years there has been so much change in tobacco that I hardly think God Almighty knows what all has been.

(No re-examination.)

(Deposition closed.)

Q. 8. What position did Mr. Frank E. Phillips occupy?

A. He was General Superintendent.

Q. 9. How long did you retain the position of Assistant Superintendent with the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company?

A. Until it was transferred to the Continental Tobacco Company, 1903.

Q. 10. Do you know what has become of Mr. Frank E. Phillips?

A. He has been dead about six years I think; no it has not been that long, yes, it has been longer, it has been about eight years.

Q. 11. While you were Assistant Superintendent of the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company were you familiar with the tobacco brands manufactured and marketed by them, and if so can you enumerate them?

A. In fact I had full charge of the factory when I was appointed Assistant Superintendent. I had to take charge of the whole thing on account of the bad health of Mr. Frank E. Phillips; therefore I had charge of everything in the factory. We manufactured Old Kentucky, Hold Fast, Prune Nuggett and Burr Oak. These are all the plug tobaccos. Now smoking tobaccos—Three States, Our Flag, First Cabin, Beechnut Thread Cut and Scrap, and generally we had, no we did not have any granulated.

Q. 12. Were you with Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company when the Beechnut brand of tobacco was adopted by them and if so will you state the circumstances as you recall them?

A. I was. Along in the winter, I don't remember now, 1896 or the early part of 1897, Arthur Hegan of Pittsburgh had written to the firm, I mean Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, at Louisville, to get out a brand to compete with the Finnzer Bros., brand called Five Brothers, so I proceeded to get out a brand which at the time was made out of what is known as Green River leaf and called Beechnut.

Q. 13. Who got up the formula for this Beechnut?

A. Frank Phillips and myself, virtually I got it up.

Q. 14. Can you produce any record of, or documentary evidence showing this Beechnut formula as you got it up in the year 1897?

A. Yes, sir, I can and do. (Witness produces a book bearing on the outside the words "Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, James F. Summers.")

Q. 15. What is that book?

A. It is a book I kept my formulas in when I was working for the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company.

Q. 16. Will you show us the Beechnut formula in this book?

A. Yes, sir, there it is.

(Witness refers to a page in the book in which a metal tag has been inserted.)

Q. 17. When did you write that formula in that book?

A. I don't know, along about the time I got the brand up, I generally put them down after we decided to use them, I don't know exactly when it was I put it down, maybe two months after we decided to use it.

Q. 18. Did you make and put upon the market any of this Beechnut Tobacco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 19. When did you first put it upon the market?

A. In the winter of 1896 or early part of 1897, I am not positive which.

Q. 20. I hand you a slip of paper which has been marked for identification in this case as P. Lorillard Company Exhibit "F," and ask you if you can identify it and if so, tell us what it is?

A. That is a piece of the original package of the first Beechnut made.

Q. 21. What kind of tobacco was it?

A. Thread cut, it is a good deal like the FIVE BROTHERS BRAND put out by Finzer Bros., of Louisville, Ky.

Q. 22. Is this a type of Finzer Bros. tobacco to which you refer?

(Shows package to witness.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 23. I now show you P. Lorillard Company Exhibit "G." and ask you if that is the Five Bros. package to which you have referred?

A. Yes, sir; this is not the weight, it was about two ounces, and this is 1 7/8, they made about two ounce packages.

By MR. CAVANAGH: The piece of paper offered in evidence as Exhibit "F." is a brown strip of paper with the words "Beechnut" thereon and is now offered in evidence and marked P. Lorillard Exhibit "F."

Q. 24. Do you know where this exhibit "F." came from?

A. Well, yes; we used that package in the latter part of 1896 or 1897, then after we changed the brand to scrap, we used that paper to mark down things on to keep our memory fresh.

Q. 25. Has this paper been in your possession?

A. It has been in my possession ever since 1903, February 16th.

Q. 26. About what year did the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company change over the Beechnut brand from thread cut to scrap tobacco?

A. Along about 1897. They did not make that thread cut long; they never made much of it at all. I guess they made it about three or four months. I can tell you one reason why they did not make it long because Finzer, Five Bros., was a union brand and Beechnut thread cut was not, and they could not sell it, and that is the reason they changed it to scrap tobacco. They could not sell it among the mining districts.

Q. 27. How do you fix the latter part of 1896 or the early part of 1897 as the date when the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company began to put out Beechnut brand of tobacco?

A. The only way is anything I know I have got in my mind, and I can keep it.

Q. 28. What I am asking you is there any circumstance that would enable you to fix 1896 or 1897 as the date when the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company first put out the Beechnut brand?

A. Well, it was along about the time that Finzer Brothers sold out to the Continental Tobacco Company. I think they sold out about the middle of 1898.

Q. 29. How long before Finzer Brothers sold out to the Continental Tobacco Company did Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company put out Beechnut brand of tobacco?

A. A little over a year.

Q. 30. Did Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company to your personal knowledge sell Beechnut Thread Cut tobacco?

A. They did; yes, sir.

Q. 31. Was it wrapped in wrappers like this? (Shows witness Exhibit "F.")

A. It was.

Q. 32. I hand you herewith a package which is in this case as P. Lorillard Company Exhibit (14), and ask you if you can identify such a package and tell us what you know about it?

A. This is a Beechnut package that we used to put up the original scrap in.

Q. 33. Who?

A. Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company.

Q. 34. When?

A. I suppose we put that out in 1897; I know we did.

Q. 35. For what period ot time did you put that out?

A. They put it out until they sold out to the Continental Tobacco Company, along in 1903. Everything pertaining to Beechnut was shipped away from Louisville, and if I am not mistaken it was shipped to Middletown, Ohio. Some things were shipped to different parts of the country, but I think everything pertaining to Beechnut was shipped to Middletown, Ohio. I am positive about that.

Q. 36. Can you state whether the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Co. sold tobacco like this? (Attorney shows package of tobacco, Lorillard Exhibit 14, to witness).

A. Yes, sir; they did.

Q. 37. Where did they sell such tobacco?

A. A good deal in Louisville; in fact, over a good part of the United States; some of it in Pennsylvania; they chewed and smoked it both in Pennsylvania.

By Mr. Cavanagh: The formula book, produced by the witness is now offered in evidence, and the Notary is requested to mark the same for P. Lorillard Company Exhibit "H."

Q. 38. I hand you herewith a slip of paper upon the back of which is stamped the date, January 12th-1903, and I merely mention this to identify the paper, and ask you if you can tell me whose handwriting appears on that slip in pencil, and what it means?

A. The handwriting is that of Harry Weissinger, and was handed to me to instruct me how to pack Beechnut that was left on hand at that time, January 12th-1903.

By Mr. Cavanagh: This slip of paper is offered in evidence and the Notary is requested to mark same for identification P. Lorillard Company, Exhibit "I."

Q. 39. I hand you herewith two letters written on the letter paper heads of Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, one dated February 6th-1903, and the other December 11th-1903, and ask you if you can tell me what these are?

A. These are copies of letters sent me from the Continental Tobacco Company, New York, notifying the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company what disposition to make of things that were there in the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company at Louisville, Kentucky. One, the other is from Mr. R. K. Smith notifying us what to do with different things. R. K. Smith had charge of the leaf department of the Continental Tobacco Company, Louisville, Kentucky. They were copies handed to me because I had charge of attending to all such work.

By Mr. Cavanagh: The two letters (copies) are pinned together to form one exhibit, and are offered in evidence and the Notary is requested to mark the same P. Lorillard Company Exhibit "J."

Q. 40. I hand you herewith a slip of paper having typewritten thereon, the heading "Harry Weissinger

Tobacco Company Marked Boxes, and ask you to tell us, if you know, what this is, and what you know about it, giving dates.

A. This is a record of all boxes used in what was known as the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company in the smoking department. This is a list of the size of the boxes given to me by Mr. Jarboe of the C. C. Mengel Box Company, Louisville, Kentucky. It might have been given to me in 1893, of course, they would add to it as we would have different size boxes made.

Q. 41. Are there any additions on that there?

A. Yes, sir; a good many.

Q. 42. How are the additions noted?

A. Beechnut in three different shapes and size boxes.

Q. 43. Why do the additions appear in pencil and the other in typewriting?

A. The reason this was done was in case boxes would come to the factory and upon examination they were found not to be up to the standard, I would have redress against the Box Company, and from then on as I would put in orders for different size boxes I would enter it with a led pencil, or the party that ordered them.

By Mr. Cavanagh: The marked "Box" list produced by witness, I now offer in evidence and the Notary is requested to make the same P. Lorillard Company Exhibit "K."

Q. 44. Did you personally, while with the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, supervise the preparation of Beechnut tobacco?

A. I did, for several years, from the time it was gotten up until it was disposed of to the Continental Tobacco Company, from 1897 to 1903.

Q. 45. Can you state of your own personal knowledge whether or not this Beechnut tobacco was continuously sold during this period that you have just stated?

A. It was.

Q. 46. How do you know?

A. I manufactured it; I put it out; I was with it day in and day out, years in and years out, and I had supervision of the manufacture of it.

Q. 47. Can you state whether or not you know it was sold from the factory?

A. Yes, sir; I have seen it go out in loads; I have seen it on the market in Louisville, and I have seen it on the market in Madison, Indiana, because I bought a package there myself.

Q. 48. About when was that?

A. I could not tell you that; it was in the summer time; I was there on a boat excursion.

Q. 49. How many years ago?

A. Around twenty-four or twenty-five years ago. They used to have a customer there that handled a good deal of that; I. Nicklows was the name of the man that handled it there.

Q. 50. I hand you herewith a book and ask you if you can identify it and if so, tell us what it is?

A. Yes, sir; it is Connorton's Tobacco Brand Directory of the United States, 1903. The manufacturers of tobacco whenever they would adopt a name for a brand of tobacco they would have it registered in said directory.

Q. 51. Do you recall how often this book was issued?

A. One every year.

Q. 52. About what time of the year?

A. They would generally get it out about the middle of January, if I am not mistaken; no, they usually got it out about the first of January.

Q. 54. This was the last one that was sent to the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company?

A. Yes, sir, I guess it was; it was the last one I saw.

Q. 55. Mr. Summers, will you look in that book and tell us whether or not you can find Beechnut Tobacco Brand registered therein?

A. Yes, sir; on page 328, of Connorton's Tobacco Directory, 1903, you will find registered Beechnut (Scrap), Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

Q. 56. Did you ever know a man by the name of Dave Bell?

A. Yes, sir; he was City Salesman for the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company in Louisville, and also traveled in other parts of Kentucky.

Q. 57. Now, Mr. Summers, you have produced here and offered in evidence certain documentary matters, such as P. Lorillard Company, Exhibit F, G, H, I, J and K, and you have also referred to the old Connorton's Tobacco Brand Directory, will you just tell us in your own words how long you have had these documents in your possession and how you happened to come to have them in your possession for the length of time that you have had them?

A. Well, along in the fall of 1902, in December, we began to dispose of everything that was sold to the Continental Tobacco Company by the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company. We had their letters mailed to the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company notifying them what disposition to make of things at the Weis-singer factory. There was a copy given to me, some bearing the name of Frank E. Phillips and some Jas. F. Summers. After disposing of said things enumerated I filed all of these copies and kept them. Some time I wanted to see them or something might come up about the disposition of said things, and I would have them in evidence for my personal protection. After the deal was closed out, these papers being filed by me and in the office I took the whole bunch and put them in my trunk, and when I moved to Maysville in 1904, I brought the papers along with me. I have a lot more of them which are still up home with other things. I had a lot of papers damaged during the flood of 1913, here in Maysville, Kentucky, and I threw them away. I never thought I would have any use for them as I had them for about ten years.

Q. 58. Now to your personal knowledge the Harry Weissinger Tobacco was making and selling Beechnut Tobacco along in the last part of the year 1896 or the spring of 1897?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 59. How long did the Harry Weissenger Tobacco Company continue to so make and sell this Beechnut tobacco?

A. Until it was disposed of to the Continental Tobacco Company.

Q. 60. Until what was disposed of to the Continental Tobacco Company?

A. Until the Harry Weissenger Tobacco Company was disposed of and sold to the Continental Tobacco Company.

(Mr. Cavanagh announced that the direct examination of the witness was closed.)

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

By SEBASTIAN HINTON:

XQ. 1. What happened to the Old Kentucky Brand, Mr. Summers?

A. I think that was sent to 18th and Broadway, Continental Tobacco Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

XQ. 2. What happened to the Three States tobacco brand?

A. That was sent to 18th and Broadway, the Continental Tobacco Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

XQ. 3. How long did they continue on the market, do you know?

A. I could not tell you, I was not with them.

XQ. 4. What happened to the Hold Fast Brand?

A. That went to 18th and Broadway, Continental Tobacco Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

XQ. 5. What happened to Prune Nugget Brand?

A. They sent that to 18th and Broadway, Continental Tobacco Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

XQ. 6. When did you cease your connection with the tobacco business?

A. Along about the 31st day of July, 1904.

XQ. 7. That was after the transfer to the Continental Tobacco Company of the Beechnut brand?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 8. That was in Louisville, Kentucky?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 9. What sort of reputation did the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company have amongst its trade?

A. It had the reputation of putting out as good tobacco as was in the United States.

XQ. 10. The name Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company on a package of tobacco was an indication of good quality?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 11. I show you a Beechnut package of tobacco which I believe is in evidence as P. Lorillard Company Exhibit No. 17, which bears the name Harry Weissinger Tobacco Campany, and underneath that Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Co., successors, that pack is the same with the exception of that addition, as your old Beechnut, is it not?

A. Yes, sir, with that exception.

XQ. 12. From your knowledge of the tobacco industry why was it that this same sort of tobacco was preserved by them?

A. Because of the trade they had on the market.

XQ. 13. Now, Mr. Summers, you have testified about this directory as issued in 1903, and which has not been introduced into evidence. You testified here that the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company registered Beechnut Brand in this book?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 14. The book shows that fact?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 15. Aside from the book have you any definite recollection of having received a certificate of registration for Beechnut brand?

A. Being connected with the factory and not with the office force such things as these were kept locked up in the safe in the office.

XQ. 15. On page 328 of this directory there appears this entry, Beechnut Brand (Scrap) Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, Louisville, Kentucky. Does this mean that Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company was the manufacturer?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 16. How old is this directory?

A. Published in 1903.

XQ. 17. Is this the last one you have seen?

A. Yes, sir, the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company had gone out of business and this is the last one they received.

XQ. 18. I notice underneath Beechnut Scrap are three brands upon page 328 located by a star, and this star appears frequently in other places on this and other pages throughout the book, and I notice also in the introduction on page five of the book the following notice: "Our records are now the most complete in the United States, and we can give very valuable information in relation to Brands. We have in our possession the name (unpublished) of about (15000) fifteen thousand brands of tobacco that have become obsolete by virtue of abandonment, disuse, or firms retiring from business. When application is made for registration, be sure and specify as to class of tobacco on which brand is to be used. A star (*) is prefixed to all brands registered with us, which signifies incontestible ownership; and if any such brand are infringed upon, we notify the rightful owner immediately upon our receiving the information." Now as I read that paragraph it seems to mean to me that if the brand is properly or formerly registered with Connorton's directory which is prefixed in the book preceded by a star, indicates that it has been so registered, is that what it means to you?

A. No, sir, it is not. There were two fees for registration, one fee was merely for registering the brand, then an additional fee for guaranteeing that no one else was using said name, then this was preceded by a star which guaranteed it to be incontestible. To the best of my knowledge the fee for merely registering the brand was $2.00 and the fee for guaranteeing there was no other brand by that name being used was $10.00. How I know this after taking charge of The Green River Tobacco Company at Maysville, Kentucky, I got up two or three brands and had them registered and that was the fees charged as I remember.

XQ. 19. They charged you one fee for registering and one fee for guaranteeing there was no other person using that brand?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 20. They say here where we search the records and no registration results we charge fifty cents each, what does that mean?

A. The way I take that is this, you see for instance you write them asking if there is a brand under a name you have selected, and they search the records and write you in regard to it and charge you fifty cents for looking through the book for the name.

Mr. Hinton asks that page five be copied in this deposition, and is as follows:

"Since January 1st, 1895, we have had a bureau of registration and information in connection with our directory. To such as so desire we issue certificates of registration charging therefor the nominal price of $1.00 each, payable upon application. When we search our records and no registration results, we charge fifty cents each. It would be well for manufacturers and jobbers before adopting any new brand, to consult us, asking us if the brand is in existence.

"Our records are now the most complete in the United States, and we can give very valuable information in relation to Brands. We have in our possession the names (unpublished) of about Fifteen Thousand (15,000) brands of tobacco that have become obsolete, by virtue of abandonment, disuse, or firms retiring from business. When application is made for registration, be sure and specify as to class, of tobacco on which brand is to be used. A star (*) is prefixed to all brands registered with us, which signifies incontestible ownership; and if any such brand are infringed upon, we notify the rightful owner immediately upon our receiving the information."

That reads as if they issue a certificate of registration for $1.00, and if they search their records and find they could not register they charged fifty cents and down farther they state that a star is prefixed to the brand registered by them, I gather from that if they find that any person had the exclusive right in their opinion to use the name they would issue a certificate of registration for $1.00 and put a star in front of it, and if they found that several people were using the same name, they would carry the name in the book for the benefit of other manufacturers, and would not put a star in front of it, as for instance I find on page 80 five Gold Leaf brands made by different manufacturers and three Gold Medal brands by different manufacturers, whereas every place the star appears there seems to be only one brand by that name, is that the result of your investigation?

By Mr. Cavanagh: All this line of cross-examination is objected to on the ground that the witness has not testified that he was familiar with the manner and methods of the publication of Connorton's Tobacco Directory, and this is not within the scope of his direct examination.

By Mr. Hinton: The witness has testified on direct examination that the brand Beechnut was registered in this book, and I simply want to find out whether or not registration means what it appears to mean from the prefix of the book or whether in fact it means something else and is misleading.

(By the witness, Mr. Summers.)

A. The star indicated ownership, proven and incontestible.

XQ. 21. Now I notice on page seventeen, Connorton's Directory brand Beechnut Walsh, Boyle & Company, Chicago, Illinois, what does that mean?

A. It means that Walsh, Boyle & Company of Chicago, Illinois, is putting up a plug or twist under the name of Beechnut, it is just the same as if you would put out a hat and call it a name and I would put out a piece of tobacco and call it the same name, we could both use that name.

XQ. 22. You tell us that from your experience in the tobacco business?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 23. Then speaking from your experience in the tobacco business would you say that plug and twist would not be the same as scrap tobacco?

A. No, sir.

XQ. 24. Entirely different class of goods?

A. Yes; sir.

By Mr. Cavanagh: The question is objected to as it is a matter dealing with a judicial question and the witness is not competent or qualified to answer.

XQ. 25. Did you ever see this Beechnut tobacco put out by this Chicago firm?

A. No, sir, I did not.

XQ. 26. You don't know anything about the style of package in which it was put out?

A. No, sir.

XQ. 27. How long were you in the tobacco business?

A. 1884 to 1906.

XQ. 28. Do you know in what states Beechnut described as P. Lorillard Exhibit No. 14 was sold by the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Co.?

A. Most all over the country.

XQ. 29. Did you ever have any dealings with Connorton's Directory?

A. Only after I came to Maysville in 1905.

XQ. 29a. Were you in the tobacco business then?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 29b. Where?

A. Here in Maysville.

XQ. 30. Who were you with?

A. Green River Tobacco Company.

XQ. 31. And you registered certain brands for the Green River Tobacco Co.?

A. Yes, sir, Kentucky Colonel and Proper Thing.

XQ. 29. You did not get a certificate of ownership, proven and incontestible?

A. No, sir.

XQ. 30. You just registered the brand and the fee was $2.00?

A. Yes, sir, to the best of my knowledge, that was the fee.

XQ. 31. That is your best recollection?

A. Yes, sir.

RE-DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By MR. CAVANAGH:

RDQ. 1. What is plug tobacco used for?

A. Some for chewing and some for smoking.

RDQ. 2. What is scrap tobacco used for?

A. For chewing and smoking.

RDQ. 3. Both of them are tobacco products are they not?

A. Yes, sir, they are both tobacco.

RDQ. 4. I call your attention to the Beechnut registered by Walsh, Boyle & Company, Chicago, Illinois, appearing on page seventeen of Connorton's Directory for 1903, and ask you if you can find any star in front of that brand?

A. No, sir, I do not.

By Mr. Cavanagh: Connorton's Directory for 1903 produced by the witness is offered in evidence and the Notary is requested to mark the same P. Lorillard Company Exhibit "L."

(Re-Direct Examination closed.)

Re-Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Hinton:

RXQ. 1. What is indicated to you by the fact that neither of the two Beechnut brands appearing in 1903 Connorton's Directory in connection with two different manufacturers has no star in front of them?

A. It shows that they have merely been registered and no fee has been paid for a guarantee.

RXQ. 2. Do you mean that every name appearing in that would be there because some one had paid one dollar?

A. Well it had to be paid or it would not have been registered.

RXQ. 3. The book does not contain a complete list of all brands upon the market.

A. I don't know, I cannot say as to that.

RXQ. 4. Would you say that was a complete list?

A. I don't know, things like that never bothered me.

RXQ. 5. Is that what it was supposed to be among manufacturers?

A. Yes, sir.

RXQ. 6. You don't believe, do you, that there was $1.00 paid for every brand of tobacco in the United States?

A. I don't know, I could not say as to that.

RXQ. 7. Don't you believe that every name that appears in that Directory was put there because the manufacturer paid $1.00 for that purpose?

A. Yes, sir, I think that.

RXQ. 8. As a matter of fact coming down to it, have you concluded as a result of your thought within the last five minutes, that Connorton's Directory published all the brands that were on the market, and they put a star in front if they searched that brand in the directory at the request of the manufacturer and found no conflict in the name they issued a certificate.

A. It may have been that way, I won't say.

By Mr. Cavanagh: All this line of examination is obpected to because the book speaks for itself, and the book also has a key, and is not within the scope of his direct examination.

By Mr. Hinton: The witness testified on direct examination as to this book and what it means.

J. F. Summers.

It is hereby stipulated by and between counsel that the exhibits in this case may be retained in the custody of the respective counsel until final hearing, subject to call for inspection by the parties, and each party agrees to furnish the other with copies of such of the exhibits of which it may be possible to make ordinary copies.

SEBASTIAN HINTON, ESQ., counsel for Beech-Nut Packing Company.

By agreement between counsel the taking of the rebuttal testimony of Jacob Levy, a witness for the P. Lorillard Company is hereby adjourned until tomorrow, February 10th, 1921, and it is further agreed that the testimony of said witness Levy may be taken at the offices of the Metropolitan Tobacco Company, 22 Fourth Avenue, New York City, instead of at the offices of Meyers, Cavanagh & Hyde, 200 Fifth Avenue, New York City, as named in the notice.

Thursday, February 10th, 1921.

Met pursuant to adjournment, at the offices of the Metropolitan Tobacco Company, 22 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

Parties present as before.

JACOB LEVY,

witness called on behalf of the P. Lorillard Company, in rebuttal, being first duly sworn, deposes and says in answer to interrogatories propounded to him by Mr. Cavanagh, as follows:

Q. 1. Please state your name, residence and occupation?

A. Jacob Levy, 22 Fourth Avenue, N. Y., purchasing agent for the Metropolitan Tobacco Company.

Q. 2. How long have you been connected with the Metropolitan Tobacco Company?

A. Since November, 1893.

Q. 3. Has the Metropolitan Tobacco Company any connection with the New Jersey Tobacco Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 4. What is the connection?

A. Well, it has a controlling interest in the stock of the New Jersey Company.

Q. 5. During the taking of testimony on behalf of the Beech-Nut Packing Company in this Opposition, and at the conclusion of the deposition of one Guy W. Sharpe, there was placed and read into the record of the case an invoice from The American Tobacco Company dated July 12th, 1919, Order No. 19,122, showing certain shipments of "Beech Nut" cigarettes from the Kinney-Duke Branch on behalf of the Beech-Nut

Packing Company, and which invoice reads in essential parts as follows:

"Entered 7/11, Order of 7/11.

	Gro.	Price.	Total.
2060 Beech-Nut Cigarettes 10s	2060	5.75M	11.85

Net cash.

Shipped to the following:

B. Arkell, Equitable Bldg.,
120 Broadway, New York.

James R. Offield,
1223 Monadnock Bldg.,
Chicago, Ill.

New Jersey Tobacco Co.,
Jersey City Branch,
Jersey City, N. J.

Do you know anything of the result or anything in connection with the said shipment of Beech-Nut cigarettes by the Beech-Nut Packing Company to the New Jersey Tobacco Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 6. Will you please state in your own language just what you know about this matter?

A. Without our knowledge a shipment of Beech-Nut Company's cigarettes was shipped to the Jersey City Branch of the New Jersey Tobacco Company, and Mr. Adolph Tonn, the manager of that branch, on receiving this shipment, 'phoned to ask me what it was about or what it was for. I informed him not to use any of these cigarettes as we would not put them out on the market, as this brand was being manufactured by the P. Lorillard Company, and I personally saw the cigarettes at their office, that is the Beech Nut cigarettes of the Lorillard Company. I 'phoned him to hold them, and I would give him shipping instructions in a day or so.

Q. 7. What did you do then?

A. I had the matter up with Mr. Arkell (I think that's the man's name) of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, downtown, and furthermore, I wrote Mr. Arkell of this Company, but I cannot find a copy of the letter, and we received word from them to ship them the cigarettes, which we did, to their New York Office.

Q. 8. So as I understand it, you did not place these cigarettes upon the market, but you returned them to the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 9. To the New York Office?

A. Yes, we did not sell one package of these cigarettes; the reason for not doing so was because I personally saw at Lorillard's their Beech Nut cigarettes some time before this brand was shipped to us by the Beech-Nut Company. The goods we received from the Beech-Nut Packing Company was a plain ordinary cardboard package with ten cigarettes, with the name Beech-Nut printed on the front of the box. It was a plain white box with the name printed on.

Q. 10. You say you never sold a package of these Beech-Nut Company's cigarettes?

A. Never sold one package of these 10 cigarettes.

Q. 11. As I understand from your testimony, you did not order the Beech-Nut cigarettes of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Correct, sir.

(Direct examination closed.)

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

By MR. HINTON:

The deposition of this witness is objected to as not the best evidence, consisting largely of hearsay.

XQ. 1. Without waiver of objection. Is the New Jersey Tobacco Company a branch of the Metropolitan Tobacco Company?

A. No, sir, a separate corporation. The New Jersey Tobacco Company is a New Jersey Corporation; the Metropolitan Tobacco Company is a New York Corporation.

XQ. 2. Does the New Jersey Tobacco Company buy things on its own account?

A. No, sir. All requisitions, no matter for what it is, must first come through here—through the New Jersey's office which is situated here at 22 Fourth Avenue.

XQ. 3. You are the purchasing agent?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 4. Have you made any examination of your records, to show, or to satisfy yourself that no order was ever placed with the Beech-Nut Packing Company for these cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir. And furthermore, Mr. W. H. O'Brien of The American Tobacco Company informed me before shipping these cigarettes, as follows: That he was sending us some cigarettes which he would like to have disposed of as a Trade-Mark brand, and when I received these cigarettes and opened the package and found that the name was "Beech-Nut," I 'phoned him and told him that we could not put this brand on the market as I saw the "Beech Nut" package of cigarettes manufactured by the P. Lorillard Company on Mr. Belt's desk quite some time ago, and I did not want to get into any trouble with any of the manufacturers, and I was going to take it up with the Beech-Nut people who sent us an invoice for these cigarettes, to relieve us of same, as we would not put them out, and he informed me that it would be all right, and that he would see that it was taken care of.

XQ. 5. Do I understand your testimony that these cigarettes were sent to you on instructions of somebody connected with The American Tobacco Company?

A. Yes, sir, at that time Mr. O'Brien was Vice-President. He is out of there now.

XQ. 6. And how he got them, where he got them, or what happened in that connection you do not know?

A. Who got them? Mr. O'Brien told me he was having some cigarettes sent here which came from the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

XQ. 7. And your reason for not putting them out was that you did not want to get in trouble or difficulty of any kind with P. Lorillard Company?

A. I didn't want to have any trouble because I had seen the brand at P. Lorillard Company's, and Mr. Belt told me he was going to put this cigarette brand on the market, and I know that P. Lorillard Company also had a brand called "Beech Nut Scrap," which was on the market for some time.

XQ. 8. Now where did you see that Lorillard brand of "Beech-Nut" cigarettes?

A. At the P. Lorillard Company, 119 West 40th Street.

XQ. 9. Did you see some packages of cigarettes, or just the envelope?

A. Full packages of cigarettes, sir.

XQ. 10. Where were they?

A. On Mr. Belt's desk at 119 West 40th Street, and he showed me them.

XQ. 11. What is Mr. Belt? Is he an officer of P. Lorillard Company?

A. He is Vice-President of the company.

XQ. 12. I show you an empty foil package of "Beech-Nut" cigarettes. Does that correspond to the package you saw on Mr. Belt's desk?

A. Yes, sir.

(The empty package just referred to is introduced in evidence as "Beech Nut" Cross-Exhibit Lorillard Cigarette Wrapper.)

(A Patent Office copy of Beech Nut Packing Company's registration No. 89,613, of December 31st, 1912, is offered in evidence as "Beech-Nut" Cross-Exhibit Trade-Mark Registration, and it is stipulated that this may have all the force and effect of the original.)

XQ. 13. Now as I understand it, P. Lorillard Company is one of the four big Tobacco Companies, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 14. P. Lorillard Company has from time to time taken over a lot of brands, has it not, of other manufacturers?

A. Oh, I don't know about that, you see——

Objection by MR. CAVANAGH: That question is objected to as immaterial and irrelevant, and furthermore, the witness has not been shown as competent to pass upon P. Lorillard's business in this respect, and furthermore, the question is objected to as beyond the scope of the examination, which was directed simply to the sending of Beech-Nut cigarettes by the Beech-Nut Packing Company to the New Jersey Tobacco Company.

XQ. 15. You buy the Lorillard stuff, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 16. The Anargyros brand is now handled by the Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 17. And a considerable number of other brands that used to be put out by other manufacturers?

A. No, sir. The Anargyros was turned over, as far as I read in the papers, at the time of the disintegration of the American Tobacco Company.

XQ. 18. Lorillard puts out Murads?

A. Yes, sir.

XQ. 19. You remember what the appearance of the retail package was of the various Anargyos brands that were made before those brands were taken up by Lorillard Company.

A. Yes.

By MR. CAVANAGH: This question objected to as immaterial and irrelevant.

XQ. 20. The general appearance of these packages remains the same now, doesn't it?

A. Yes, the coloring may have been changed.

XQ. 21. Would you, as an expert in the tobacco line, would you say that the Lorillard Company maintained the same general appearance?

Objection by MR. CAVANAGH: While perfectly willing to give Counsel for the Beech-Nut Packing Company all latitude in proper cross-examination, objection is made to this line of first attempting to qualify this witness as an expert, when he was simply called upon to testify to the fact of the alleged sale of Beech-Nut cigarettes by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, and no good reason is seen why an attempt should be made to delve into all of the entire tobacco business of the Lorillard Company and other concerns.

By Mr. Hinton: Witness has testified on direct examination without the production of records to various happenings and interrelationships between various tobacco concerns. It is perfectly competent in order to test the reliability of the witness' recollection, to ask him a few general questions concerning the handling of various brands.

(It is stipulated that Mr. Cavanagh's objection may relate to all this line of examination without repetition.)

XQ. 22. As an expert in this line, why do you suppose the Lorillard Company kept the appearance of these packages the same?

A. Why they kept them? Because that was the original brand they put out and they kept the same package.

XQ. 23. In other words, would they take over for instance an Anargyros brand and continue to market that brand and keep the same general appearance?

A. Yes, sir, except the color or lithographing may have been changed.

XQ. 24. The reason for this, of course, was that if these cigarettes or whatever the product was, had a certain good will attached to them, they wanted to get the benefit of that good will.

A. I simply believe they kept the package the same way to show that they were getting the regular brand of cigarettes.

XQ. 25. That's ordinary common sense, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

(No redirect examination.)

(Deposition closed.)

Jacob Levy.

Tried before Hon. Charles F. Lynch, Judge, at the Chamber of Commerce Building in Newark, N. J., on Tuesday, October 30, 1923, at ten-thirty A. M.

Mr. Stanley: May it please the Court, counsel in this case are members of the Chicago Bar, and I should like to present Mr. Charles C. Bulkley, Mr. Walter A. Scott and Mr. H. McClure Johnson, all of the Chicago Bar, who will actively participate in the trial.

Mr. Scott opens for the plaintiff as follows:

This case, your Honor, is a trademark suit and unfair competition case. I think the easiest entrance into the situation is to briefly glance at the bill of complaint which appears at the opening of plaintiff's record. As recited in the first paragraph—(interrupted).

The Court: What page?

Mr. Scott: The first page. Plaintiff is a corporation of New York, the Beech-Nut Packing Company. Defendant is a corporation of New Jersey. The second paragraph of the bill recites the first adoption of the trademark by plaintiff's predecessor in title, the Imperial Packing Company, which adopted this mark as stated about 1892. The paragraph goes on to describe the mark as consisting of the familiar oval border with the word, "Beech-Nut" and the sprig of Beechnuts within. I think we need not dwell upon that paragraph.

The third paragraph and the fourth paragraph together recite the change of the name of the business from Imperial Packing Company to Beech-Nut Packing Company, and the fourth paragraph recites the incorporation of the business in 1899 as the Beech-Nut Packing Company, with the assignment of the assets of the first company to the new company.

The fifth paragraph contains matter that will be interesting to read in a little more detail. The proofs are directed to much that is therein recited. I will read this paragraph:

"Plaintiff's predecessor, Imperial Packing Company, then dealing in certain meat products, shortly after 1891 began a rapid extension of the items of its manufacture; and plaintiff from the time of its acquisition of the business has persistently and rapidly continued that extension. The business of plaintiff by reason of the expenditures, care, skill and industry of plaintiff increased with great rapidity, so that prior to the acts herein complained of, plaintiff's trademark, trade name and distinctive badge and autograph were familiar to and highly regarded by the public, and on sale largely in stores dealing in package consumable products, such as general stores, grocery stores, drug stores, tobacco stores, news stands and the like; its business aggregated many millions of dollars every year, and comprehended a very large number of packaged products of widely varying character such as chewing gum, ham, peanut butter, jellies, and scores of others. Plaintiff has since added many new products to its line, as, for instance, ginger ale and tinfoil, and has always expected and now expects and intends in the rapid expansion of its business to continue so to do, all without reference to specific similarities or differences between the various items included in plaintiff's line. Plaintiff's goods and those of its predecessor have always been identifiable by the trademark, trade name, distinctive badge and autograph (Exhibit A, supra)"—which is simply one of the labels attached to the bill and similar to these on this large exhibit board.

The sixth paragraph I think we may read: "Plaintiff's business has for many years prior to the acts herein complained of been in large measure dependent upon the standing in the mind of the public of its trademark 'Beech-Nut' and that of its trade name, badge and autograph (Exhibit A). The aforesaid trade name, badge and autograph, Exhibit A, except for variations in size, name of particular product and other immaterial variations, has been displayed conspicuously by plaintiff upon widely varying kinds of packaged consumable goods, which plaintiff has from time to time put upon the market."

There was an amendment just made in that paragraph so that my wording may be slightly different from what appears in your Honor's copy. The words "without exception" and "all of the" were taken out, because it appears that some imported articles had been sold, not as the Beech-Nut products, but just as a part of their general activity. That simply was to make the paragraph literally accurate. It has no bearing on the case.

"Plaintiff, in the expansion of its business, has expended more than two millions of dollars in advertising, including substantially every known kind of advertising." The advertising is recited there. Possibly it is not necessary to dwell in detail upon the precise character—billboards and other advertising, and all of the usual means of publicity.

The seventh paragraph recites matters to which the proofs will be largely directed. "By reason of the foregoing, of the care, skill and industry and expenditures of plaintiff; and by reason of the high regard enjoyed by plaintiff's trademark and trade name 'Beech-Nut,' distinctive badge and autograph (Exhibit A) it came about (long prior to the beginning of the acts herein complained of) that the trade and public of the United States recognized the label Exhibit A as plaintiff's distinctive badge and as plaintiff's personal autograph; and as indicating that any consumable packaged product bearing aforesaid badge, trademark and trade name and appearing upon the shelves of a retailer alongside other products bearing the same badge, was of the same origin as those other products and of the same high standard of excellence."

The proofs will be very largely to that point. "Each new product so marked was long prior to 1915, and thereafter, and is now, received with immediate and marked favor by the public, * * *." The significance in there is the word "new." Each new product is so received immediately "* * * by reason of the public's gratification and satisfaction with the previous products, similarly identified, by reason of the high regard the public had for plaintiff, and without such sales resistance as meets the ordinary merchandizing of a new product."

There is another significant expression "without such sales resistance as meets the ordinary merchandizing of a new product."

The proofs will be directed toward the proposition, which is amply established, that these new products went into vogue, into use, upon the reputation of their predecessors, notwithstanding that that particular article had not previously been put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. "By maintaining its standards of quality, at the cost of the most indefatigable and zealous effort, plaintiff has been and is enabled to maintain a large and growing demand for the goods of its manufacture, identified as of its manufacture by the trademark, badge and autograph, Exhibit A."

This next paragraph recites an application for registration of this trademark upon sixty-seven products, which was granted by the Patent Office in 1912. Of course, the rights of the company exist quite independently of any registration, but as a matter of fact they did register the mark for sixty-seven products in 1912.

I think the reading of that paragraph is unnecessary. What I have stated is the substance of it.

The ninth paragraph recites the charge:

"Defendant, well knowing the premises, and contriving to injure plaintiff, to cramp the legitimate expansion of its business, and divert from its profits, gains"—(it should be "from it profits, gains") "* * * and advantages which otherwise would accrue to plaintiff, to the irreparable and vast damage of plaintiff has infringed plaintiff's trademark, appropriated plaintiff's trade name and forged plaintiff's autograph; and has been guilty of unfair competition in trade against plaintiff."

And the following sentence recites the threat to continue so to do in the usual formal language.

We come here in the tenth paragraph to one of the particular charges upon which the proof is based.

The Tenth Paragraph: "Thus defendant in the District of New Jersey, and elsewhere throughout the United States, without leave or license from plaintiff and against its protest," and about that protest in 1915 much of the evidence and discussion in this case will hinge "has been and is engaged in the manufacture and sale (in commerce among the several states) of a product known as 'Beech-Nut' scrap tobacco, a cheap tobacco made of 'scrap' for tobacco chewing—" the word "cheap" there will receive some attention in the evidence—"upon which product, as packaged for the consumer and the retailer, is prominently displayed a fraudulent imitation of the distinctive label of plaintiff (Exhibit A); a specimen of said imitative label appears affixed hereto as Exhibit B."

I think your Honor will find that pasted in the record following the bill, that Exhibit B. It is not in my book, but I think it is in the book before your Honor. It has the radiating marks around the oval, that is the one (indicating). That is the label which the Lorillard people put on scrap tobacco in 1915, and which gave rise to the conditions that are mentioned at this point.

"—a specimen of said imitative label appears affixed hereto as Exhibit B; to the confusion of the trade and the public, who are likely to, and in fact have generally believed that the so-called 'Beech-Nut' Scrap Tobacco is another extension of plaintiff's line—" At this point I might, by way of anticipation, ask your Honor's attention to that expression, "is another extension of plaintiff's line," the exact words are used by witnesses, as we shall prove, that when they saw the new products come out, having seen a great many of the preceding Beech-Nut products, they thought them another extension of the line—"and a product made by plaintiff. Defendant in so doing, and in its sales effort with respect to the so-called 'Beech-Nut' Scrap Tobacco has been guilty of trademark infringement and of unfair competition in trade and has promoted and caused confusion in the trade to its own illegitimate profit and to the vast and irreparable loss, damage and injury of plaintiff."

This eleventh paragraph recites the high reputation of plaintiff, and the evidence will show that the facts set forth in this paragraph are the result of the studied policy of the company.

"Plaintiff (and its predecessor) by thirty years of cumulative, persistent, indefatigable effort of an organization now numbering many hundreds of individuals, and by the expenditure of more than two millions of dollars in advertising, has established its label, Exhibit A, as indicating plaintiff's manufacture wherever it appears, thereby denoting the highest quality that can be obtained" —on that word "quality" we will prove the attitude and impression of the public and their expectation when they buy an article with the Beech-Nut label upon it—"highest quality that can be obtained, with respect to cleanliness and general supreme desirability of any consumable product bearing that label. This reputation of plaintiff, associated with the aforesaid label, is nowhere better established than among the most refined and prosperous of the female members of the public." That sentence will have some bearing on the evidence which will be put before the Court, "the female members of the public," and their attitude toward the production of chewing tobacco and cigarettes and the consideration that was given to them by the Beech-Nut Company, and why it refrained from dealing in tobacco products.

"Among these persons, as well as to a substantial extent among the public in general, chewing tobacco is regarded with disfavor. Recognition as a manufacturer of chewing tobacco (particularly a cheap scrap tobacco) is not compatible with the standing plaintiff has achieved, either in the minds of its female customers or in the minds of the public."

While possibly none of us in this room is burdened with that prejudice regarding tobacco, it will be quite surprising when we come to the evidence in this case to find what a very considerable number of people were led to criticize and to think less of the Beech-Nut Company when they saw these products.

"Yet such recognition of plaintiff as a manufacturer of 'cheap' chewing tobacco has been and will be the inevitable result of defendant's imitation of plaintiff's label, Exhibit A. Furthermore, such recognition has and will jeopardize plaintiff's standing with a considerable body of plaintiff's trade," something that the evidence abundantly proves (i. e., retailers and jobbers), both through prejudice, among members of that trade, against chewing tobacco, and also through a lowered respect for plaintiff's intelligence, which has been and will be the result of plaintiff's being believed in its trade to have embarked on the manufacture of cheap chewing tobacco * * *."

In the twelfth paragraph there is recited the injury which has come about by the poster and billboard advertising which the Lorillard Company has done. There are one or two witnesses in particular whose testimony will be placed before the Court, one instance showing the case of a man riding in his automobile, who saw this sign and went home and told his wife not to buy any more Beech-Nut products, and who went around and told all his friends not to, as we shall prove. The existence of those people, regardless of our sympathy or non-sympathy, must be taken into account by the business man, a man conducting a great business enterprise.

The thirteenth paragraph recites: "Defendant further aggravating its injury hereinabove complained of and desiring still further wrongfully to exploit the good-will of the purchasing public toward any packaged consumable product bearing plaintiff's trademark, trade name and autograph, without leave or license from plaintiff, but over its protest and against its will intends, is prepared, and threatens to flood the market (and engage in commerce among the several states) with a so-called 'Beech-Nut' cigarette."

This bill was filed just when the putting out of that cigarette was under preparation.

The fourteenth paragraph recites the widespread recognition of "Beech-Nut Quality" which has been built up by the advertising and general publicity efforts of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

The fifteenth paragraph recites a detail seeming to show not only the effort to appropriate the trade name in its essence, but to appropriate the little accompanying incidents, so that there might be no mistake in the public mind.

"Defendant," in paragraph fifteen, "desirous still further of promoting confusion in the trade and of illegitimately converting to its own uses the good-will and reputation of plaintiff, has caused to be printed upon its imitative cigarette wrapper, approximately a million of which defendant has had printed and is ready to launch on to the market (Exhibit C), a panel containing the inscription: 'Cigarettes of Beech-Nut Quality have never before been offered to the Public.' * * *"

That particular label was changed before the cigarettes were put out, as the evidence will show, and the reasons for the change will be made clear by the evidence.

The remaining paragraphs are devoted to the conversion of the profits, the prayer for relief—I think we have pretty well covered the substance of the bill of complaint, and now I shall, if I may, outline briefly the facts which will be shown by the evidence. A good deal of this evidence has been taken by depositions. There will be some witnesses on both sides, and without a pretty full opening statement on each side, the order of development will be so interfered with that the Court possibly would not get the force of the testimony as readily as with opening statements, and I believe it has been agreed by both sides that we shall present our case to the Court in that way before we put on our witnesses, and if the Court approves we will go ahead in that way.

This business of the Beech-Nut Packing Company was established by individuals along about the year 1890. At first, as one of the witnesses says, the hams were cured in a cellar and smoked in a barrel behind the barn, and along about 1892 they incorporated as the Imperial Packing Company.

During the years following 1890 or 1889, I don't know that the date is precisely fixed, when the first hams and bacon were put out, the business was confined, I think, to those products. As the years went by various conserves were added to the products, and the business gradually increased along through the 90's, but as to the precise figures and volume of its business, we can't produce any figures on account of the fact that no records are extant prior to 1903, when there was a fire; but the business grew, according to the testimony of the witnesses, during those years, and in 1899 the management of the company, finding that its greatest asset in a business way was the word "Beech-Nut" itself, and the recognition by the public of that mark, decided to reincorporate under a new name, so they incorporated as the Beech-Nut Packing Company. The word "Beech-Nut" thus becoming both the corporate name and the trademark of the company, the business went on.

In the year 1903 we shall show that the business of the company had increased as to variety of articles, so that it included ham and bacon in bulk, and sliced bacon, sliced beef, and chopped beef, and three kinds of jam. There were eight products they were making in 1903. The business increased year by year after 1903, with some additions each year, until we come down to the year 1915. In 1909 there were fifty-three products put out under this label, including the conserves, the candies, the meats and the various products. In 1911 chewing gum was added, and so by 1915 there were fifty or sixty products, and this trademark had received wide recognition, as the evidence will show.

The label board—as I understand it, this label board has been stipulated in as correctly showing our labels year by year with the dates above them.

Mr Cavanagh: Yes.

Mr. Scott: And that board outlines what will be, what is, shown in the case.

Going back to the years 1900 to 1905, your Honor will observe a comparatively small number of products, the increase from 1905 to 1910, and so on in these various columns. It gives a graphic illustration of the growth of the business and the increase in the number of products. The increase in the number of products is something that we wish to emphasize independently of the volume of the business. That has a bearing independently of the volume of the business as a whole, the variety of products. The volume of the business as a whole is shown in a tabulated statement in the farthermost part of the record, upon page 868, about three or four pages from the last page in the book. We have a statement of the volume of the business, which begins in 1903, on account of there being no records before that; and, as your Honor will see, in 1903 the comparatively small number of products then made, as shown in that column, 1900 to 1905, had a sale of over half a million dollars, and by running down this column we find a gradual and steady increase to 1921, when the sales amounted to twelve million dollars.

Now, that briefly outlines what we shall prove in regard to the founding and the growth of this business.

I will next state to the Court what we shall prove with regard to the policy of this company, and I shall then state what we shall prove in regard to the success of that policy and its effect upon this suit.

Mr. Francis E Barbour is the Vice-President of this company and has been since the year 1910. His testimony will be to the effect that it is the studied and designed policy of the company to increase its business by increasing the number of products put out as distinguished from the policy of concentrating upon a single thing. Of course, the two avenues of progress are open to any business enterprise, concentration upon one thing or increase in the variety of products.

The policy of the Beech-Nut Packing Company was the increased variety of articles. Now, as will be shown from Mr. Barbour's testimony, such a policy involved this inherent difficulty, that every one of these new products that are put upon the market appears in competition with a vast number of other makes of a similar product, and unless there is some force behind it, each new product must await a long period of publicity and advertising before it acquires that recognition by the public necessary to make it profitable.

As Mr. Barbour will explain, they wanted to adopt a policy which would get around that difficulty, to overcome this resistance to the sale of a new product. These are all staple articles which the Beech-Nut Packing Company sells, articles of which a dozen other brands may be bought, and when they put out a Beech-Nut brand of some article not previously made it was only adding one to a line of a dozen brands on the grocers' shelves. They had to study out some way to individualize that product and take it out of that class which the people consider just another kind of jam, or just another this or that; so, as Mr. Barbour's testimony will show, they adopted the policy of paving the way for each new product by the high quality of all of the products they put out That sounds very obvious and very simple, but when we consider the vast number of products put out by this company and the pains to which this company went to emphasize the mere attribute of quality to such an extent that it would individualize this company, we see that that was really a very important and difficult thing to bring about. And they went to this extreme, as Mr. Barbour says, they decided that they would not put an article on the market which was not in their opinion better than any article of that kind put out by any other company, and that it must, at least in their opinion, be better or they would not put it out, and they have pursued that policy, and we shall have testimony to their efforts on one of these products, an article seemingly as simple as salted peanuts. Mr. Barbour will show the Court that there are several brands of this article on the market, selling profitably to the makers, but he says there is not one of them they consider good enough to put out under the Beech-Nut label, and that they have spent six or seven years in their laboratories investigating salted peanuts, and they have not found one yet they consider good enough to put out under the Beech-Nut brand. Therefore, when Mr. Barbour speaks of emphasizing this matter of quality it is not a mere idle advertising slogan; it is something that runs to the very heart of this company's policy and governs its activities.

We shall show by a witness the conditions necessary in the Beech-Nut plant to bring about this condition of affairs—the immaculate cleanliness, the sanitation, the invitation that is extended to the public to inspect this plant, the provision of guides to take the people through—I think even the posting of signs on the roads inviting automobilists to visit the plant for that purpose.

Now, I dwell upon the anticipated proof on those points for the purpose of showing the back-ground upon which this competition of which we complain was precipitated. The management of a company of this kind is peculiarly dependent upon the maintenance of this policy when once started, because there are sixty-seven products. The testimony will show that they are all lumped in the public's mind, that the public have a classification of Beech-Nut products in which they include all these widely varying articles, and if they find one or two of those products bad, the thing carries over to all the rest. Whatever affects the reputation of one of these products, affects the reputation of all. The eggs are all in one basket. If there is one rotten one, they all are thought to be rotten.

Now, in the year 1915, after the establishment of the conditions I have recited, by the painstaking methods I have recited, there appeared upon the market Lorillard Scrap tobacco. The evidence of the deception of the public immediately began to accumulate.

The Court: Had your company handled tobacco prior to that time?

Mr. Scott: It never did, and I will come to the proof upon that point as we go along, and explain to your Honor the ground upon which this suit is based. Your Honor is probably familiar with some of the litigation, some in this Circuit, in the Overland case. Your Honor is probably familiar with that, and with the Aunt Jemima case and others of that kind, in which the Courts deal with that precise point, and in which your Honor's inquiry can be answered in the words of a Court, more forcibly than in mine, and more persuasively. Immediately upon the appearance of this Scrap Tobacco, orders began to come to Canajoharie, where the plant of the Beech-Nut Company is, for this Scrap Tobacco, and the extent of this deception, I think, will surprise your Honor, as it did even counsel themselves who were collecting the evidence, the deception which resulted from putting out this scrap tobacco. The Beech-Nut salesmen and retail dealers were assailed with inquiries as to whether the Beech-Nut Packing Company was putting out Scrap Tobacco, and were going to extend their business into scrap tobacco. The attitude of the public is shown here abundantly by testimony introduced by both sides, showing through the testimony of retailers the comments made to them by their own customers, and also by the testimony of the consumers themselves. A surprising fact, which will be shown to your Honor as this testimony develops, is that in the case of many of these witnesses who were deceived as to this scrap tobacco, who thought it was a Beech-Nut product, their deception continued for years, and in some instances it continued until either just before they were examined as witnesses and in some cases it continued until they found out while on the witness stand that the Beech-Nut Company did not make this product. In one instance a witness never has found out, I believe. He was put on the stand without telling him. His state of mind was ascertained, and he was examined, and it was shown that he was under this misapprehension, and upon cross examination counsel for the Lorillard Company asked some questions which seemed to imply that the tobacco was not made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, and the witness seemed to resent it. He seemed to think counsel was misleading him, and he said, "Put me right, who does make this?" There was a man whose deception continued, and is continuing yet for all I know. But these witnesses go by dozens and scores and hundreds. It isn't a matter of individual instances. There is no possibility of these things having occurred by accident or by careful selection. As your Honor hears the testimony, you will hear not only the testimony of our witnesses who testify to this deception, you will be presented with the testimony of hundreds of witnesses for the other side, a very considerable proportion of whom testify to exactly what I am telling the Court, namely, to this deception, showing the utter impossibility even of counsel interested in finding witnesses who are not deceived—the impossibility of their going out among a hundred million people and finding two or three hundred for witnesses, without drawing a very considerable number, probably twenty or thirty, who were deceived. That is the strongest kind of evidence. We show that people are deceived. The evidence for the defense will show that it is impossible to get any considerable number of people collected without including a very large proportion who are laboring under this very deception. It is wide-spread and national.

Now, in the year 1915, your Honor, when that scrap tobacco appeared upon the market, Mr. Barbour, the vice-president of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, wrote a letter, as the evidence will show, directly to the Lorillard Company, complaining of this conduct, protesting against it, and asking that it cease. In reply to that letter Mr. Barbour was informed by letter from the Lorillard Company that the Lorillard Company and its predecessors in title had continuously used this trademark on tobacco since 1898, "as shown by the records of our company." Now, I would ask your Honor to bear that statement in mind. It is going to come up again, and the form of it. It is a representation of fact in terms so distinct and so clear, that the most ingenious imagination cannot conjure up any explanation or any theory that they meant anything other than precisely what they said. "The Lorillard Company and its predecessors in title have used this trademark upon tobacco continuously since 1898, as shown by the records of our company."

They did not even leave a loophole in which to say that they had spoken from memory, and that it was a mistake. They said, "as shown by the records of our company," a representation bearing upon its face every indication of certainty, and of care, and of the intention of the party making the allegation to stand by it, and that it was true. Mr. Barbour received this letter and he wrote back asking them to send him samples of their product showing the manner in which they had been using the word "Beech-Nut" since 1898. The Lorillard Company enclosed him some old price lists, and also sent him the two labels which the Court will see in the upper left-hand corner, where your Honor will see two labels bearing the word "Beechnut" and under the word "Beechnut," the picture of a squirrel. That is what they had been using since 1898.

Now, for the purpose of making the force of this representation, which will be proved, clear to the Court, we have put upon that card, under those two "squirrel labels," as I will call them for clearness, we have put the standard Beech-Nut oval label. These are all so much alike that one is representative of all. At the right-hand of that card, your Honor will find the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco label, under which the Lorillard Company put out this scrap tobacco in the year 1915. The representation carried with it inevitably and infalliably the thought that the Lorillard Company, having owned this mark since 1898 was continuing the business under that label which your Honor sees at the right. Without anticipating the evidence, I will merely ask your Honor to form his own impression regarding the proposition whether that label at the right of that card evinces an intention to continue the reputation built up by that squirrel label, or an intention to purloin the reputation which had been built up by that oval label. To accentuate that point, I will state to your Honor that in this correspondence which took place between Mr. Barbour in 1915 and the Lorillard Company, Mr. Barbour told the Lorillard Company that that tobacco was sailing under the Beech-Nut colors and was being understood to be a Beech-Nut product. The Lorillard Company wrote back to Mr. Barbour saying to him that that was ridiculous, using that word, and saying "If anybody thought that our scrap tobacco was a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company it would be a detriment to us."

Now, I ask if any reasonable person can look at that card and think that the corporation that put out that trademark at the right, as your Honor holds it, was trying to avoid the evil which would flow from being identified with the oval mark in the lower left-hand corner, trying to avoid that detriment to their reputation and to benefit by the reputation that would come from the squirrel. The proposition is so inherently ridiculous, so inherently unbelievable that evidence is hardly necessary to support further the proposition that there was design and intent in the adoption of that label on the right, to repudiate that squirrel label and to pretend identity with the product appearing under that standard Beech-Nut label. But the evidence will illuminate that point still farther.

There is another point that I might state to your Honor in this connection, but I will defer it until I explain some further proof that we are going to introduce. This representation being made to the Beech-Nut Packing Company, we must pause to consider the bearing of this evidence and other evidence upon the attitude of the Beech-Nut Packing Company at this time. The inquiry which the Court made a few moments ago as to whether the Beech-Nut Packing Company had ever used this mark upon tobacco comes in at this point very pertinently and I deferred a discussion of it until now because at this point it illuminates the discussion a little more clearly. The Beech-Nut Packing Company never used this trademark upon tobacco except later upon ten or twelve dollars' worth that they sold to qualify for a Patent Office registration, which we will talk about later. But as a business proposition, they never sold any tobacco products under this label. They are not asking for any relief in this Court upon any proposition of that kind. The relief which they ask in this Court is based upon the proposition that the significance attached to this trademark by the public as indicating that any commodity bearing that trademark, especially a packaged commodity bearing that trademark, and sold in grocery stores, tobacco stores, drug stores, and so forth, is a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. That is the theory upon which this prayer for relief is based. I will not, of course, in this opening statement, discuss the law, but briefly we may state that in the Overland case, the sale of a tire was held to infringe the Overland trademark or trade name upon an automobile. No man could buy a tire thinking it was an automobile or vice versa, but the proposition was that here is an invasion of another's reputation. Here the tire man appropriates and profits by the business reputation of the automobile man. Here the tire man saddles upon the automobile man, the responsibility for the quality of the tire and for the fair dealing of the man who sells the tire, and it is wrong that the maker of an automobile should have this responsibility imposed upon him. It is wrong that the reputation which he has built up by advertising and by expensive publicity of all kinds should be diverted from him. There is an infinity of trademarks to select from. Why should this man select Overland for his tires? That is the tenor of these cases upon which we shall rely. We shall show by the evidence that this reputation of this wide-spread extent which would cause people to accept a tobacco product as the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, did not exist in 1898. In 1898, we admit that we had no such cause of action. The business of the Beech-Nut Packing Company was a small business then, five or six products, and there was no reason in 1898 why the trademark "Beech-Nut" upon bacon and ham on the one hand, and upon tobacco, on the other hand, should not proceed along perfectly peacebly and innocently by both parties. Neither party's reputation was such at that time that any one would think that the Beechnut tobacco was made by this comparatively small packing house in Canajoharie, New York, it being a comparatively small business at that time. It was not until, by the growth of their business their reputation had so extended as to cause the public to attach this significance to their trademark, that is the significance of believing any product bearing that name was theirs—it was not until their business had grown to that extent that any cause of action could exist. The cause of action here is the existence of that widespread reputation built up by painstaking and expensive efforts and until that reputation existed to that broad extent there was no cause of action. There was no cause of action in 1898, therefore, since which year the Lorillard Company represented to the Beech-Nut Packing Company that they had continuously used this trademark upon scrap tobacco. It appeared to the Beech-Nut Packing Company, upon consideration, that they had no cause of action. They did not admit and never will admit that this trademark prestige of theirs does not extend over all of this vast field of goods which are handled in stores of this kind, but it seemed that there was an exception which must be carved out of it, that while they were building up this vast field of trademark publicity and appropriating this field in this way, that before they had accomplished that purpose the Lorillard Company, according to their representation had acquired an indefeasible right in this word "Beech-Nut" for that one article, scrap tobacco, and therefore, there was nothing for the Beech-Nut Packing Company to do but abide by the result. This condition seemed to have come about innocently. When the Beech-Nut Packing Company adopted this trademark it adopted it rightfully, and when the assignor of the Lorillard Company in 1898 used this trademark upon scrap tobacco, he was doing so innocently. The two businesses were small, and the general theory, the old theory, of the law is perfectly correct—we don't ask for any modification of it—the same trademark may be used upon baby carriages that is used upon lumber without conflict. There are hundreds, thousands, of cases to that effect, and that was the condition which existed in 1898, when the assignor of the Lorillard Company put this trademark upon scrap tobacco, perfectly rightfully, no reason why he shouldn't, knowing it would cause, and could conceivably cause, no confusion. At that time, the Beech-Nut Packing Company did not even know of the existence of the tobacco. The tobacco was out in Kentucky and doubtless quite likely—the record does not show it, but quite likely the tobacco man did not know anything about the Beech-Nut Packing Company. But even if he did, that does not make any difference—there was no conflict. The situation was perfectly legal.

Now, the Beech-Nut Packing Company, in pursuance of its adopted policy built up its business so that its reputation expanded to such an extent that it overlapped that scrap tobacco Their design was to build up this reputation unimpaired by anything, to have its reputation for all of this class of goods. But they were so unfortunate as to find that as to an individual product the field had already been appropriated. Therefore, in 1915, as the evidence will show, these letters of protest came to an end. The correspondence extended from June to September, and then the Beech-Nut Packing Company was inactive, took no further steps to stop the Lorillard Company, and there was no reason why they should. Here was this representation as to facts peculiarly within the knowledge of the Lorillard Company facts, inaccessible to the Beech-Nut Packing Company, which upon its face gave the Lorillard Company the indefeasible right to go on with the scrap tobacco. It was an unfortunate situation, it created a conflict, but it seemed to be founded in the strict letter of the law, and the Beech-Nut Packing Company thought itself helpless, and the situation proceeded in that way to the year 1919. The Beech-Nut Packing Company was inactive as to any protest from the years 1915 to 1919. Their inactivity followed, and as we shall see, was the absolute result, the direct result of this representation.

In 1919, the Lorillard Company made plans to put out a Beech-Nut cigarette with which the public is quite familiar at this time. There ensued negotiations between the Beech-Nut Packing Company and the Lorillard Company. The Beech-Nut Packing Company protested. They had a meeting and the Lorillard Company agreed to make some sort of alterations in its package. The package had originally had on it, "Cigarettes of Beech-Nut quality." I don't think that was ever put on the market, but the wrapper was shown to the Beech-Nut Packing Company. That is an old slogan of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, "Beech-Nut quality," and that was put on the wrapper. They offered to take that off, and I think that has never appeared, and they offered to make a change in the color, the red color, they offered to change to some other color but it does not appear of record what it was. And these negotiations went on through correspondence for some months. They did not arrive at any agreement. The Beech-Nut Packing Company offered to accept any reasonable changes that they would make. Of course, the Beech-Nut Packing Company did not feel in a very strong position. They were there trying to protect their trademark, to get these people to make some change, but they did not have any very heavy club to wield over them. They did not have any club at all, because in their understanding, instilled into their mind by the Lorillard Company, the Lorillard Company had an indefeasible right to use this mark upon tobacco since 1898. And after more or less discussion, the Lorillard Company, as the evidence will show, offered to make a few slight changes in the wrapper before they put the cigarette out, if the Beech-Nut Company would pay them some money, $10,000, I think, to pay for the original wrappers which they would have to destroy. That seems to have been the last straw, and the negotiations were broken off, and the Lorillard Company put out the Beech-Nut cigarettes.

In the meantime and during or shortly before these negotiations wherein the Beech-Nut Packing Company rather helplessly, and without much hope of success, was trying to induce the Lorillard Company to avoid this precise facsimile, as one might almost say, of their trademark—during those negotiations, the Beech-Nut Packing Company filed an application in the Patent Office for registration of its trademark. And they had the American Tobacco Company make them up about twenty-five or fifty dollars' worth of cigarettes with the word "Beech-Nut" printed on the boxes. It is necessary to go through that formality, and they sent some to their lawyer of record, and one or two other people, so that they could make the qualifying affidavit and say they sold some of these cigarettes in interstate commerce. The filing of this application seems to have been based partly upon desperation and partly upon the theory that while the Beech-Nut Packing Company, under the facts as represented by the Lorillard Company, must grant that the Lorillard Company had a perfect right to put out scrap tobacco under the Beech-Nut trademark, the theory appears sound that that right, based upon scrap tobacco from 1898, creating as it did, great confusion in the market and in the mind of the public and imposing a hardship upon the Beech-Nut Packing Company, would afford no warrant for the Lorillard Company to extend that right to cigarettes.

Although we hear much in Patent Office discussions of trademark questions about the use of a trademark upon one article in a class giving right to its extension to other articles in its class, that is simply a matter of interpreting a statute which has no effect beyond the regulation of registration in the Patent Office. Here was a case in which special circumstances existed, and the application was filed for registration of the trademark on cigarettes by the Beech-Nut Packing Company. This application was known to the Lorillard Company, during the negotiations as the evidence will show when it comes before your Honor, and, I think, just before the termination of the negotiations, the publication in the Patent Office Gazette, that this application had been examined and was about to be registered appeared. The publication in the Patent Office Gazette is to enable anyone who considers his rights violated to oppose the registration. There is a statutory proceeding called an "Opposition," and the Lorillard Company, seeing the publication of the intention of the Patent Office to register the cigarette trademark for the Beech-Nut Packing Company, filed this notice of opposition.

Now, that leads to a trial in the Patent Office conducted in general the same as litigation is before any tribunal. The Patent Office acts in a rather judicial capacity in those matters. The evidence is taken by deposition, and the cases are argued. Now, this opposition led to the taking of evidence in the Patent Office by both parties, and that record in the Patent Office is incorporated in the record of this case by stipulation, and the testimony presented to the Patent Office is before your Honor by stipulation as if taken in this case. That testimony taken in the Patent Office shows facts which I ask your Honor to compare with the representation made by the Lorillard Company to the Beech-Nut Packing Company in the year 1915. In the Patent Office proceeding, your Honor, an official of the Lorillard Company testified that that old squirrel tobacco, represented by that mark in the upper left-hand corner of that board—that the sale of the goods upon which that trademark appeared decreased year by year until 1910, mind you, your Honor, 1910—it had been decreasing long before 1910—had decreased year by year until in 1910, only 25 pounds were sold, and that in the years 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914, not an ounce was sold or in existence in the possession of the Lorillard Company, so far as the evidence shows.

The superintendent of the factory of the Lorillard Company, where that squirrel tobacco was made, testified that its manufacture was discontinued not only for those four years from 1911 to 1914, but probably for six years.

Now, as this evidence comes before the Court, I would ask your Honor to contrast that statement with the representation made to the Beech-Nut Packing Company by the Lorillard Company in the summer of 1915, wherein the Lorillard Company said to the Beech-Nut Packing Company, "We have used this squirrel trademark upon tobacco continuously—we and our predecessors—continuously since the year 1898, as shown by the records of our company." And what did their records show, if they had any? These men remembered and testified, and they were officers and employees of the Lorillard Company, they testified that that mark was absolutely discontinued for four years, both as to manufacture and sale, and the superintendent of their factory said that the manufacture of those goods was discontinued for probably six years

Now, all of this, as the case progresses, will be directed toward our proposition that that mark was abandoned; it was so held by the Patent Office, that it was abandoned in 1915. There was no continuity. Every act showed an intention to abandon. The intention to abandon can be read from that placard which is before the Court; looking at this label at the right, no one can conceive that it was not the intention to abandon whatever prestige attached after these years of disuse to that squirrel label, and to substitute for it the prestige of the similar Beech-Nut label. It isn't consonant with any intention or desire to continue with that old squirrel brand, to produce that oval trademark, so similar to the Beech-Nut trademark. A further point bearing upon abandonment is this: Your Honor, if a smoker, and if not, as a matter of general knowledge, will know that most of us are quite particular about the flavor of our tobacco. We like a certain cigarette or cigar and will walk two or three extra blocks to get it. And when we are accustomed to buy a brand and the flavor changes, we quite resent it. We don't consider it as the same goods any more. We look around for a different one and start over, buying something else we like. Now, in the case of this tobacco which had been manufactured under that squirrel mark, and of which the Lorillard Company claims their present goods are a continuation, that scrap tobacco that was made and put on the market under that squirrel label has never been made by the Lorillard Company since the year 1910 to this day. They have put out a different product under that label at the right hand of the card before your Honor, they put out a different mixture, as stated by their own superintendent of the factory where they made it. There was no continuity as to the product. They changed the flavor of the product, as will be brought to your Honor's attention. Several witnesses testified, the testimony is hardly necessary, to the fact that the preservation of the blend and the flavor—they testified rather indirectly—they say that everyone is particular. One man likes one flavor and another man another—that's the way they testified, which is, in effect, the same proposition that I advance, that it is important to preserve the continuity of the compound of tobacco. Otherwise, if you change it, one man being particular in liking this, and another liking that, their trade is lost. That is another matter to which we will call your Honor's attention as the case progresses upon this question of abandonment. The evidence which we shall produce will be directed to showing your Honor that that statement made by the Lorillard Company to the Beech-Nut Company in 1915 was an absolutely flat, intentional and fraudulent misrepresentation, wherein they stated to the Beech-Nut Packing Company, "We and our predecessors have used this mark continuously upon tobacco since the year 1898, as shown by our records."

Now, it is proved, beyond the possibility of dispute, that if they had looked at their records, and told us honestly what the records showed, they would have found and told us that it had been discontinued for four years. They would have found that the tobacco itself which had previously been made under that squirrel label had never again been made and is not being made today.

Therefore, the case takes on quite a different aspect from that which it seemed to have to the officials of the Beech-Nut Packing Company in 1915. These later developments have shown that the Lorillard Company had no rights, dating from 1898. Therefore, immediately after these facts developed in the Patent Office, this plaintiff came promptly before this Court and filed its bill, for the first time knowing that it had a right of action against the Lorillard Company upon this Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco.

Previous to the time of these proceedings in the Patent Office, plaintiff had been deliberately misled, led to believe that the Lorillard Company had an indefeasible right to this trademark on scrap tobacco since 1898. In the Patent Office they found that the Lorillard Company had abandoned the mark and that the Patent Office had so held. The Patent Office and the inquiry will come into your Honor's mind as to what they did then with that application—the Patent Office in matters of trademark registration acts under a very narrow and restrictive statute. Your Honor, undoubtedly, understands that the registration of a mark in the Patent Office confers no rights upon anyone. The rights, of course, are common law rights, and it is merely a question of registering so that an action can be brought in the United States Court even when there is not diversity of citizenship, and it enables a citizen of this country to register abroad. Many foreign countries won't register your trademark unless you register it in your own country. Now, in this matter of registration, the Patent Office, by statute, is directed to name certain classes of goods—to constitute certain classes of goods—I cannot accurately state the names of them, but illustratively, I can bring the point out—they have a class, I will say, of tobacco, a class of groceries, a class of hardware. Now, the law says that when a man applies for registration of a trademark he can have for one fee and upon one application registration for as many articles as are included in any one of those classes, but if he wants registration upon an article in another class, he must file another application and pay some more money. In the instant case the Patent Office simply took the ground that they were restricted on the question of registration by the fact that we had never used the mark on tobacco, or at least we had only used it on tobacco in 1919 for that formal sale, and the Lorillard Company had used it in 1915, and, therefore, they would not register it for us. The Patent Office held that they were precluded from going into these questions which we bring before the Court, that they had nothing to do except with the administrative execution of the law, and that was all there was to it. The Patent Office even intimated to us that we should take our grievance somewhere else, namely, to the United States Court, and so that was the way our registration proceedings in the Patent Office terminated, but they had served a purpose in bringing out the truth and removing that misrepresentation.

I stated to your Honor, I think, that it was immediately after the bringing out of these facts in the Patent Office that this pending suit was brought.

The Court: Is it your position that if there was no abandonment, you have no case?

Mr. Scott: No, not on scrap tobacco. And the only case that we conceivably could have would be, not upon the use of the word "Beech-Nut," which, of course, is the important thing, but it is conceivable that if it were worth while, we might have a case upon the use of the oval in connection with the use of the word "Beech-Nut." That is, that while there might not be a case upon the mere use of the word "Beech-Nut"—that they had a right to the use of that—they might not have had a right to use it in connection with our oval in a way such as to increase the confusion. But, broadly speaking, as to the important issue of the case, as to the word "Beech-Nut," if they had not abandoned it, we never could interfere with them in its use on the scrap tobacco, but it is not so clear to me that we might not have interfered with them on the cigarette, because that was going away from the precise article to which their title pertained, and it is not quite clear to me—

The Court: Chewing and smoking tobacco?

Mr. Scott: Yes, chewing and smoking tobacco. That while ordinarily the right of one company established in one of those articles inures to his benefit in the other, it may well be that in the special circumstances of this case it would not be so, because their right in the scrap tobacco was limited strictly to scrap tobacco by our general right. They had not put the brand on cigarettes until long after we, the Beech-Nut Company, had so expanded our general rights as to cause the public to believe that cigarettes, if produced, would be ours. They allowed our reputation to pre-empt that field before they went into it.

Now, to comment on the general situation a little as to what the evidence will bring out. During all of this period we contend that it was the privilege of the Beech-Nut Packing Company to go into the tobacco business if it wanted to, or to stay out if it wanted to. During the period, say, from 1910 on, after the business had grown big—I am more concerned with that period—after their reputation had grown to this wide extent—it was their privilege to go into the tobacco business, and to take the direct profit which they would get in the tobacco business, if they wanted to, or it was their privilege to stay out of the tobacco business and sacrifice those direct profits for the sake of avoiding that antagonism which they foresaw from that part of the community which is opposed to cigarettes and tobacco. They could do either one. It was a matter of business policy. As the testimony of Mr. Barbour will show, they saw plainly that cigarettes—tobacco—was a natural line of expansion for their business, and then he comments to the effect that I have explained, that the thing worked both ways, that there would be profit on the tobacco, but on the other hand there would be injury to the rest of the business. They had to choose between the two, and they chose keeping out of the tobacco business and concerned themselves with their general line of business. But what has happened now?

They stayed out of the tobacco business for the express purpose of avoiding this antagonism and injury, which the testimony will show your Honor is real and does exist. They stayed out of it for that purpose, they sacrificed the direct profits which they might have made from tobacco, and what have they accomplished? Nothing. They have not even kept clear of that criticism. The Lorillard Company has come in and taken the direct profits which they sacrificed and has imposed upon the Beech-Nut Packing Company the criticism of that part of the community which is opposed to tobacco or cigarettes, and there is also another part of the community which does not take such extreme views, but the testimony will show that there are some who have no objections to tobacco whatever but who criticize the Beech-Nut Company for putting out tobacco, because they don't think that is in the line of efficiency, putting out tobacco along with food products, and they criticized them on that ground.

So, we arrive at the question of damages in this case. Our prime purpose here is to protect our trademark, but we have to follow the law where it goes. We claim that we have an undeniable and indefeasible right to the protection of this trademark upon this record, as shown by the facts, and as supported by recent cases, some in this Circuit.

Now, the profits which the Lorillard Company has made out of scrap tobacco are profits which the Beech-Nut Company deliberately sacrificed for the purpose of avoiding antagonism. These profits the Lorillard Company has appropriated, and this antagonism the Lorillard Company has imposed upon the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Now, I think, your Honor, that with that outline we will be able to approach the case.

Mr. Milton: For the defendant, if your Honor please, appear Mr. Gifford, of the New York Bar, Mr. Cavanagh and Mr. Meyers, together with myself. Mr. Cavanagh will make the opening statement to your Honor.

Mr. Cavanagh: If your Honor please, I have been associated and connected with this Beech-Nut matter practically since its inception.

The Court: In 1870 or 1866?

Mr. Cavanagh: Since the inception of this quarrel, if I may call it that, and I expected in coming here today to ascertain finally what the plaintiff's position is in this case. I have listened very attentively to Mr. Scott's discussion and I must confess I am puzzled and confused. I don't know whether these food products people want to go into the tobacco business or, whether, as they stated, tobacco is such an instrument of evil that it would be detrimental to them, and therefore they want to stay out of it. Do they want to come in or do they want to stay out? So I am afraid that I will have to simply give a brief statement of the situation as I understand it from my intimate connection with this case.

I will try to avoid all argument and stick coldly to the facts.

As Mr. Scott has told you, the Beech-Nut Packing Company is in the food products business. If your Honor will glance at plaintiff's exhibit board, which has been stipulated in here, from 1891 down practically to date you will find that every single one of those products on that board relates to a food product, or it relates to an article that comes under the Pure Food and Drugs Act. There is not a single article on there that has the slightest thing to do with the tobacco industry, which is a class by itself.

Now, if your Honor please, this Lorillard Company, as you may perhaps well know, and which the record will show, we will prove has never been engaged in anything in its whole career but in the tobacco business, and the history of the Lorillard Company is somewhat of a romance.

It was established in 1760 by old P. Lorillard. It is 160 years old, it is the oldest one and the largest tobacco concern in the industry, as the testimony will show this concern, and in comparison with Beech-Nut I might interpolate here that you have gotten the impression perhaps that this Beech-Nut Company is an enormous concern and that everything in this whole Beech-Nut business, whether tobacco or food, was built up by its efforts. Let us look at the history of what the Lorillard Company is. It is a concern 162 or 163 years of age. Its tobacco products include some of the best known in the world, it has the Murad, the Mogul, the Egyptian Deity, the Helmar, the Egyptian Trophies and the Beech-Nut Cigarettes. It has the famous Climax Chewing Tobacco, it has the Sensation and numberless brands, and the famous Beech-Nut Scrap. It has, according to some of the testimony which will appear in this case, twenty-five branches in twelve different cities, including large branches right here in this district of New Jersey. It employes about 12,000 people, and it manufactures and sells, as the testimony will show, every possible tobacco product, except snuff. That is the kind of a concern that is putting out this Beech-Nut Scrap tobacco and the Beech-Nut cigarettes. Its whole life has been devoted to tobacco, as the record will show; it has nothing whatever to do with food products.

The scrap tobacco package that is in issue here (and I might say it is one of the inducing motives of the quarrel), which your Honor will see—that is a ten-cent package of tobacco (indicating). We propose to show, and the testimony indeed does show, because it is by stipulation and not denied, that at the time of the patent office litigation to which Mr. Scott referred, the Lorillard Company was selling of this ten-cent item $14,000,000 a year, or over 29,000,000 pounds, and that was exactly over $2,000,000, or approximately, I should say, $2,000,000 a year more than the total business of the Beech-Nut Packing Company in all its branches, the bacon, ham and eggs and what-not, the Beech-Nut gums, and matters of that sort. In that ten-cent package, without talking about the famous cigarettes, it was doing $14,000,000 worth of business a year.

The testimony will show that that was the outcome, not of any trespassing or traveling upon the reputation of a food concern, or a bacon concern, or a ginger pop concern, but it was on the reputation of that great Lorillard Company, with its great organization, its hundreds of states' salesmen, district salesmen, city salesmen, and subsalesmen, its whole force back of it. As witness after witness has and will testify, when a Lorillard man went with a new brand—for intance, Beech-Nut tobacco upon the market, and walked into a man's store, he didn't have to go in and say, "This is like the Beech-Nut tobacco," or "This is like the Beech-Nut food products." He went in, as the evidence will show, and said, "I am from P. Lorillard Company, the makers of the famous Moguls, the Helmars, and other brands; we are bringing out a new brand, it will sell like the others because it will sell on Lorillard's reputation," because as is the slogan used by several witnesses in this case, "Lorillard on tobacco is like sterling on silver." And that is the reputation Lorillard has, and that is the kind of concern they accuse of traveling on their bacon and eggs business.

Now, if your Honor please, to get to the history of this. As Mr. Scott has well stated the matter, the evidence will show and develop in this trial that the business of the Beech-Nut Packing Company from 1891, when it was the Imperial Company, down to the incorporation of the Beech-Nut Packing Company and for several years thereafter, was comparatively small. I think one witness testified during that period from 1899 to 1903, that they cured some hams, and that they cut wood in the winter. In any event, the testimony will show they had one small building out in Canajoharie, New York, where they carried on this business.

In 1896, down in Kentucky, there was a large tobacco concern by the name of Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company—

The Court: What years?

Mr. Cavanagh: 1896. This concern was putting out brands some of which are famous today, such as the Burr-Oak, the Three States Mixture, and others, as the evidence will show. In the Patent Office proceeding, to which Mr. Scott has referred, and the evidence of which is in this case, it is admitted, as a fact so far as the early development of this business goes, that with Weissinger there was a man named Somers. In 1896 this Five Brothers Tobacco, which is an exhibit in the Patent Office case, and which was known in those days as a screw cut, or thread cut, was on the market, and Harry Weissinger wanted something to compete with that Five Brothers tobacco, so he brought out a brand of tobacco called Beechnut. There is one of the original Weissinger Beech-Nut labels which this man Somers, who made up the formula for the original tobacco, so far as the blending mixture goes, produced, and it is in evidence in this case.

That was in 1896, and that Beechnut wrapper which you will see there of the Harry Weissinger Company was right in a package like this (indicating Five Brothers tobacco), but they found out, as the evidence will show, and does show, that because the Five Brothers was a union tobacco and this Beechnut tobacco was a non-union tobacco, the Weissinger thread cut, that it would not sell in the mining districts. So in 1897, or rather, the latter part of 1897—that is correct, in the latter part of 1897, Harry Weissinger brought out what is known as a chewing and smoking tobacco, and in this case you will find the expression "scrap" used very often. This is one of the original packages with Harry Weissinger's name on.

The Court: Is "scrap" used on that?

Mr. Cavanagh: It is was a scrap tobacco.

The Court: Does the word "scrap" appear there?

Mr. Cavanagh: No, it is called chewing and smoking.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Cavanagh: It says on it, "Superior quality, Havana cuttings," but they usually call that a scrap tobacco, it is in small pieces.

He brought out that tobacco in 1898, and it was sold as the evidence shows, and we have the original records of sales to Arbuckle, J. Orrick Co., Allen-Kirkpatrick Ewart Co., and others. This very package was brought in 1919, or at the time of the Patent Office case, from a man in Cumberland, Maryland, who still had it in stock, and it was purchased from J. C. Orrick & Sons, wholesale brokers. The Weissinger Beech-Nut tobacco was sold all through Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, and other places, according to Mr. Somers' testimony.

In 1903, or the latter part of 1902 or 1903, the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, as the record will show, was purchased by the Continental Tobacco Company, the Continental being a part at that time or one of the forerunners of the American Tobacco Company, and the brand after being put up by the Continental, as the record shows, for a short while, was transferred to Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company, of Middletown, Ohio.

If your Honor will please bear that name in mind—the record in this case shows it is quite important because matters start there.

The Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company was a subsidiary or one of the affiliated concerns of the American Tobacco Company, of what was commonly called the old combination, subsequently dissolved by the Supreme Court. The Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company continued to put out and sell this tobacco from 1904 until 1910. Now, litigation in connection with the dissolution of the old American Tobacco Company began about 1908, and it continued until 1911, when the latter part of the year the decree of the Court was made final, partitioning out the various companies, and by that decree this Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company, as we propose to show, was apportioned out to the P. Lorillard Company, together with all its capital stock and its property, its buildings, its trademarks, and its brands.

In the work of preparing this dissolution, apportioning this matter out and straightening out the mess in general, a list was prepared in 1911 going with the decree and carrying out the purpose of that decree, conveying the various brands of the Luhrmann & Wilbern Company over to the P. Lorillard Company, and upon that list, amongst the other brands, as we propose to show, was this Beechnut brand.

Now, your Honor will understand that the tobacco business is a very peculiar one. It has its rises and its falls, a brand comes up and a brand goes down, and it is necessary for the tobacco manufacturer to keep a constant watch on his market, to push his brand as much as he can and when the public taste changes from a sweet tobacco to a rough tobocca, and vice versa, for instance, he has got to watch that change in the market.

In those days there was a big brand made called "Honest"; it was a tremendous seller, and in proportion, as we propose to show, the sales were just as great—

The Court: The Honest Long Cut?

Mr. Cavanagh: The Honest Scrap, and this Honest Scrap was at that time the reigning king in the market, the same as this Beech-Nut scrap is today. It was sold by millions of pounds, and I think in facts and figures the record will show it was as large as this Beech-Nut. But, as in making the curve of a chart, it has a rise and then as the taste began to change, in tobacco, as in the case with all articles, and the sales began to drop, it became necessary to put up another brand. We propose to show by officials of the Lorillard Company that following their usual practice—and it is the practice of all tobacco men, they went to their reservoir of the brands that they used, their living brands, they went to their lists of brands which had been given to them and which were contained in that decree of the Court, or rather, were apportioned out to them by the decree of the Court, and in looking at the list of scrap tobaccos, they found certain of them were on the market, so they could not select those names, and they selected the Beech-Nut name because it was their own mark. I won't say select it, but simply put that mark on the goods, because it was their own mark. So we propose to show without any argument at this point there was never any abandonment of this mark, that this came from Luhrmann & Wilbern to the Lorillard Company and was used by them in conformity with the decree of that District Court following the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, dissolving that old combination.

So Lorillard then, in 1916, put out this brand, and they followed, as I have briefly touched upon, and as the evidence will show, they followed the usual procedure in what I might call, in the vulgar parlance of the day, of plugging all their brands with their enormous resources of their organization, and not paying any attention to any Beech-Nut food products.

On that brand the first year, I think the sales show that it ran about 1916 to 7,000,000 pounds and in 1919, at the time of the Patent Office litigation the sales amounted to 29,000,000 pounds with a value of over $14,000,000. So much for the history of the tobacco. Now, I think we had better at this time, as we perhaps should show, and in fact the Patent Office records of this case does show, how the present situation arose. In 1915, as Mr. Scott has stated, the Beech-Nut Packing Company knew that this Beech-Nut scrap was on the market, it was a big seller, so in June, 1915, they wrote to this Lorillard Company protesting. In order that there may be no sins of commission or omission, with your Honor's permission, I would like to read some of these letters, which both sides admit are genuine.

The Lorillard Company on September 15, 1915, wrote back explaining how they came to have the ownership of this mark, and at that time, September 15, 1915, they notified the Beech-Nut Packing Company that under the decree of the Circuit Court of the United States (this is quoting from the letter), for the Southern District of New York, the so-called tobacco combination, which included the American Tobacco Company, was split up. In this—

The Court: What page?

Mr. Cavanagh: On page ten, if your Honor please, the letter to Mr. Barbour.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Cavanagh: In the second paragraph.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Cavanagh: "In this disintegration proceeding the Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company, which had always been maintained as a separate entity, was acquired by P. Lorillard Company. In the meantime some of the brands formerly manufactured by the Weissinger Tobacco Company had been taken over and manufactured in the Luhrmann & Wilbern factory in Middletown, and after the acquisition by our company of the Luhrmann & Wilbern business, including these brands, we continued to operate it as a separate company until about two years ago, when we disssolved it, taking over all of the business and brands directly in our own name."

Now, that shows at least, and the record will, that in 1915 they were notified, the Beech-Nut Packing Company, this plaintiff, was notified of Lorillard's position. That matter was dropped, any discussion of the whole situation was dropped from 1915 until 1919.

Now, in the meantime, as this testimony shows, and as will develop in this trial, during those four years, Lorillard satisfied that this letter had been satisfactory was putting all its tremendous resources in the promotion of all that tobacco, and it grew by the millions of pounds until its business exceeded the Beech-Nut Packing Company's total business, and this Beech-Nut Packing Company stood by and let that business grow. We will show the enormous amount of money we invested in advertising, in machinery, in missionary crews, in the sales department and in all the methods that a great organization like the Lorillard Company uses in promoting the sales of its products; that this was all with the knowledge of the Beech-Nut Packing Company; that they stood by and let that business grow without any further protest until it exceeded their total business, this poor ten cent piece of scrap. That is all in the record.

Now, we will come down. Everything was slumbering peacefully, as the testimony shows, in 1919.

In 1916 (as I think some of the stipulations show), or thereabouts, I am not certain about the date, the Lorillard Company proposed to bring out a cigarette to follow in the footsteps of this Beech-Nut scrap, which was a great seller. We will show that that is common in the tobacco business, and your Honor knows one of the best examples of it is the Lucky Strike smoking tobacco and the Lucky Strike cigarette. So they proposed to use the same scheme, to have the Beech-Nut cigarette travel along on the reputation of the Beech-Nut Scrap, as a number of witnesses have testified, and as will appear in this case. The Beech-Nut Packing Company, my recollection is, in some way became acquainted with this fact that the Lorillard Company proposed to put out a cigarette and, as these letters will show, the first thing that Lorillard knew was that the Beech-Nut Packing Company was on the market or expected to come on the market with a cigarette. So the Lorillard Company wrote to the Beech-Nut Packing Company, and that letter, your Honor, is very interesting.

The Court: What page?

Mr. Cavanagh: On page 15.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Cavanagh: In that letter the Lorillard Company refers to the correspondence of four years ago about the Beech-Nut Scrap and then goes on to state, "On your part," I will quote from the letter, "there the matter was dropped, you having made no further reply or objection. On our part we have continued the manufacture and sale of tobacco products under the trademark 'Beech-Nut' until today it is one of the leading tobacco trademarks in this country.

"On or about the 17th of this month information came to us of small shipments to two jobbers in this locality of cigarettes bearing the trademark 'Beech-Nut' and your name, but manufactured by The American Tobacco Company. Our counsel immediately by phone took the matter up with Mr. Junius Parker, counsel for the Tobacco Company, and, on being told by Mr. Parker that the Tobacco Company did not claim any title to the trademark, but was manufacturing cigarettes under it for your account, our counsel asserted our ownership of the trademark for tobacco products and demanded that the Tobacco Company cease making these cigarettes. We now have Mr. Parker's letter dated June 25th, 1919, stating that the Tobacco Company has 'easily and definitely concluded' not to manufacture any tobacco products under the name 'Beech-Nut.' We do not enclose copy of this letter, as we take it for granted that the Tobacco Company has made you fully cognizant.

"We very much hope that further consideration will bring you to a like conclusion, as we must and do insist that you respect our rights and cease using 'Beech-Nut' as a trademark for cigarettes. You have never heretofore used this trademark for tobacco products. Indeed, you have never heretofore manufactured or sold any tobacco products, but always goods of an entirely different class. 'Beech-Nut' has been used by ourselves and our predecessors in title for many, many years as a trademark for tobacco products, and under numerous decisions this gives us ownership of the trademark 'Beech-Nut' for cigarettes."

So it was the Lorillard Company that went after the Beech-Nut Company to cease going into the tobacco business.

Now, Mr Scott has adverted to some negotiations that then took place, about the question of the character of the labels, and we will submit that those negotiations were directed to a question of some minor details of changes in labels, and as Mr. Scott has stated, the question came down to who should pay for the changes in the labels, the $10,000 worth approximately. But while the negotiations were still on the Beech-Nut Packing Company —I hardly know the expression to apply to the actions— without stating anything to Lorillard, put out these fake orders of cigarettes (as the Patent Office decision found it was not a genuine sale), and rushed into the Patent Office in the attempt to register that trademark for cigarettes, which of course is a tobacco product.

Now, the effect of such a registration, as your Honor is aware, is to give the Registrant prima facie evidence of ownership, that is, the right to exclude others, prima facie right, at least, and neither the Lorillard Company nor its counsel knew anything about that application for registration until it appeared in the "Official Gazette." The application for registration was filed about July, 1919, and in the meantime we had received or had, shortly after that time, a letter as the record shows, from the Beech-Nut Packing Company, which is very interesting. This was shortly after they filed this application for registration without our knowledge, and while these negotiations were going on. This letter is from B. Arkell, President of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, to Mr. Thomas J. Maloney, President of P. Lorillard Company, page 23, your Honor. He says:

"Dear Mr Maloney:

"I am enclosing letter addressed by our counsel, Mr. Offield, to my son, William Clark Ardell, in reference to the Beech-Nut Stogie Company, thinking that you would be interested in same."

On page 22 appears this letter, and these letters will give you a better idea than anything else of the situation.

"July 22nd, 1919. Mr. W. C. Arkell, care of Beech-Nut Packing Company, Canajoharie, New York. In re Beech-Nut Stogie Company.

"Dear Sir:

"In reply to your letter of June 10th, the fact that you were aware of the existence of the Beech-Nut Stogie Company and have actually filled their orders with your goods without making any complaint will, of course, have a bearing upon the question of damages in the event you sued them, but I doubt if it would have any bearing upon your right to stop the use by them of your mark. Of course, the time to have taken the matter up was upon the first shipment but that is now past and I think it would be a good idea to call this matter to the attention of the Lorillard Company and let them take steps against the Beech-Nut Stogie Company as they are in a much better position to do so than the Beech-Nut Packing Company."

That letter was forwarded to us for the purpose of bringing action against the Beech-Nut Stogie Company, and in that connection, and in rapidly passing, your Honor, the record shows that from 1915 on, and with the knowledge of this Beech-Nut Company, the Lorillard Company had stopped others or had caused others to stop putting tobacco products on the market under the name of Beech-Nut.

Now, we are down to the record in this Patent Office case. The testimony in this case is, and there are two volumes about that size (indicating)—the present action is practically a rehash or a continuation along practically the same lines of all that went on in the Patent Office. In other words, I think that this Court is getting installment No. 2 in this case. Testimony was taken, large briefs were filed, and the argument was had, and the decision which has been referred to in this case of the Examiner of Interferences—he held so far as the right to the word "Beech-Nut Tobacco" went, that tobacco was not in the same class of goods, was so radically and diametrically different from food products that there was absolutely no connection between them; and under the decisions in the cases, and under our American law here, and under the law of practically every country, that the Lorillard Company had the right to the mark, and the Beech-Nut Company did not, and therefore the Examiner of Interferences refused to register the mark for the Beech-Nut Packing Company. The Examiner of Interferences did hold, on reasoning which we think is erroneous, but that is neither here nor there, he held there was an abandonment of this earlier Beech-Nut brand, but his holding was that even our 1915 use gave us the right over anything the Beech-Nut Company ever had, because they were never in the tobacco business. The Beech-Nut Packing Company appealed that case and it went to the Commissioner of Patents. It was intended to be argued out on all points, but the Commissioner of Patents, finding at the start of the case, and the decision is recorded in the Commissioner's decisions for the year 1922, page 9, and the report of it I hold in my hand, he held that as the Beech-Nut Packing Company had never made any use of the mark, such as to entitled them to registration, and that nothing the Beech-Nut Packing Company ever had shown in their old trademark registration was such as to give them any right to register for tobacco, and he affirmed the decision of the lower court, or the Examiner of Interferences, and refused to pass on the other questions, such as questions of abandonment and the like.

I will read a short paragraph of that decision because of its continuity. This case is so heavy that we want the Court to get a bird's-eye view of it, if possible. The Commissioner in his decision said, "Applicant has established" (that is the Beech-Nut Packing Company), "that it was using Beech-Nut as a trademark for a large number of miscellaneous articles, saying: 'The Beech-Nut Company in using its own label on cigarettes was operating within an exclusive right it has always had; this being so, neither the extent nor the method of exploitation of cigarettes is of any legitimate interest to the opposer.'" Then the Commissioner said, "Applicant seems to argue that inasmuch as it was employing a trademark on one class of goods it was free at any time to employ that mark on another class of goods, and that in order to obtain registration in the second class of goods it was not necessary to carry on a business as to the second class of goods.

This argument is not supported by any cases I can find and does not seem sound. A trademark right grows only from use in a business, and the use of a mark in one business does not afford sufficient foundation for registration of the mark for another business."

So that decision affirmed the Examiner of Interferences, and we were through the Patent Office with two decisions in favor of P. Lorillard Company.

There still remained the step of an appeal to the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, but no such appeal was taken by the Beech-Nut Packing Company in the Patent Office case. The whole matter was dropped. They did not avail themselves of the right of appeal, and the adjudication of the Patent Office became final. Now, that brings us to this point, if your Honor please, and I can't stress it too much (as the record will show, and as it will develop in this case) of the radically different classes of business, I might say here and pick them off to save time, that in addition to that decision of the Patent Office in favor of Lorillard as to the different class of goods, that it has been stipulated in this case that tobacco does not come under the Pure Food & Drugs Act, tobacco for smoking and chewing, but that chewing gum does, and that tobacco comes under the Internal Revenue Law, but chewing gum does not. It has been held, as we will show and as appears, and I don't like to refer to decisions, but I will simply state briefly it has been held by the courts for years, that tobacco is not a food product, that it is a narcotic, that it is not taken into the stomach to build up the bodily system, but it is liable to be detrimental, if it has any effect at all. Those decisions were rendered in cases and they are referred to in the records, in cases in what I might call the Blue Law or Bluenose States, or whatever they are, where they tried to sell tobacco on Sundays along with drugs, foods condiments and other necessities, candies and confections, and all of those years the courts have said, "No, you can't sell it, tobacco is a luxury and not a necessity; it is not a food." That is the holding of the Courts.

Then, we have the official classification in the Patent Office, tobacco products are classified in Class 17 as "tobacco products," which includes smoking, chewing tobacco, cigarettes, cigars Tobacco has no genus; it is a thing by itself; you can't name any class it belongs to, because tobacco is tobacco. Food products are classified in the Patent Office, as we will show, under Class 46, "foods and ingredients of foods."

We will further show in this case that every famous tobacco mark has been registered, or practically every famous tobacco mark, or one that will occur offhand to you has been registered time and again for other articles.

We propose to show our own famous Climax tobacco has been registered over 100 times for foods and every staple article under the sun. The same with the Lucky Strike, the Omar—

The Court: Under what classification is chewing gum?

Mr. Cavanagh: Under Class 46, Foods and Ingredients of Foods. It comes under the Pure Food Law. The rulings have been to that effect, and there have been prosecutions in cases where chewing gum has not been what I might call up to standard under the Pure Food & Drug Act.

We propose to show in the case, as I have touched on, that no manufacturer of tobacco ever engaged in the manufacture of food, and no food manufacturer was ever known to engage in the manufacture of tobacco.

We propose further to show that the class of people that use scrap tobacco, chewing tobacco and usually cigarettes are entirely a different class; you don't find an eight-year-old child, as the record will show, or a woman, going in to buy Beech-Nut food products and coming out and coming down the street with a package of scrap tobacco; you don't find a woman or a child chewing scrap tobacco; it is used by grown-up, red-blooded men. There may be some men that use chewing gum steadily, perhaps to cover up something else. So that all the circumstances indicate that tobacco has nothing to do with food, the two lines are distinct, and one reason we propose to show (and this is going to be very important), by officials of the tobacco company, born and brought up in the business year in and year out, for over a generation, is that this tobacco industry is one of the most highly specialized and technical industries in the world. From the time that the tobacco is sown in the bed, the tender plants transferred to the field, from the time the tobacco is gathered up in the barns and treated, special processes, special machinery and special knowledge are required to successfully make any tobacco products, and a man has got to know that business as he has to know no other in the world. That is the reason, as the Lorillard Company (as mentioned by Mr. Scott), told the Beech-Nut Packing Company that it would be a detriment to the Lorillard Company to ever let the public know or get the idea that a food product concern making jellies and marmalades was making tobacco, because the situation in the two businesses is entirely different.

We propose to show also that in the world at large, in the stock market, tobacco is regarded as entirely different. Pick up the daily papers and you will see a list of stock, steel, oil and tobacco stock—

The Court: Tobacco is way up, I suppose. (Laughter.)

Mr. Cavanagh: So all those factors, court's classification, class of users, and everything else, go to show your Honor there is absolutely no connection between the tobacco and food. If upon attempt to stretch food products to cover tobacco—in doing that you are going to ask for the wreckage of the whole trademark system of this country, because the minute you do it every tobacco company that has a Climax or an Omar or a Mogul or an Egyptian Deity or a Helmar will go after all the other fellows using that name for other and different products and you will have confusion worse confounded.

We also want to briefly explain to your Honor in regard to these numerous depositions here. I feel we should apologize and, therefore, I am going to endeavor in the trial of this case and preparation of briefs to simply select a few examples. Mr. Scott has spoken about how they all show confusion. Well, we propose to show in this case that by their own witnesses, as the evidence will show, people were absolutely astounded that the Beech-Nut Packing Company should ever consider going into such a widely different line as tobacco, and one witness in particular, or one that I recall, was asked, "Don't you think they are the same line business?" He said, "I consider them diametrically opposite. What do you take me for, a fool?" "You can get along," and I am speaking extemporaneously on this point—"You can get along without your tobacco, you do in the hospitals and jails, but you can't get along without your baked beans, and I am surprised the Beech-Nut Packing Company ever went into such a diametrically opposite line of business."

Mr. Gifford: If your Honor please, I would beg the privilege of reading another portion of this letter that Mr. Cavanagh has not read, apropos of the charge of our adversaries that the Lorillard Company suppressed anything.

The Court: What page is that?

Mr. Gifford: On page 10. In the first letter that the Lorillard Company wrote they stated in a general way that this company and its predecessors in ownership of this brand have used it continuously since prior to 1898, as shown by the records in the office. Now, that was true, because although there were not orders for it at a certain time, in that period, they were always ready to supply any orders that were received, but the correspondence on that subject did not stop there. In the letter from the Packing Company, on page 8, they asked for a bill of particulars in substance, of what the Lorillard Company professed to have. They said:

"We will greatly appreciate it if you will send us samples of your product showing the manner of use of the word 'Beech-Nut' since the year 1898, copies of advertisements or of letterheads showing your use of this name. We trust you will consider this a fair request as we would like to reach a prompt and friendly termination of the correspondence on this subject."

Now, did the Lorillard suppress anything? In the letter of September 15, 1915, commencing on page 10, the first paragraph is as follows:

"I have been able to locate some old price lists which contain our Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, and enclose them herein. I am also sending you an old package showing the use of the name 'Beech-Nut' and our present package."

There they furnished them with a price list, the old package and the new package. Now follow two paragraphs as to the chain of title by which this thing came down to them, and then they continue, on page 11:

"I give you this history so that you may understand the various price lists in the name of Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company and the package in the name of Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company. I do not know the exact date of the old package, as the stamp is not legible, but it was prior to 1903.

"The price lists that I send you are dated January 2, 1904; May 6, 1907; July 1, 1910, and November 3, 1910."

Now, that was the evidence that they had. They turned it over to the Beech-Nut Company, and they made a clean breast of the whole matter, and that evidence will be repeated or has been repeated on the trial, or in the testimony taken by a commissioner.

Now, then, they go on to say, and this is a disclosure of the case that we made here, practically, for you can take this letter and you can see the defense to this suit at the present time—they say:

"It is difficult for me to see how any one can claim that there is any similarity in our products and yours, or in your label and ours, other than the name 'Beech-Nut.' Your claim that we would not have the right to use the name 'Beech-Nut' on tobacco products must find its basis in the idea that you can appropriate the name 'Beech-Nut' for all products of whatever character.

"That the law does not permit of such a claim is elementary. If your claim were maintainable, then the Lion Brewery in New York could enjoin the manufacture of Lion brand collars, or vice versa. Suppose that the J. B. Williams Company should tomorrow put out a new brand of shaving soap, called 'Beech-Nut.' Do you argue that you could stop it because you have first used the name on hams and bacons? It seems to me that your argument must lead to this conclusion. The law of unfair competition, so far as it assumes to protect the public, assumes to protect the purchaser of average intelligence. It is difficult to believe that a person of average intelligence who enters a store for the purpose of buying 'Beech-Nut' hams or bacon could be deceived into thinking he was getting either if he were handed a package of 'Beech-Nut' chewing tobacco, or that the 'Beech-Nut' chewing tobacco was manufactured by the manufacturer of the hams and bacon. It is no more the custom in this country for a packer to manufacture chewing tobacco than it is for a manufacturer of beer to manufacture collars, and the purchaser of average intelligence perfectly well knows this."

Now, they go on very much to the same effect and quote, even cite cases, and a text book on the subject, so that the Lorillard Company instead of suppressing anything, here in 1915, made a clean breast of the whole matter, and then the Beech-Nut Company came back with this letter, "Your letter is a very interesting one, and before giving a definite reply to same, desire to review the matter as presented by you so that we can give you an intelligent reply." They never did reply. This letter was the end of the correspondence in 1915, until it was resumed again way on in 1919, and this letter of 1915 continued:

"At this time, however, we may express our agreement with you that the name Lorillard carries with it a vast amount of good will and unquestionably a guarantee of excellence. So does the name 'Beech-Nut Packing Co.' and we take the view that the increase in sales of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is due to the exploitation of the name 'Beech-Nut' with the oval label, and we cannot help but assume that the general impression is that these goods are manufactured by this Company rather than by Lorillard, at least to a considerable degree, for since writing you last we have another inquiry," and so on.

What I read this for is to refute any impression that your Honor may have that there was any suppression or attempt to suppress the situation on the part of Lorillard. They made a clean breast of it, and when the correspondence stopped there with this letter of the Beech-Nut Company the Lorillard was permitted to build up this enormous business in the manufacture of this Beech-Nut chewing tobacco, which they now attack as an infringement, and which we say they are practically estopped from attacking by reason of the attitude that was assumed in that correspondence.

Mr. Scott: Do I understand the opening statements are concluded?

Mr. Cavanagh: Yes, sir.

Mr. Scott: We didn't anticipate having time for witnesses this morning, but the testimony of a great many of these witnesses which was taken by deposition we wish to present to your Honor, and we can very probably use the remaining part of this session to permit the reading of some of these depositions.

The Court: Do you intend to read all the depositions?

Mr. Scott: No. I have prepared, your Honor, in this pamphlet extracts for the purpose of relieving us from reading this big record, and I thought that possibly it would be of assistance to the Court if I have a copy of this bound up for the Court, containing largely the parts of the testimony, maybe not all of it, that we rely upon, and I can furnish the other side with a copy, and that would relieve us all of a great deal of the burden imposed by that big record.

The Court: How much reading have you got?

Mr. Scott: Well, I could spend an hour or two very profitably presenting this testimony from these depositions.

The Court: You won't have any witnesses here today?

Mr. Scott: Pardon me one moment. (After consultation): About three o'clock was fixed for the earliest witness. There is a great deal of matter which we will have to get before the Court at sometime in the case, and so I would suggest if it is agreeable to the Court that we use this time until we get our witnesses to present some of this testimony which we have here.

(An adjournment was thereupon taken until 1:45 P. M.)

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Mr. Gifford: If your Honor please, I think that we shall object to the other side reading selected excerpts from the depositions. If they want to read particular depositions, I suppose they have a right to do so, but I don't think they have a right to read a portion of the deposition, without reading the whole of it. If they should do so and gain the benefit that I suppose they desire to gain, it would necessitate our reading the whole deposition afterwards, perhaps. It does not seem to me that that is the proper method of procedure. It is, of course, proper to read portions of the depositions in the summing up of the case, but not in presenting the evidence, it seems to me.

Mr. Scott: Then I will await the Court's pleasure on that.

The Court: Why is it necessary to read the depositions at all? I will have to read them all. The fact of your reading them won't help me much. I can't remember them all.

Mr. Scott: No, but presenting these depositions at this time gives more continuity to the whole case.

The Court: Have you abbreviated them very much?

Mr. Scott: I have not paraphrased them a particle. Simply omitted formal questions. I have left out the abundance of questions which are sometimes asked in a vain effort to get nothing; I have left out those, and I have simply copied out, as I conceived the meat of these depositions.

The Court: Well, counsel objects, and I suppose he is entitled to insist that they be read in their entirety or not at all. I am not very much in favor of reading a lot of depositions. It will take two or three days of reading.

Mr. Scott: You would prefer excerpts to be presented as the argument proceeds?

The Court: In the oral argument you are entitled to do that.

Mr. Scott: That would be the natural order. I am only suggesting this as a makeshift to meet the delay in getting our witnesses. That was the only thing that prompted me to suggest it at all. It would have been more fortunate if we had come to that understanding in the morning.

The Court: How many witnesses have you altogether?

Mr. Scott: Probably eight or ten of them.

The Court: And the other side? Have you any idea?

Mr. Cavanagh: We expect to have about seven or eight, if your Honor please.

Mr. Scott: I don't suggest that with any other idea than to fill up this little time. I think it is much the best order that the Court suggests.

The Court: Well, I am willing to wait around for awhile until your witnesses come.

Mr. Scott: Very well.

The Court: They will be here shortly?

Mr. Scott: I hope to have one here before three o'clock.

Mr. Gifford. I might further say, if your Honor please, that defendant makes the general objection to so much of the commission testimony of the plaintiff as is hearsay and incompetent. I don't think it is necessary to go into that specifically. I think it is sufficient to make the general objection.

The Court: I suppose the objection appears through the record?

Mr. Gifford: No. I understand it is proper practice to reserve objections until the depositions are read and since they are not to be read, the only thing I can do is make the general objection, simply because we don't wish to appear as acquiescing in the admission of hearsay or other incompetent evidence.

Mr. Bulkley: That raises the question, your Honor, as to whether my brother Gifford is right in his proposition as to when the objection should or must be made.

The Court: I am not going to rule on that. Some questions may be relevant, some irrelevant. I cannot tell unless my attention is called to each particular question.

Mr. Bulkley: We would like to be heard as to whether they are too late in making the objection. We think they are.

The Court: You may note a general objection to hearsay testimony. I will overrule it.

Mr. Scott: In that connection, your Honor, this testimony, probably, that Mr. Gifford has in mind is of these witnesses, several hundred on both sides, more upon defendant's side than upon plaintiff's, who were retail dealers, and questions of this nature were asked, almost in the same words, of witness after witness, running into the hundreds: "Did you ever hear your customers make any comments which led you to believe or gave you the impression that those customers were under the impression or belief that the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco or the Beech-Nut cigarettes were the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?" That is the question undoubtedly that runs in Mr. Gifford's mind in making this objection. Now, that question is addressed in about that form to every one of defendant's witnesses, and of course, if an objection is to be entered, we will enter one simply to save our rights, and I will therefore make this objection here and now to that part of defendant's testimony which consists of hearsay, the objection being general in form, as was the one made on behalf of defendant, and the objection being made on behalf of plaintiff merely to save its rights and to ensure equal treatment in the disposition of the testimony of the two parties. And I think it might be profitable, as the question will occur to your Honor in reading this record, to discuss that matter to some extent, as to the propriety of those questions. We have assumed all through this case that no objection was to be made, and during the taking of plaintiff's depositions no objection was entered, and then defendant proceeded with about two or three times as many witnesses as plaintiff examined, and he asks precisely the same question, and we, in turn, did not object.

The question at issue here, as it appealed to us while we were taking the depositions, is analogous to a question of reputation—what is thought of a man, not what is the man's character or what is the man's conduct or acts specifically, but what is his reputation, what do people think about him. And analogously, we have here a question what do people think about this trademark, and we without any investigation, none appearing necessary, without any investigation of the law—each party seeming to act upon that theory—these depositions were taken in that form, and it does seem to me by analogy that—without the ability at this moment to cite cases—this should be exempted out of the hearsay rule upon the same theory that testimony about a man's reputation is. It is entirely a question of the state of the public mind.

The Court: I overruled the objection made by the defendant. Do you want me to change it.

Mr. Scott: Well, if your Honor is disposed to overrule it, I will withdraw mine.

The Court: I will overrule his objection. If you want me to overrule yours and give you the same standing—

Mr. Scott: We will all be happy. We expect a witness in a few moments. I will utilize those few moments by reading the deposition of a witness for the plaintiff, Jefferson D. Hayden, which appears at page 754 of the plaintiff's record.

(Mr. Scott reads deposition.)

Mr. Scott: That deposition is representative of a great many. That was a dealer. Now, here is the testimony of a butcher in Chicago, a man who likes to chew tobacco. A. V. Bobb of Chicago. His deposition is at page 473. I think the first part of it is of interest.

(Mr. Scott reads deposition.)

Mr. Scott: At page 550 of plaintiff's record, there appears the deposition of Carl W. Nemetz, of Milwaukee.

(Mr. Scott reads deposition.)

Mr. Scott: On page 437, deposition of Mr. Arthur E. Fechter, of Chicago.

(Mr. Scott reads deposition.)

Mr. Scott: On page 617 is an example of a witness who was under deception, I think, for six years, if I remember right.

(Mr. Scott reads deposition of Oscar Joseph, of Toledo, Ohio.)

Mr. Scott: Deposition of Adam Sattig, Milford, Connecticut, page 291. He brings in a new element into the situation.

(Mr. Scott reads deposition.)

Mr. Scott: And here follows a long dispute of counsel on the record which I take it my opponents will excuse me from reading. A question was objected to as immaterial and, after an exchange of remarks, the deposition closed.

JOHN M. HATTER, called as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Bulkley.

Q. Where do you live?

A. Canajoharie, New York.

Q. By whom are you employed?

A. Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Q. How long have you been employed by that company?

A. Four years the 2nd day of May, 1924.

Q. Tell us briefly what the general nature of your duties is.

A. Partially my duties are in the sales department, but mostly in guide work, I have charge of a number of the guides in the summer time, more in the summer time than in the winter.

Q. About how many in the summer?

A. Probably six or eight in the summer time, and sometimes more. We take some out of the various offices at times so we can get them through.

Q. Where is the factory located with reference to the Mohawk River?

A. Well, the plant itself lays on the south side of the Mohawk River, what is now termed the Barge Canal.

Q. What road is on the opposite or north side?

A. The road leading directly from Albany to Utica, it is right on the straight road.

Q. Is that a main thoroughfare over which the automobilists pass back and forth?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Is the Beech-Nut plant in sight of these automobilists who are passing up and down that road?

A. Yes, sir; the Beech-Nut is, and it has a big sign on the plant, "Beech-Nut Packing Company."

Q. Have you got a little cottage quite adjacent to that road?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In which are displayed the Beech-Nut products?

A. Right along that road, it is a very short ways from the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Q. It is on the north side of the river?

A. It is on the north side of the river? Yes, sir.

Q. And adjacent to this main thoroughfare?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is there displayed to the automobilists that causes them to stop and visit this place, an invitation, is there?

A. Yes, sir; there is a sign across the road that reads, "Welcome; The Beech-Nut welcomes you," or something to that effect, asking them to stop, and—

Q. Who is in attendance in this cottage?

A. We have a couple of young ladies in there.

Q. What do they do?

A. There duties are to display and show the people when they come in, the various products that we put out, and explain to them in a measure how they are put up, and the way they are put up, and we have them there also to sell, if they want to buy anything.

Q Do they seek to induce the people to go across the river and visit the plant?

A. Yes, sir; they extend them that invitation to go across the river.

Q. Urge them to go?

A. Urge them to go; yes, sir; they do urge them to go.

Q. Now, when they come over there on the south side and into the factory, what happens?

A. They are, well, when they first come in they approach the telephone desk, what we term the telephone desk or information bureau.

Q. And then they get one of you as a guide?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then what do you do?

A. We take them through the plant and show them through.

Q. I wish you would just tell us briefly, I don't want to have you go into too much detail, what do you show them and what do you say to them, particularly in connection with sanitary conditions and cleanliness and quality? What do you show to them and what do you say to them—and before I get to that, let me ask you a question: Do you know whether the company advertises in advertisements and general distribution of advertising matter requests that people stop there?

A. Yes, sir; people.

Q. I have mixed that up with my other question. Tell us just what you inform these people as you take them through, what you show them and what you sell them, particularly in connection with quality of the goods being made and the cleanly sanitary conditions under which they are made and packed for distribution.

A. The first thing we do, we take them into the bacon department, the bacon department where the bacon is smoked. We show them the smoking process and we impress on them the fact that we use hard wood.

Mr. Milton: I move to strike that out, if your Honor please.

The Court: Strike that out, what you impress upon them. Tell us just what you say to them.

Q. You said impress upon them, they asked you to tell what you told them which created that impression.

A. I tell them that the wood we use is hard wood, of beech, hickory and maple, it gives a better flavor than some of the other woods to the bacon, and from there we tell them that the bacon is in there five days until it is thoroughly smoked through. From there we take them to the skinning room where the backs are skinned off; from there we take them to the coolers.

Q. That is, you are showing this all to these people?

A. Just as I am showing a party through the plant.

Q. And telling them these things which you are relating?

A. Yes. We explain to them what the cooling process is —as we take them into the room where the meat is cut, the bacons are cut, we explain to them we have to chill that thoroughly, as these knives go through there at 540 slices a minute, they cut 540 slices a minute. If this was not chilled through they would not cut as evenly and smoothly. Let's see. From there we take them over to where it is packed in the boxes and in the glass and in the meantime we tell them that to insure cleanliness in every way, as far as possible, we have a manicurist there that is paid by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, and every one of the young ladies or young men who comes in contact with the products, any of the products that we put out, must have their finger nails manicured twice a week, and the young lady that attends to the manicuring also sees that everyone of those have their finger nails manicured twice each week.

Then we take them up into the gum wrapping, where the gum is wrapped. We show them the machines that wrap the gum, we explain how the gum is wrapped. From there we take them over to the place where the chicle is. We explain to them that that is the basis of all Beech-Nut gum, and we also explain to them that the dirt is all extracted from the chicle.

Q. Do you explain to them how it is extracted?

A. Yes, we explain—

Q. Tell us what you tell them.

A. Well, we—let's see—we tell them that we are the only manufacturers that remove the dirt from the chicle, and that is worked by means of sieves through a hair, you are hardly able to put a hair through, that the chicle is all squeezed through that and the dirt is left on the outside, and these combs come down and brush it off, all the dirt, and then we take them down into the hard candy department, and we show them the young men and young ladies all dressed in their white hats and their white coats and aprons, and we tell them that we do up in our own laundries anywhere from forty to fifty thousand pieces of laundry a week.

Q. For how many people?

A. That is between, well, approximately 750 people, and we do up 3,500 towels approximately every day, every working day, and that these changes must be made twice each week, Mondays and Thursdays, the clean aprons and overalls, the coats and pants, they must be changed twice each week.

And after looking that over we show them how the candy is poured, how clean the tables are, after each batch, the tables are cleaned after each batch, so when the next batch comes on there is no contamination whatever, and from then on through to the finish where the hard candies are sugared and wrapped.

And from there we go over into the peanut butter department, we stop at the top floor and we don't allow anyone going through to touch their hands on any of the products whatever, that is, dip in. For instance, we are going through the peanut department, some people might want to dip in and taste the peanuts; we don't allow that at all, and we tell them that to keep things in a sanitary condition we would rather not have them do that.

Q. What do these people see while being told, in connection with sanitary conditions, cleanliness?

Mr. Milton: How can this witness answer that question? It is objected to. He must place himself in their position.

The Court: Yes, reframe the question.

Mr. Bulkley: Question withdrawn.

Q. I interrupted you for the moment there.

Mr. Bulkley: Won't you read the last of the answer?

(Answer repeated by the stenographer.)

A. That was the finish of that.

Q. The conclusion of that?

A. Yes.

Q. What is done in and about the factory to maintain and bring about the cleanliness and sanitation?

A. Well, we have men there especially to clean up at all times of the day, and we have men there at night that do nothing but clean up. The machines are all cleaned up and thoroughly cleansed off after they are used. After they quit work at night the machines are all cleaned up, and not only the bacon machines but every one of the machines are thoroughly scoured with brushes, warm water.

Q. How about the macaroni department, do you take them through there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, what do you show them there, what do you tell them?

A. We show them the large mixer that mixes the dough and the water together, the flour rather, I should say, the flour and the water together, and slid down this board. There is another thing, this board is cleaned every time a batch comes down through it, the board is practically scoured, so that there will be no contamination on the board when the dough comes down into the big kneaders. After each part has come out of the kneaders, it is placed into a cylinder and from that cylinder there is a die underneath from which the macaroni is pressed out.

Mr. Milton: Now, Mr. Witness, are you describing what you know about this business, or are you telling us what you show and tell these people—which are you doing?

Mr. Bulkley: Answer his question.

The Witness: That is what we explain to the people as we take them through.

Mr. Milton: All right, I have no objection to it.

A. (Continuing.) And from there we show them the young men that handle the macaroni, place it over the sticks for the drying purposes, after which they are taken down into the dry room and dried. Then from there we take them downstairs and show them how it is sawed up in lengths, uniform lengths, and the short ends are placed in a barrel and sold in bulk, and the uniform lengths are taken out, wrapped in paper, and placed in boxes for sale.

Q. Now, did I understand you to say that during the summer time you had at least six men who were constantly and unremittingly engaged in taking people through?

A. Yes, sir; and sometimes more.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

Mr. Milton: No questions.

WILLIAM H. MAICHLE, called as a witness in behalf of the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Johnson.

Q. What is your name, please?

A. William H. Maichle, M-a-i-c-h-l-e.

Q. What is your age, please?

A. Forty years old.

Q. Residence?

A. East Orange, New Jersey.

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Maichle?

A. I am division manager for the Beech-Nut Packing Company in what is known as the Greater New York division.

Q. What is your business address?

A. 29 Ninth avenue, New York City.

Q. How long have you been with the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Since May, 1905.

Q. How many years is that?

A. Going on to nineteen years.

Q. What are your duties as District Manager for Greater New York?

A. Directing sales and the efforts of the retail and jobbing salesmen in the Greater New York territory.

Q. Do you go about among the trade yourself?

A. I do.

Q. What class of trade do you visit?

A. Wholesale, retail, both grocery and confectionery and tobacco, delicatessen stores, in fact, all wholesale and retail dealers handling food products or confectionery products.

Q. About how many dealers have you in the Greater New York district?

A. It is estimated that there are 18,000 retail grocers in the Greater New York district, and we aim to cover all of them, and there are several thousand retail confectionery, cigar and other stores that we aim to cover besides the wholesale grocery and wholesale confectionery and wholesale tobacco people.

Q. Do you visit a large percentage of those, of such dealers yourself?

A. I visit a great many, I am out a good portion of the time with the men, and also alone on the trade.

Q. To what extent do these various classes of dealers that you have mentioned handle both tobacco products, such as the Beech-Nut cigarettes and scrap tobacco, and the products put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

Mr. Milton: You don't mean that this witness is expected now to testify to what percentage of 18,000 retail grocers, whom he may not possibly have visited—

Q. To what extent, in your observations?

(Question repeated as follows:)

Q. To what extent, in your observation, do these various classes of dealers that you have mentioned handle both tobacco products, such as the Beech-Nut cigarettes and scrap tobacco, and the products put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. I would say that a great majority of them, the retail grocers whom I have visited, and all of the—in fact, all of the cigar and tobacco dealers and news stands, wholesale grocers, and I believe that is all, news stands.

Q. How about the drug stores that you have mentioned?

A. Well, the drug stores also handle both lines, our confectionery products and tobacco products.

Q. I show you a package of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco which is an exhibit in this case. Have you ever seen packages of this tobacco before?

A. I have (indicating).

Q. Have you seen it for sale in your district?

A. I have, yes.

Q. For about how long?

A. I should say for three or four years.

Q. As you would go about among the trade, have you heard any inquiries, comments or remarks as to the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and who makes it?

Mr. Milton: Will you answer that yes or no, Mr. Witness, so that I may object to what I assume is coming next.

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Have you heard such inquiries, remarks and comments frequently?

A. Very frequently.

Q. And during what period of time?

A. For all the time I have known the tobacco, three or four years.

Q. And up to how recently?

A. Last week.

Q. What was the nature of such inquiries, comments and remarks?

Mr. Milton: Objected to, sir.

The Court: I sustain that objection.

The Witness: What is that?

The Court: I sustained that objection.

Mr. Milton: The Court means you can't answer that question.

Q. Can you give any particular instance of such inquiries, comments and remarks?

Mr. Milton: Same objection.

The Court: Answer that yes or no.

A. Yes.

Q. Will you please describe briefly such instances as you can remember where you can give the name and place and approximate date of such inquiries, comments and remarks?

Mr. Milton: Objected to on the ground it is obviously hearsay.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

Q. Will you please give the names of such parties who have made inquiries, comments and remarks upon this subject?

Mr. Milton: Objected to.

The Court: I will permit that, just the names.

A. Mr. Wyckoff of Pease & Elliman, Real Estate Corporation in New York City. Others?

Q. Any others?

A. The buyer for R. C. Williams Wholesale Grocery Company in New York City; Mr. Meyer, the promoter for the International Tobacco Shows, that is all I can recall right now, sir.

Q. How recently have you heard such inquiries or comments from the parties you have named?

A. Mr. Meyer's comments were made last week. R. C. Williams & Company's comments were made, I should say, five or six weeks ago. Mr. Wyckoff's remarks were made six months ago.

Q Have you seen the Beech-Nut cigarettes in your district?

A. I have.

Q. Have you heard such inquiries, remarks and comments about the Beech-Nut cigarettes and who makes them?

A. A great many of them.

Q. About how many could you say?

A. I should say hundreds.

Q. And how frequently?

A. At times more frequently than others, sometimes every day, and again once in a month or so, all depending on how often I get out in the trade with the salesmen.

Q. What do you tell these people who ask you these questions and make such remarks?

Mr. Milton: Objected to.

The Court: Sustain the objection.

Q. Have you received orders for either Beech-Nut scrap tobacco or Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. I have.

Q. How have you received such orders?

A. Largely over the telephone—through the mail.

Q. And what do you tell parties who order Beech-Nut scrap tobacco and cigarettes from you?

Mr. Milton: That is objected to.

The Court: Well, that might be permitted in another form, what his answer has been where an order has come in through the mail. There is one way of proving that, I suppose. You received some orders through the mail; there have been some answers—

Mr. Johnson: Your Honor, we have an exhibit book with something like forty or fifty such orders.

The Court: In the case now?

Mr. Johnson: One of the plaintiff's exhibits, admitted by stipulation.

The Court: Are they in the case now?

Mr. Johnson: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: What is the use of bothering about it?

Q. During the eighteen or nineteen years that you have been with the Beech-Nut Packing Company, have you been selling products put out under labels such as you see on this board, marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 28?

A. I have.

Q. Right from the beginning of the time that you entered the employ of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. I have, yes, sir.

Q. In the course of your duties, have you handled the price lists issued by the Beech-Nut Packing Company at frequent intervals?

A. I have; I have handled it continually.

Q. Are you familiar with those price lists?

A. I am very familiar.

Q. Have you in your possession a set of such price lists for some years back?

A. I have.

Q. For what period of years have you a set of such price lists?

A. I have a set of price lists dating from 1902, three years previous to my employment.

Q. And did you handle price lists during any of the period before you entered the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. I have; yes, sir, in the capacity of—

Q. Explain how that was.

A. In the capacity of grocery clerk in retail grocery store, where I had charge of the purchasing.

Q. At the request of plaintiff's counsel, have you prepared a summary of the Beech-Nut Packing Company products which you have taken from these price lists, putting it in the form of a list of the products put out for each year?

A. I have, yes, sir.

Q. Have you compared this summary that you have made up with the summary of products already in this case in the Patent Office record, and please state in what manner this summary of yours differs from the one already in the case?

A. The Patent Office list, I believe—shall I go on and answer that question?

Mr. Milton: I beg your pardon, Mr. Maichle, if you will wait just a second. Mr. Cavanagh says this is quite all right.

Mr. Johnson: This summary of products put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, identified by this witness is offered in evidence in this case as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 35.

(Received in evidence and marked Exhibit P. 35.)

Q. As you have gone your rounds, Mr. Maichle, have you found it at any time necessary to explain that Beech-Nut scrap tobacco and Beech-Nut cigarettes are not made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

Mr. Milton: Objected to on two grounds. First because it is leading, and secondly, I think, it requires a hearsay answer—one that would not be binding upon us, rather—incompetent.

The Court: I will permit this. I don't think it makes much difference.

A. I have a great many times.

Q. And how recently?

A. Last week.

Q. That is all.

(No cross examination.)

LAWRENCE R. ATKINSON, JR., called and sworn on behalf of the plaintiff, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Johnson.

Q. What is your age, Mr. Atkinson?

A. Thirty-one.

Q. Residence?

A. Canajoharie, New York.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am plant inspector of the Beech-Nut Packing Company and also conduct special investigations occasionally.

Q. How long have you been with the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Going on four years.

Q. What are your duties as plant inspector, Mr. Atkinson?

A. I inspect the plant for safety and fire hazards, and it is my duty to see that the plant is kept in a clean and sanitary condition.

Q. Do you have occasion to go about the plant in carrying out your duties?

A. Yes.

Q. How often?

A. Each day I cover all parts of the plant.

Q. What do you observe, as you make your rounds in the plant?

A. I observe that—well, the plant is in an A-1 condition as far as cleanliness and sanitation is concerned. We try to keep it as safe and fireproof as possible.

Q. What result do you find in regard to the condition that you speak of, as you go through the plant? What result is reached?

A. Well, the result reached? I don't just understand your question.

Mr. Milton: You can lead him on it if you want, Mr. Johnson, I have no objection.

Q. What do you find the conditions to be in the plant?

Mr. Milton: He means from the standpoint of cleanliness and hygiene, doesn't he, and sanitation?

Mr. Johnson: That is it.

A. I find it to be in the best possible condition it can be.

Q. What is it your duty to carry out in those regards?

A. It is my duty to check up each department and see that the cleaners are cleaning thoroughly and not overlooking any corners or machinery.

Q. What degree of success do you have?

A. We have the utmost degree of success.

Q. What do you aim for?

A. Absolute cleanliness and sanitation.

Q. Can you give some detail which it has been your opportunity to observe in the extreme degree to which the Beech-Nut Company goes to ensure cleanliness?

A. Yes. For instance, every night there is a force of night cleaners, and they go to the pains of disassembling all machines that handle food products, so that they can thoroughly clean the inaccessible parts. These machines are assembled again when they are finished.

Q. Is that done every night?

A. That is done nightly.

The Court: Is there a government inspection there?

The Witness: Not for cleanliness.

The Court: What for?

The Witness: Why, the Labor Board inspects for—well, they do for sanitary conditions, safety, and fire inspection.

The Court: You comply with all governmental requirements, I suppose?

The Witness: Yes.

Q. In your employment with the Beech-Nut Packing Company, have you had any occasion to make surveys of different parts of the country for the company?

A. Yes.

Q. Has that taken you through great portions of the United States?

A. It has, through the eastern part and southern.

Q. Have you visited the trade of those portions of the United States?

A. Yes.

Q. What kinds of stores have you visited?

A. Well, I have visited practically all kinds of wholesale and retail grocery, drug and tobacco, and then little cigar stands, that is, subway stands, places like that.

Q. Have you visited all classes of stores, such as you have listed in these various parts of the country?

A. Practically.

Q. To what extent have you found these stores keeping both tobacco products, such as the Beech-Nut cigarettes and scrap tobacco, and such products as are put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Well, I would say in the grocery stores that through the Middle West and South and many places through Pennsylvania, I would say most of the grocery stores, especially the neighborhood grocer, was carrying tobacco products, also drug stores.

Q. Have you found any large proportion of all kinds of stores that you have mentioned, carrying both products?

A. Yes, I would say eighty per cent.

Q. Have you ever been in Milwaukee, Mr. Atkinson?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know a man named William Goldstein in Milwaukee?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the business of William Goldstein that you have met in Milwaukee?

A. He told me he was division manager for P. Lorillard & Company in Wisconsin.

Mr. Milton: I move to strike it out.

The Court: Do you know what his business was?

The Witness: I know what he told me.

The Court: I will let that stand.

Q. In whose employ was he, Mr. Atkinson?

A. P. Lorillard & Company's.

Q. Do you know what position he held with them?

A. He was division manager for Wisconsin.

Q. When was it that you met him?

A. It was in October of '21.

Q. The year 1921?

A. 1921, yes.

Q. Please state the circumstances of your acquaintance with Mr. Goldstein?

A. I went into the Loop Tobacco Store with the Beech-Nut division manager for Wisconsin, Mr. E. R. Lewis. This store was the store of Mr. Tuckwell, and in this store was Mr. Goldstein. Mr. Lewis introduced me to Mr. Goldstein, and as he did, Mr. Goldstein pulled a package of Beech-Nut cigarettes out of his pocket.

Mr. Milton: Now, just a minute, Mr. Witness. Surely, it is not going to be claimed in this case that the division manager of a company which maintains a force of salesman over practically the entire country has a right to bind this company by making statements.

The Court: Is that your purpose?

Mr. Johnson: No, your Honor, the purpose of bringing in these circumstances is in connection with the credibility of this witness, William Goldstein, who has already testified in this case for the defendant. He specifically denied certain statements, and we would like this witness to state the circumstances of his—

Mr. Milton: Has a foundation been laid for this?

The Court: I don't know, where are the statements?

Mr. Johnson: In the Lorillard record, page 463.

The Court: What particular part of his testimony are you referring to?

Mr. Johnson: On page 526, your Honor, cross question 343. "Have people ever asked you if the Beech-Nut tobacco and cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company? A. Never." "Did you ever make the statement that most people took Beech-Nut cigarettes to be a product of the gum people?" (345, that is.) "A Absolutely not." "X-Q. 346. Did you ever make this statement that the Lorillard salesmen could offer cigarettes as the product of the Beech-Nut gum people, that there were no instructions against it? A. Absolutely not." And then all through this witness' testimony, your Honor, he testifies to instructions that he gave his salesmen every morning before they went out on their routes.

Mr. Milton: If Mr. Johnson is through, in the first place, I don't think that is the kind of a foundation the law contemplates shall be laid for contradicting a witness, and in the second place, isn't this rebuttal testimony? Certainly, on the plaintiff's own case, this witness ought not to be called to say, if he can, that the witness Goldstein has not told the truth?

The Court: The question as it stands would be overruled anyway. You are asking this witness to relate a certain conversation. That is not the way to meet the situation which you desire to meet. I will sustain the objection to the question in its present form. What have you got to say about rebuttal?

Mr. Scott: It seems to be well taken, the objection, on the ground of rebuttal.

Q. That is all.

Mr. Milton: No cross examination.

(At this point an adjournment was taken to Wednesday, October 31, 1923, at ten-thirty A. M.)

Beech-Nut Packing Co.,

vs.

P. Lorillard Company.

Wednesday, October 31, 1923, 10:30 A. M.

(Case continued.)

Appearances as before.

WILLIAM A. CHARLES, called and sworn in behalf of the plaintiff, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Bulkley.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Charles?

A. Mount Vernon, New York.

Q. And what is the nature of your business?

A. I am a member of the corporation of Charles & Company, grocers, New York City.

Q. And what is the location, near the Grand Central Station?

A. Just opposite the Grand Central Station.

Q. And what is the general nature of that business?

A. General line of groceries and fruits, cigars and tobaccos.

Q. Specializing in any particular—

A. Not any more than just a general business in groceries.

Q. Wholesale as well as retail?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long have you been in that business?

A. 75 years this month.

Mr. Milton: Not this witness, of course, Mr. Bulkley, for the record.

Mr. Bulkley: Apparently not.

Q. Do you sell any tobacco in the form of cigarettes or cigars?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been selling tobacco in that form?

A. I think as long as the firm has been in existence.

Q. And do you sell cigarettes and cigars under some general name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you a box of cigarettes with the name of your company upon it. Is this the cigarette which you sell?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long have you been selling that cigarette under that name "Bon Voyage"?

A. Oh, for a matter of, I should say five or ten years.

Q. Does this cigarette bear upon it at any point any other name than that of Charles & Company?

A. No, sir; it does not.

Q. And in connection with cigars, I understand that you sell them under the name of Bon Voyage?

A. Yes, sir; we do.

Q. And that your name only appears in connection with the sale of those cigars?

A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Q. On the boxes or upon the cigars themselves?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From your own knowledge can you say whether or not it is the general custom among grocers and other dealers to sell tobaccos and cigars and cigarettes under their own name without any connection with the name of the manufacturer?

A. It is a general custom.

Q. Do you make these cigarettes or cigars which you sell?

A. No, sir; we do not.

Q. And who does make them for you?

A. They are made by the manufacturer whose factory number appears on the bottom of the box according to law, and that particular cigarette is made by the firm of Greeks, G. A. Georgopulo & Company. The cigars and tobaccos are made by other firms.

Q. Did you ever seen any cigarettes in a package bearing the name "Beech-Nut" upon the package?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Have you been selling these products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what extent?

A. Very largely. I think we carry a large line of their goods. We sell a good many thousand dollars' worth of their products a year.

Q. And the varied products—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of that concern are sold by you?

A. Yes, sir. Possibly 25 or 30 different varities of their products.

Q. What impression was made upon you when you saw this package of cigarettes, as you say you did, with the word "Beech-Nut" upon that package?

A. Well, the first time my attention was called it was either by a display in a window of the cigarettes or by a display on a billboard, I am uncertain of that. And just after seeing it, I mentioned the fact to a demonstrator of the Beech-Nut Company who was then demonstrating goods in our store, saying to her—

Mr. Milton: Objected to.

The Court: Now, not what you said. You are asked your impression and not what you said to somebody.

A. Well, my impression was that the cigarettes were made by the Beech-Nut Company from having seen the word "Beech-Nut."

Q. How long did you remain under that impression?

A. Just for that day.

Q. What removed that impression from your mind?

A. My having been informed by this lady—

Mr. Milton: That is objected to.

The Court: Not what the lady said. Something that you heard from somebody.

The Witness: I heard something, yes, sir, from a certain party.

Q. To what effect?

Mr. Milton: Objected to.

A. That they were not made—

The Court: I will permit that.

A. That the cigarettes were not made by the company she represented.

Q. That as all.

Cross examination by Mr. Milton.

Q. Where was it you saw the sign to which you have referred?

A. Well, I think I said that I was uncertain whether it was a sign or a display in a window. I am under the impression that it was a billboard, but that I would not say positively.

Q. Do you now recall where it was that you saw it?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you recall when it was?

A. I should say it may be two years ago.

Q. Prior to that time you had not, I assume, purchased either from P. Lorillard Company or from any of its jobbers any Beech-Nut cigarettes manufactured by that company?

A. Prior to that time?

Q. Yes.

A. I could not say that, we might have purchased them prior to my seeing the sign.

Q. You don't want us to understand that prior to your seeing this sign you had purchasd Beech-Nut cigarettes from the Lorillard Company, either directly from the company or from jobbers in the tobacco business, and that you afterwards saw this window display or billboard and seeing that, assumed that the Beech-Nut cigarette was the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes, sir, I assumed that they were the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, but I am uncertain whether Charles & Company had them in stock prior to the time that I saw the window display or the sign. We may have had them in stock but my attention may not have been called to it.

Q. So that it is unlikely, however, that prior to your seeing the sign, you had become acquainted with the fact that your company had the cigarettes in stock?

A. Personally I did not know that we had them in stock, although we might have. The first time my attention was called to the cigarette—

Q. Was the window display?

A. Was seeing this window display or the sign.

Q. Right. That is the first time you ever knew that there was such a cigarette?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think that is all.

WILLIAM L. MILLER, called and sworn in behalf of the plaintiff, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Bulkley.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Miller?

A. 515 West 110th street, New York City.

Q. What is your business?

A. Publishing.

Q. How long have you been in the publishing business?

A. Thirty years.

Q. And being in the publishing business, do you have anything to do with the soliciting or obtaining of advertisements for your paper?

A. Yes, sir, that is my portion of the publishing business.

Q. Did you ever see any packages of cigarettes bearing upon that package the word "Beech-Nut"?

A. No, sir.

Q. How did you happen to learn of the use of the word "Beech-Nut," if you did, in connection with tobacco in the form of cigarettes or chewing tobacco?

A. Why, in connection with my duties as advertising manager, I saw the Beech-Nut cigarette advertised in the New York Evening Sun, and as it becomes necessary when you see new advertising, you immediately become busy and try to obtain the same for your publication.

Q. What was the general nature, if you remember, of this advertising of the Beech-Nut cigarette, which you saw?

Mr. Milton: Objected to.

The Court: Yes, that might be important.

Mr. Bulkley: That is simply preliminary to the question as to what the impression was which was made upon his mind with reference to the origin of the—

The Court: Well, we have got the origin in the newspaper. Now, if you are going to have him describe what was in the newspaper, you are getting on delicate ground because you might better have the copy that he saw.

Q. What was the impression in your mind from the advertising which you saw?

A. The impression made on my mind from the advertising was that the Beech-Nut Packing Company were responsible for the cigarette.

Q. I show you an advertisement. Is that the one to which you have just referred, as having been seen by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What sort of an advertisement is that? A newspaper advertisement?

A. This is a newspaper advertisement.

Q. Do you remember the newspaper from which that was taken?

A. My impression now is it was the New York Evening Sun, because I know that they were carrying the advertising.

Mr. Bulkley: We offer that in evidence, your Honor.

(Received and marked Exhibit P. 36.)

Q You say that you are in a general publishing business. Do you have some particular paper that has quite a widespread distribution?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is that paper?

A. The Spur Magazine.

Q. At the time that you saw this advertisement and obtained the impression that the cigarette as referred to in the advertisement were made by the Beech-Nut Company—how long did that impression remain with you?

A. Why, it remained with me several weeks, because the advertising was running almost continuously in this publication even prior to the time that I attempted to secure the business.

Q. What attempt did you make to secure the business and what business was it that you sought to secure, and from whom?

A. Why, I wrote to the Beech-Nut Company and enclosed this advertisement and asked if it were possible for them to use the Spur.

Mr. Milton: Just a moment.

Mr. Bulkley: Very well.

Mr. Milton: I move to strike out beyond the statement that the witness wrote.

The Court: All right; it is consented to.

Q. Were you familiar with the general nature of the business of the Beech-Nut Packing Company at the time you saw this advertisement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Exhibit No. 36. And how long before that time had you been generally informed concerning the nature of the Beech-Nut Packing Company's business before you saw the advertisement?

A. I would say twenty-five years.

Q. What was the knowledge which you possessed as to the general character of that business, just tell us what that knowledge was.

A. I knew that their main establishment was at Canajoharie, New York, that they dealt in hams, and the Beech-Nut bacon and in jams, and various food products which had been liberally advertised all over the country.

Q. Did you see any gums and candies bearing the Beech-Nut label?

A. I knew they had the gum. I thought they included that in their other products.

By Mr. Bulkley: That is all, cross examine.

Cross examination by Mr. Milton.

Q. Mr. Miller, when was it that you saw the publication referred to in the Evening Sun?

A. Why, I imagine about two years ago now, to the best of my recollection.

Q. And do you recall where you were when you saw this advertisement?

A. I was in my office.

Q. Were you reading the paper, just generally, or were you—

A. No, because I buy all the New York papers, both morning and evening, and they are always on file in our office.

Q. And for what purpose were you reading this copy of the Evening Sun?

A. Looking through for new advertising.

Q. You have heard, I assume, of P. Lorillard & Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is their business?

A. Tobacco business.

Q. Do you carry any advertisements for that company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you at the time you saw this advertisement of Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Just ask that over again.

Q. Did you carry advertisement business for Lorillard Company at the time you saw the advertising of Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What has been produced here and offered as Exhibit P. 36, Mr. Miller, is a piece of paper clipped from some newspaper, showing the Beech-Nut cigarette, that is right, is it (indicating)?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And forming part of that advertisement is a representation of a package of cigarettes—correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With what are two of the cigarettes projecting out of the top of the package; that is right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What else appears on the representation of the package of cigarettes?

A. "Beech-Nut perfect cigarettes."

Q. Is that all?

A. "P. Lorillard Company."

Q. Why the "P. Lorillard Company" come so hesitatingly?

A. Come what?

Q. Come so slowly?

A. I don't see where that—

Q. Did it or didn't it?

A. No.

Q. It didn't?

A. It is right in front of me.

Q. It is right in front of you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you saw that without any difficulty?

A. Just now; yes, sir.

Q. Is that the first time you ever saw it?

A. No.

Q. You have seen "P. Lorillard & Company" printed in this advertisement before?

A. Well, I don't know; I presume I have, yes.

Q. When was the first time that you recall?

A. I couldn't give you a definite date on that, on the Beech-Nut advertising.

Q. Then I understand your testimony to be that you are unable to tell us now when you noticed for the first time either on a package of cigarettes or upon a piece of advertising showing a package of cigarettes as a part of the advertising, you are unable to tell us when you saw for the first time or noticed for the first time the name "P. Lorillard Co."

A. Well, I presume I saw it at the same time I cut that advertisement out of the paper.

Q. Did you cut this advertisement out of the paper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This is the advertisement you sent to the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What you want us to understand now is that you noticed that at the time you cut this piece of paper out of the newspaper, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long had you been in the advertising business prior to the time you cut this ad. out of the newspaper?

A. Thirty years.

Q. How long have you known P. Lorillard & Company?

A. Twenty years at least.

Q. And you had seen their products advertised in various publications, I assume?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know some of the products of P. Lorillard & Company other than Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Why, yes, they handle, or manufacture, chewing tobacco, smoking tobacco.

Q. Do you know the names of some of the brands?

A. Cigarettes.

Q. Do you know the names of some of the brands, Mr. Miller?

A. Well, not to recall immediately.

Q. So that knowing that P. Lorillard & Company were manufacturers of tobacco, smoking and chewing, and cigarettes, which fact you had known for twenty years, and having carried some of their business prior to the time you cut this clipping out of the paper, and seeing at the time you cut the clipping out—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —the name "P. Lorillard & Company," you want us to understand that you, nevertheless, wrote the Beech-Nut Packing Company assuming them to be responsible for the cigarettes?

A. I wrote to the Beech-Nut Packing Company, assuming that they were responsible for the advertising, under the surmise that the P. Lorillard Company might be making the cigarette for the Beech-Nut people.

Q. I see. So that there was no confusion in your mind at the time you wrote the Beech-Nut Company as to who the manufacturer of the cigarette was?

A. No, but the confusion in my mind was the name "Beech-Nut" being applied to a cigarette when the Beech-Nut Packing Company were manufacturing so many products under their own name.

Mr. Milton: If your Honor please, I move to strike out all the answer after the word "No."

The Court: No, I will permit it to stand.

Q. At any rate, with respect to the origin, with respect to the manufacture of the cigarette itself, there was no confusion in your mind, Mr. Miller, is that right?

A. Well, that depends on what the word "manufacture" means. If you are manufacturing for another concern, putting out a product for them, I claim that my attitude was absolutely correct.

Q. I am not claiming that it was not. All I am trying to find out from you, and I don't think there is any dispute between us, all I am trying to find out from you is this, when you cut this clipping out of the newspaper, you knew that as a matter of common, ordinary every-day sense that cigarette was made, manufactured, put together, if you please, by P. Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, but that—

Q. I will go one step further—

A. The Beech-Nut Company was responsible.

Q. I will keep step with you. Let us get that fact established. Then you assumed that the Beech-Nut Packing Company was putting that cigarette out, first having it manufactured for it by Lorillard Company; that is right, isn't it?

A. That was my impression.

Q. And, accordingly, you wrote to the Beech-Nut Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had carried the business of the Beech-Nut Packing Company prior to the time you clipped Exhibit P. 36 out of the newspaper?

A. Yes.

Q. And that business was consigned to the exploitation and advertising of food products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you furnish me with an illustration of the name of any other company manufacturing and selling over its own name food products, selling a tobacco product manufactured by another concern, with the name of the manufacturer appearing on the package?

A. No.

Q. You cannot?

A. Not at the moment.

Q. Well, then, take a moment or two to think about it. (After a pause): You are not able to recall any, Mr. Miller, are you?

A. Not at the moment; no, sir.

Q. I assume, Mr. Miller, that when you wrote the Beech-Nut Packing Company in reference to getting the business of advertising the Beech-Nut cigarettes, you had not previously communicated with P. Lorillard Company to find out whether it was marketing the cigarette it manufactured?

A. No, sir.

Q. You acted immediately upon the assumption that it was a product which was being marketed by the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes, sir, that was my impression.

Q. Now, having been so impressed by this piece of advertising, did that affect your opinion of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Why, no, I wouldn't say it did.

Q. And have you used or had you used, prior to cutting this piece of advertising out of the paper, Exhibit P. 36, any of the Beech-Nut products?

A. Had I tried them?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, yes, many times.

Q. Bacon and ham and jams and jellies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after having seen this piece of advertising, I assume that your opinion of the good quality of the products of the Beech-Nut Company was not affected thereby?

A. Not a particle.

Q. It would not make any difference to you, as a consumer of Beech-Nut Packing Company food products whether they manufactured a cigarette or sold a cigarette, would it?

A. Not in the least.

Q. You would still buy the Beech-Nut products?

A. I certainly would.

Mr. Milton: That is all.

Mr. Bulkley: If the Court will permit me, I will offer in evidence, package of cigarettes produced by Mr. Charles, the witness Charles.

(Received and marked Exhibit P. 37.)

NORMAN S. BERRY, called and sworn in behalf of the plaintiff, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Bulkley.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Berry?

A. I live in Baltimore, 3509 Cottage avenue.

Q. What is your business?

A. My business is salesman for the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Q. And what do you sell?

A. I sell the confection line.

Q. Did you, on some occasion, ask permission to dress the window of some grocer?

A. Yes, sir, I asked permission of a grocer, 651 South Light street, Baltimore, to dress a window.

Q. Did he grant your request?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do?

A. I immediately took Beech-Nut products down and dressed the window, exclusively with Beech-Nut products.

Q. What were those products which you took down and put in the window?

A. Chewing gum, peppermint, wintergreen, lemon and orange.

Q. About when was it you dressed the window in this manner?

A. August 26, 1922.

Q. Did you have occasion to observe that window at some later date?

A. Yes, sir, in working that territory about a week later, I passed and saw a Lorillard display in with my display.

Q. What was the nature of—

Mr. Milton: Pardon me, Mr. Bulkley, this having happened after the filing of the bill, I am wondering whether or not it is competent. This bill was filed in 1921. Is that right, Mr. Cavanagh?

Mr. Cavanagh: That is right.

Mr. Milton: The incident to which this witness is testifying occurred in 1922, and I move that it be stricken out.

Mr. Bulkley: We have a right, it seems to me, to show a continuance of the state of mind of these ultimate consumers as a result of the acts of the defendant.

The Court: I will permit it.

Q. What was the nature of those products, or what was the change in the window which you observed when you saw it a second time?

A. I had a background of two large cards in the center of my window. When I passed the window about a week later, those two cards were taken out and this Lorillard background was in with my display.

Q. What did you do when you observed this change in the window?

A. I took a picture of it.

Q. Then did you develop that picture?

A. Yes, sir, I took it with my own camera.

Q. Do you recognize this photograph, which I show to you, as being the picture that you took?

A. Yes, sir, I took this picture.

Q. And do you now identify that picture as being an accurate illustration of what the change was which was made in that window?

A. That is an enlargement of this picture.

Q. Do you observe the name "Lorillard Company" anywhere in this picture?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is that, at what point?

Mr. Milton: Objected to.

A. It is right on the bottom of that package.

The Court: I sustain the objection to what he observes on the photograph. The photograph speaks for itself.

Q. Independently of this photograph, did you observe the name of Lorillard & Company at any point upon the poster which you say was substituted for yours?

A. Yes, sir, on the bottom of the package.

Q. That is on the bottom of the representation or picture of the package on the poster?

A. Yes, sir.

(The witness is shown large poster with two bathing girls and man.)

Q. Is this poster which I show you, the one which you saw in the window of this grocery, on the occasion of your second observation of that window?

A. No, sir, it is a little different from that although it has the large package and the bathing girls.

Q. And had it the words, "P. Lorillard & Company"?

A. Yes, sir. It had the P. Lorillard Company.

Q. Upon the picture of the package?

A. Yes, sir.

The Court: This was in the window after you had dressed it?

The Witness: Yes, sir, after I had put my products in, and this was in with my products.

The Court: And this is what you objected to?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Mr. Bulkley: Plaintiff offers in evidence the photograph, together with the enlargement of that photograph.

(Received and marked Exhibit P. 38.)

Mr. Bulkley: Plaintiff's counsel offers in evidence poster identified by the witness.

(Received and marked Exhibit P. 39.)

Cross examination by Mr. Milton.

Q. Mr. Berry, why didn't the words, "P. Lorillard Co." come out on the photograph which you took?

A. I took that picture with a small number of a Brownie camera, and as those colors contrast, it did not show up, as red and black will not show up on a picture. That name would not show up on a picture unless you have a special camera.

Q. The fact is, that shown on the representation of the cigarette package forming part of the poster, the words "P. Lorillard Co." appear at the base or foot of the cigarette package, that is true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other articles appeared in the window than those of the Beech-Nut Packing Company and this poster?

A. Three small circular cardboards, they each had a representation of a Beech-Nut cigarette package on it.

Q. Did the window contain the advertising of any other salable article?

A. No, sir.

Q. I see a card here advertising somebody's Georgia melons, do you recall that?

A. That might be on the window. I recall a Horn's ice cream poster on the window, if I am not mistaken.

Q. How large a window was this?

A. About five feet across, and about two or three deep.

Q. What is the advertisement appearing in the upper left-hand corner of the photograph below the Georgia melon card?

A. That is Horn's ice cream.

Q. And what is the advertisement appearing in back of the bathing girl on the right of the picture?

A. I cannot really make that out.

Q. Well, it is not a Beech-Nut Packing Company product, is it?

A. What, this here?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. Appearing in back of the head of the bathing girl on the right-hand side of the photograph, as you look at it. The sign that appears there is not one that advertises the Beech-Nut Packing Company products?

A. No, sir.

Q. Nor is it one that advertises the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was the can that appeared on the shelf at the upper right-hand corner of the picture?

A. It looks as though it is a cigar can to me.

Q. A cigar can?

A. Yes, sir; I don't know what kind.

Q. But at any rate, it is not a Beech-Nut Packing Company product?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was the card in the lower right-hand corner of the window, in the picture?

A. I believe that was an advertisement of a trip down the Bay.

Q. So that in this window in which you put your advertisement of Beech-Nut Packing Company products, there was an advertisement of Horn's ice cream, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of Horn's Georgia melons?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or melon seeds?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A can showing cigars of some other manufacturer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. A card advertising a trip down the Bay, or some other trip?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a card in back of the bathing girls, one of the bathing girls, which you cannot now read, that is right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Advertising some product other than the Beech-Nut Company product?

A. Yes.

Q. And other than the Beech-Nut cigarettes, that is right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other products or goods were advertised in that window that you recall, besides the ones I have read?

A. The Beech-Nut cigarettes.

Q. I mean other than the Beech-Nut cigarettes, other than the Beech-Nut Packing Company's goods, and the ones I called your special attention to.

A. None that I can remember.

Q. None that you can remember?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he have more than one window in the store, or was this the only window?

A. No, sir; that was the only window.

Mr. Milton: I think that is all.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

JAMES F. MASTERSON, called as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Bulkley.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Masterson?

A. Brooklyn, New York, 362 Branford street.

Q. What is your business?

A. I am in the publishing business.

Q. What do you do in connection with the publishing business?

A. I write financial news.

Q. For what paper or papers do you write financial news?

A. One paper, the National Financial News.

Q. How long have you been writing for that company?

A. About three years for the concern, although it was under a different name prior to May 7th of this year.

Q. Did you ever write an article about the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when that was?

A. I don't remember the date, no, sir.

Q. Did you ever see any packages of cigarettes with the word "Beech-Nut" on the package?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long ago was that?

A. I first saw them a little over two years ago, I think.

Q. Under what circumstances did you see those packages?

A. Friend of mine asked me to have a cigarette on him, and they were Beech-Nut cigarettes.

Q. Did you smoke any of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever buy any of these Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And use them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the impression created in your mind by reason of the presence of those words "Beech-Nut" on these packages of cigarettes, one of which was given to you and the others which you purchased?

A. Why, I presumed they were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Q. How long did you remain under that impression?

A. I remained under that impression until, until after I had written the story, and it was brought to my attention by a representative of the company, of the Beech-Nut Company.

Q. I hand you a copy of the National Financial News and ask you whether the article contained therein and headed "Beech-Nut Packing Company Earnings Nearly $9 a Share" was written by you, and is that the article to which you have referred (handing paper to witness)?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Bulkley: Would your Honor like to look at that article to see the materiality? I shall offer it in evidence.

(Paper handed to Court.)

The Court: This is May 28, 1923?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: When did the Beech-Nut Packing Company register the label for tobacco purposes?

Mr. Scott: They never did.

Mr. Milton: They attempted to.

The Court: What is the date of that?

Mr. Milton: 1919.

Mr. Scott: In 1919 the application was made and the thing went on for a few months after that.

The Court: I see your point.

Mr. Bulkley: I offer in evidence the article identified by the witness, and the paper, the National Financial News, in which the article appears, to be marked Exhibit P. 40.

Q. Did you—

Mr. Milton: Just a minute.

The Court: Simply as showing the time of this man's impression?

Mr. Milton: Yes. I suppose if it is offered for that purpose I have no objection to it.

The Court: Is there any other point?

Mr. Bulkley: Yes, we want to show the nature of the widespread publication to the world as a consequence of this article, which would have a tendency to create the same impression in the minds of a great many others.

The Court: That is a matter of argument.

Mr. Bulkley: Well, that tends to show that that argument is material, we can show it by the article itself.

The Court: There is a lot of immaterial matter in this article, a lot of things in this article that have no bearing.

Mr. Bulkley: Oh, yes, now I apprehend. It is confined only to the statement which has bearing on the confusion which might result in the mind of the reader of that article.

Mr. Milton: It is objected to, sir.

The Court: I will admit it.

(Paper received in evidence and marked Exhibit P. 40.)

Q. Was this paper, this particular issue of the paper, within your knowledge distributed in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

Cross examination by Mr. Milton.

Q. Mr. Masterson, how long have you been connected with the "Financial News"?

A. With the magazine, the magazine has only been in existence since May 7th, but I worked for the—doing the same kind of work for the publisher of the paper for about three years.

Q. So that this paper which you now produce, Exhibit P. 40, the National Financial News, is a weekly magazine, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Published where?

A. 120 Broadway, New York City.

Q. And this particular issue of May 28th was the fourth issue of the magazine, is that right?

A. Either the third or the fourth.

Q. It says No. 4, so that I guess it is the fourth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How is it sold, how was it sold in May, 1923?

A. How was it sold?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, through mailing lists and representatives in Chicago and Pittsburgh and Boston, and probably one or two other cities.

Q. What was the circulation on May 28th?

A. That is something I can't say because I am not identified with that end of the publication.

Q. So far as you know it, approximately, what was the circulation?

A. I imagine—on that date there?

Q. Yes.

A. I imagine a little over a thousand.

Q. A little over a thousand?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the paper still in existence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The occasion of your friend offering you a cigarette to smoke was the first time you had ever seen or heard of the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you heard of the Beech-Nut Packing Company prior to that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you married?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old are you?

A. Twenty-four.

Q. How long had you been married prior to May, 1923?

A. A little under a year.

Q. Had you used any of the products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. My wife has.

Q. I assume your wife cooked them and you ate them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What products?

A. Bacon and peanut butter.

Q. Now, did you know that the bacon which was laid on the breakfast table in the morning and the peanut butter which came on at luncheon or at dinner at night, were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company at Canajoharie, New York?

A. Did I know that?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you find that out?

A. I read the labels and the name on the containers.

Q. Where did you see them?

A. In my wife's kitchen.

Q. In the kitchen at home?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You observed, on the labels that the bacon—was it in a jar or can or what?

A. Both bacon and peanut butter were in a glass jar.

Q. Where was the label?

A. On the glass.

Q. What part of it, the bottom or the top?

A. No, I think about the middle.

Q. What did it say on the label besides what I have said to you "Beech-Nut Packing Company, Canajoharie, New York"?

A. Why, I don't know that it said anything that I remember. Of course, there was a trademark. I don't remember any other printed matter on at all.

Q. Don't recall anything else but the fact that the bacon and apple butter or the peanut butter that you were looking at were made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how did you find out that they made chewing or smoking tobacco?

A. Why, I took that for granted on the assumption that they made cigarettes. I believed that they made the cigarettes, and I therefore assumed that they made the smoking tobacco and chewing tobacco.

Q. So that your friend having offered you—by the way, when was it that your friend offered this cigarette?

A. That was a little over two years ago.

Q. Your friend having offered you casually a cigarette out of a Beech-Nut cigarette package, you assumed that the Beech-Nut Packing Company made that cigarette, and when you came to write this financial article for the Financial News you also assumed that the Beech-Nut Packing Company, being the manufacturer of a cigarette must be the manufacturer of a chewing tobacco and a smoking tobacco, that is right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was on the package of cigarettes that your friend offered you a cigarette from?

A. The only thing I observed—on the package of cigarettes?

Q. Yes.

A. The only thing I observed was the name Beech-Nut.

Q. You didn't see P. Lorillard Co. on that, did you?

A. I didn't observe it, no.

Q. You weren't as keen about observing that, as you were about observing Mrs. Masterson's bacon and peanut butter in the kitchen?

A. No, I was not.

Q. Where did you get the information with reference to the allied or subsidiary companies of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, which is contained in this financial article of yours?

A. From the cards of the Standard Statistics Company.

Q. Was it before or after you had purchased or obtained from your friend the Beech-Nut cigarette that you were married—after, I think, from my calculation of time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that you had learned of the fact that there was a Beech-Nut cigarette being manufactured prior to the time you were married—right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, prior to your being married, what familiarity did you have with where bacon came from, whether it grew on trees or whether it was manufactured or whether it came off animals and who put it up?

A. The Beech-Nut bacon?

Q. Any bacon.

A. Why, that is a matter of general knowledge, isn't it?

Q. Well, I don't know whether it is or not. You want this Court to understand that you were then about 21 or 22 years old, is that right, when your friend offered you the cigarette?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were an unmarried man?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when your friend offered you this cigarette out of a package with the word "Beech-Nut" on it, you knew of the Beech-Nut Packing Company being the manufacturer or producer or seller of bacon and other products, and assumed that it was the manufacturer of this cigarette, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were then a young unmarried man of 21 or 22 years of age?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you then using any of the Beech-Nut products at the time you got this cigarette?

A. Why, at home; that is, my mother was.

Q. Did you see them in your mother's kitchen, too?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after you were married, notwithstanding the fact that the Beech-Nut Company, as you knew it, or assumed it to be, was the manufacturer of a cigarette, you permitted your wife to buy Beech-Nut products, I assume?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The fact that the Beech-Nut Company was making cigarettes and chewing tobacco and smoking tobacco, did not affect your judgment as to the desirability of buying its peanut butter or bacon or hams?

A. Not mine; no, sir.

Q. Peanut butter manufactured by the Beech-Nut Company was just as good whether they made or manufactured chewing tobacco or smoking tobacco or cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is all.

G. FRANK DISBROW, called and sworn in behalf of the plaintiff, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Bulkley.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Disbrow?

A. South Amboy, New Jersey.

Q. And what is your business?

A. I am a laborer—a skilled laborer, for the terra cotta works.

Q. By what concern are you employed?

A. South Amboy Terra Cotta at present.

Q. Did you ever see any package of chewing tobacco or cigarettes bearing upon it the name Beech-Nut?

A. Yes, I have bought quite some of it.

Q. H'm?

A. I have bought quite a little of it.

Q. Now, having reference to the chewing tobacco, did you buy quite a little of the chewing tobacco?

A. Oh, I hung fast to it two or three months.

Q. And then did you stop using it?

A. Yes, I did not care for it, I gave it up.

Q. And during the period of time extending over three months that you chewed a tobacco contained within a package bearing those words on it, what impression did you have as to who was the one putting out that chewing tobacco?

A. I was always under the impression that the Beech-Nut Packing Company made it.

Q. Well, why did you have that impression?

A. I am a confirmed user of Beech-Nut products at home, and I thought it was another product they were putting out, I was anxious to try it, I bought it, thinking it was a Beech-Nut product and expected the usual quality.

Q. Was it or was it not, in your opinion, the same quality?

A. In my own opinion it was not.

Q. Did you ever visit the plant of the Beech-Nut Packing Company in Canajoharie, New York?

A. Yes, about seven years ago. I think it was around 1916, either '15 or '16. I think it is '16, just previous to the war.

Q. Was that before or after you commenced to chew this tobacco, Beech-Nut tobacco?

A. That was before, possibly about three years before I started using Beech-Nut tobacco.

Q. Were you taken through the factory or plant of the Beech-Nut Company at Canajoharie?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By a guide?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he explain to you the method of producing the products when he took you through?

A. We made a very thorough trip. I spent possibly a couple of hours there, the best part of two hours the day I was in, that is, we went from stem to stern of the building, through all the various departments.

Q. Now, did you purchase and smoke cigarettes on the package of which appeared the name Beech-Nut, after you had commenced to chew chewing tobacco?

A. No, I did not purchase any cigarettes until well, possibly, three or four months after I stopped using Beech-Nut tobacco.

Q. Well, with reference to those cigarettes, the package bearing upon it the name of the Beech-Nut cigarettes, what impression did you gain in the use of this package as to who made these cigarettes, or put those cigarettes out?

A. The same impression that I had formed in first buying the chewing tobacco.

Q. That is all.

Cross examination by Mr. Milton.

Q. How long have you lived in South Amboy, Mr. Disbrow?

A. About 32 years.

Q. How long have you been employed by the South Amboy Terra Cotta Company?

A. Just this year.

Q. What was your business prior to that?

A. Purchasing agent.

Q. For whom?

A. Roessler & Hasslacher, chemical companies, that includes the Perth Amboy Chemical, the Niagara General Chemical, the General Bakelite.

Q. Where are they located?

A. They have factories in St. Albans, West Virginia, Niagara Falls, Perth Amboy. Those are the principal factories.

Q. When did you first begin to use Beech-Nut chewing tobacco?

A. Well, after the war about 1920, possibly it was in 1920, I would say within that year, I could not give a definite month, whether or not it was the early part of the year or the latter. I presume about the middle of '20.

Q. How long did you continue using it?

A. The chewing tobacco?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Oh, I guess three or four months.

Q. Three or four months?

A. Yes, something like that.

Q. How frequently would you buy it?

A. Beech-Nut? A paper every day.

Q. When you smoked cigarettes, how frequently would you buy a pack of cigarettes?

A. Twice, sometimes three times a day.

Q. You mean that you smoked between two and three packs of cigarettes a day?

A. No, I will average about two, but I give about one away a day.

Q. The vice of treating is responsible for that?

A. I don't know, it seems to be a privilege of some people to ask for a cigarette.

Q. How long did you continue smoking the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Oh, not as long as the tobacco, possibly a month or two.

Q. So that in three months you bought approximately ninety packages of chewing tobacco, and assuming that you smoked the Beech-Nut cigarettes for a month, buying two a day, you bought approximately sixty packages of cigarettes—right?

A. About that, yes.

Q. Upon any of those ninety packages of chewing tobacco did you ever observe the word "Lorillard"?

A. I can't say that I did.

Q. Can you say that you did not?

A. I can't say that I did not.

Q. What can you say about it?

A. Simply bought the tobacco and put it in my pocket and don't think of looking at it. In the average case, you don't look at the tobacco after it is in your pocket, you reach around and tear the top off and then you reach in for a chew when you care for it.

Q. How many times a day do you suppose you took a chew?

A. You add to what you have.

Q. Approximately how many times a day would you reach into the pocket to get a piece of chewing tobacco, five?

A. More than that.

Q. More than that, ten?

A. A little less than that, I would say, well, between five and ten.

Q. Between five and ten?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that in effect you want the Court to understand your testimony to be this, that over a period of three months you have handled packages of Beech-Nut chewing tobacco at least five times, possibly ten times a day, and you have not observed the word "Lorillard" on any of those packages at any time?

A. Not at that time, no, not at the time I was using it, I did not.

Q. Not at the time you were using it?

A. No.

Q. When did you observe the word "Lorillard" on the package of chewing tobacco?

A. After smoking the Beech-Nut cigarettes—I also always shopped around for a cigarette just a little cheaper than I have been using. I have been smoking the same grade of cigarettes for approximately twenty-two years, the Murad, looking for a change, looking for quality, I bought a package of Beech-Nut, looking for a smoke, looking for something good, a little cheaper than what I had been paying for Murads, and I noticed one day a peculiar sort of an aroma or taste of formaldehyde, a peculiar taste. I tried another one or two and didn't find it so strong, I found that in the other cigarettes; and something, I don't know, by way of chance, I guess, I was mulling over the packages, and I saw the Lorillard, and then I said, "Oh, Beech-Nut doesn't make this stuff," and that was the first indication I had of the packer.

Q. Let's see. You saw "Lorillard" on that Beech-Nut package, is that right?

A. After using it for quite some time.

Q. After using it for quite some time. How long have you been a cigarette smoker?

A. Since I was about, I don't know, around along fourteen or fifteen.

Q. So that you have been using cigarettes, I think you said, about twenty-two years?

A. About twenty-two years.

Q. What other brands of cigarettes have you smoked besides Beech-Nut?

A. Ever since I started smoking cigarettes I have stuck pretty close to Murads, occasionally Sweet Caporals, I now and then try something else to find something better.

Q. Who makes the Murad cigarettes?

A. I don't know, I would have to guess. It was either Shinasi or Anargyros.

Q. Who made the Sweet Caporal?

A. Formerly Kinney Brothers.

Q. Why do you say formerly Kinney Brothers?

A. I think it is an American product now. I was through one year the West Nineteenth street factory of Kinney Brothers, and inquired at a later time to go through again and they said it had been taken over by American Tobacco Company.

Q. Do you smoke any other cigarettes but the Murad, the Beech-Nut and the Sweet Caporal?

A. Yes, I have smoked a pack of something, trying for something else now and then.

Q. Mention them, if you can recall them.

A. You mean a package at a time?

Q. Mention what other kinds or brands of cigarettes you have smoked, if you can recollect, besides the Murad and the Sweet Caporal and the Beech-Nut.

A. Piedmonts, but very seldom—I can't recall many others. A cigarette to me is a Murad, that is all, nothing aside from that.

Q. How often, how long did you smoke the Piedmont cigarette?

A. I don't know, when I couldn't buy possibly a Murad in some small place I would buy a Piedmont to hold me over.

Q. You never noticed, of course, who made the Piedmont, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. How long did you smoke Sweet Caporal?

A. Just fill-ins, in between.

Q. Will you explain to the Court and to me if Sweet Caporal was just a fill-in, how you know or knew that Kinney Brothers made Sweet Caporal cigarettes and you didn't know that Lorillard made Beech-Nut cigarettes until your attention was attracted by the presence of some odor, formaldehyde, I think you said?

A. When I was a kid, I can only remember one cigarette being sold for the penny, we used to get two Sweet Caps for a cent. When we reached the label, we used to mark off as kids to the label in cutting the cigarette in two. I parted the cigarette with my fingers about where Kinney Brothers, Sweep Cap, about the middle of that cigarette.

Q. Have you used Sweet Caporals recently, in recent years?

A. Yes, but I wouldn't know if there was any change in that cigarette.

Q. Where is the factory of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. I only know of one, that is at Canajoharie. I was visiting there one year and I was invited to go through it.

Q. Did you ever look at the back of the package of Beech-Nut tobacco?

A. No, sir; I never observed any mark on it.

Q. You never observed that was manufactured at a factory at Ohio, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. So that not only did you fail to observe that the word "Lorillard" was on this package of Beech-Nut chewing tobacco which you had in your hand sometimes at least five times a day, and possibly ten times a day for a period of three months, but you likewise failed to observe that on the back of the package is a statement that the tobacco is made under a special process in Middletown, Ohio?

A. I never noticed any marks on it. I have handled thousands and thousands, you might say, in 22 years, packages of Murads, and can't tell you anything about it except the Murad is made by Shinasi Brothers.

Q. Or Anargyros?

A. Or Anargyros, yes. I want the cigarette, not the package, when I buy it.

Q. So that the name of the manufacturer does not make any difference?

A. It does not appeal to me, although I like to buy a man's goods that puts quality up.

Q. Right, and when you happen to strike a tobacco of a particular blend that pleases your taste, you don't care whether it is made by Tom Jones or Richard Brown?

A. I don't care who makes it if it is good and appeals to me.

Q. That is why you smoked Murad cigarettes for twenty years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same as I did. So that, after all, what you are interested in in tobacco is something that pleases your taste, isn't it?

A. That appeals to me, yes.

Mr. Milton: That is all.

A. No, sir.

Q. You never saw Beech-Nut scrap?

A. No, sir.

Q. I show you a package of Beech-Nut cigarettes, which is already an exhibit in this case (indicating). Did you ever see a package of those before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About when?

A. About two years ago.

Q. When you first saw a package of these Beech-Nut cigarettes, whom did you think put them out?

Q. As a matter, of fact, you didn't care, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. The Camel cigarette had pleased your taste?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Like Mr. Disbrow, the last witness, tobacco is tobacco—if it happens to hit your taste, it is what you like, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't care whether it is made by Beech-Nut or by Lorillard Company or by any one else, do you?

A. No, sir.

Q. If the blend suits your fancy, that is what you buy, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Mr. Milton: I think that is all.

Mr. Bulkley: Now, if your Honor please, we cannot impose upon your indulgence any further than we have already done. We do have two witnesses who have promised to be here at two o'clock or about half-past two and I would make this suggestion, if it meets with the approval of the other side, that with that exception, we will close our case, and hope to be able to put these witnesses on the stand as they relate to the same general subject.

The Court: The same sort of testimony?

Mr. Bulkley: Yes, the same character of testimony, as constitutes the testimony taken by deposition and which has been taken here.

The Court: Is the other side prepared to go on with witnesses?

Mr. Milton: No, sir, it comes somewhat as a surprise although Mr. Johnson did tell me this morning when we started to examine here, that in all probability they would finish about noon. But it comes somewhat as a surprise in view of the statement made in the opening yesterday that there were some ten witnesses to be examined. In our conferences—I have not participated with them, but Mr. Preston and Mr. Cavanagh have with Mr. Bulkley, Mr. Scott and Mr. Johnson—they rather assumed that they would take all of today, and perhaps some time tomorrow, so we are not prepared to go on now. We will be prepared to go on, I think, perhaps at two o'clock, if we can get started.

The Court: How many witnesses have you, eight or ten?

Mr. Milton. We had planned when we made the statement yesterday that we would call some ten witnesses—we had planned to take some testimony along the lines of the testimony this morning, but we have reconsidered that and have come to the conclusion in as much as the subject matter has been so fully covered in the depositions we will rest with that, and not take any oral testimony in court—on that point, of course.

The Court: You may finish all of the testimony today?

Mr. Milton: We will hardly finish today. We will surely finish tomorrow. We might finish today, but I doubt it.

The Court: Do you think your witnesses will be here before two o'clock?

Mr. Scott: They have not come yet, your Honor, I don't believe it will be till three.

The Court: You have no right to take such liberties. Yesterday you wasted considerable time. You should have your witnesses ready to proceed. If they are not here until three, there is a waste of three hours which may interfere with the Court's plans for the week.

Mr. Bulkley: We don't want to do that, and we will rest our case.

The Court: No, I won't require that. Do you think you will have some witnesses before two?

Mr. Milton: Our witnesses are here, but I am frank to confess that I have not enjoyed the benefit of a talk with them, and I would like to discuss some few little matters with them before putting them on the stand.

The Court. Suppose we take a recess until half-past one, and will you proceed with some of your witnesses then?

Mr. Milton: I think so.

The Court: And then when your witnesses arrive we will suspend and allow you to finish your case.

RECESS.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Mr. Cavanagh: If your Honor please, in opening defendant's proof before this Court, I think it would simplify matters if I read into the record at this time certain formal stipulations which were made, and if they are incorporated in the record, which it is intended to be printed, I think it will be greatly for the convenience of Court and counsel, and therefore, if the Court has no objection, I would like to have permission to read them. I will now read a stipulation relative to eleven exhibit books, which have been prepared by the defendant as his exhibits. These books are here. The stipulation reads as follows:

DEFENDANT'S PROOFS.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DISTRICT OF NEW JERSEY.

Beech-Nut Packing Company vs. P. Lorillard Company.	Equity No. 3056.

Stipulation.

It is stipulated by and between the parties, through their respective counsel, (subject to the condition hereinbelow stated in regard to Defendant's Exhibit Book No. VII) that the labels, wrappers, posters, and other advertising matter contained in the following named books were actually used in trade in the United States, and are genuine specimens of the labels, wrappers, posters and other advertising matter so used.

Books entitled:

"Defendant's Exhibit Book No. I," containing fifty-three sheets,

"Defendant's Exhibit Book No. II," containing thirty-three sheets,

"Defendant's Exhibit Book No. III," containing twenty-four sheets,

"Defendant's Exhibit Book No. IV," containing thirty-five sheets,

"Defendant's Exhibit Book No. V," containing forty-two sheets,

"Defendant's Exhibit Book No. VI," containing twenty sheets,

"Defendant's Exhibit Book No. VII," containing thirty-one sheets,

STIPULATION.

"Defendant's Exhibit Book No. VIII," containing fifty-five sheets,

"Defendant's Exhibit Book No. IX," containing twenty-seven sheets,

"Defendant's Exhibit Book No. X," containing twenty-five sheets, and

"Defendant's Exhibit Book No. XI," containing fifty-three sheets.

It is further stipulated that all of the labels contained in Defendant's Exhibit Books Nos. I-VI, inclusive, were obtained by defendant since the institution of this suit and were, when obtained, and, so far as known, still are, in actual use upon goods bought and sold as merchandise in the open market; that the products upon which said labels are used are actually being manufactured or put out by the company whose name appears thereon as maker or producer, where such name does appear.

Provided that defendant insert in Book No. VII inscriptions showing the date of first use of each piece of advertising contained therein, the quantity and period of time during which each of said pieces of advertising contained in said book was used, it is stipulated that the advertising matter contained in said Book No. VII has been actually used by defendant in the conduct of its business.

It is further stipulated that all of the labels and wrappers in Defendant's Exhibit Nos. VIII and IX were obtained by defendant since the institution of this suit and that they were, when obtained, and, so far as known, still are, actually in use upon goods bought and sold as merchandise in the open market; with the exception that the labels of the Bollinger-Babbage Co., Inc., Louisville, Ky., for "St. Elmo Brand Peanut Butter," that appears on pages 2, 13, 23 and 55 of Defendant's Exhibit Book No. VIII have been voluntarily discontinued by the said Bollinger-Babbage Co., Inc., upon protest of the plaintiff herein; that the cigarette, scrap chewing tobacco and chewing gum wrappers contained in Defendant's Exhibit Book No. X were obtained by defendant since the institution of this suit and were then, and, are now, actually in use upon the market, except where otherwise noted, and that where representations to the contrary appear attached to the wrapper, those representations are true, and, that the wrappers, posters and other advertising matter shown in Defendant's Exhibit Book No. XI, were all obtained by defendant since the institution of this suit, and were when obtained, and so far as known still are actually in use upon the open market.

Plaintiff reserves the right to object to all, any, or any part of any one of the foregoing Exhibit Books on the ground of incompetency, irrelevancy, and immateriality.

OFFIELD, BULKLEY, POOLE & SCOTT,
Attorneys for Plaintiff.

RICHARD B. CAVANAGH,
Counsel and Attorney for Defendant.

October 15, 1923.

Mr. Cavanagh: Now, if your Honor please, in connection with that stipulation—

Mr. Bulkley: Have you another—are you about to read another stipulation?

Mr. Cavanagh: Not at the present time.

Mr. Bulkley: I want to enter an objection under the stipulation.

Mr. Cavanagh: Yes, but I want to give the Court some idea of what is in those books. I want to say, if your Honor please, that we have five books here which contain labels showing marks which are used upon tobacco products and also the same names or marks as used upon other products. We have five of those, and for illustration you have before you here Omar cigarettes, a tobacco product, and a stock of Omar food products. You have Camel cigarettes, the famous cigarette of the Reynolds Company and Camel food products. You also have Mogul cigarettes, one of defendant's products, and you have Mogul food products. Now, these books contain a great many labels along that line; in fact, the first five books do, the tobacco books and other labels in other industries bearing the same name.

Mr. Bulkley: May I ask, as anticipatory of the objection, what you are seeking to prove by these books?

Mr. Cavanagh: I am simply trying, Mr. Bulkley, to explain to the Court so he won't be in a maze, so he can have some idea of what my books contain. You can put in any objection afterwards.

Now, Exhibit Book No. 6 contains no tobacco labels but contains labels with the same name or mark used by different companies but not inclusive of tobacco.

Exhibit Book No. 7, for the information of the Court, is a book devoted exclusively to the Lorillard advertising.

Exhibit Book No. 8 contains labels showing various kinds of ovals and bands and the like commonly used in business.

Exhibit Book No. 9 is devoted to a collection of labels showing the use of the color red as a background for these various labels. Exhibit Book No.

10 contains labels of cigarettes, scrap tobacco and chewing gum.

Exhibit Book No. 11 contains a collection of labels showing the use of the word "quality" or these labels which bear the word "quality" in some manner or form.

I state that to the Court simply to inform the Court as to what these books contain, so that the Court can put its finger on them when desired. If the Court wishes any further explanation—

The Court: No, no; that is sufficient.

Mr. Bulkley: Plaintiff objects to the admission in evidence of Books Nos. 1 to 6 on the ground of immateriality.

The Court: Well, I will overrule the objection at this time.

Mr. Bulkley: You reserve your decision on that?

The Court: I will overrule it at this time. You may renew it at such time as you may think it advisable.

Mr. Bulkley: Very well, sir.

Mr. Cavanagh: I have another stipulation here, if your Honor please, which reads as follows—which relates to the Pure Food Internal Revenue Law:

STIPULATION.

"UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

"DISTRICT OF NEW JERSEY.

"Beech-Nut Packing Company, Plaintiff, vs. P. Lorillard Company, Defendant.	In Equity No. 3056.

Stipulation.

Re: Pure Food and Internal Revenue Law, etc.

"It is hereby stipulated by and between counsel for the above-entitled cause, as follows:

"(1) That chewing gum is subject to the provisions of the Food & Drugs Act of the United States, while tobacco used for smoking or chewing, or snuff, and not for medicinal purposes, is not subject to this Act; but that tobacco is subject to the provisions of the Internal Revenue Laws of the United States, while gum is not subject to such Internal Revenue Laws.

"(2) It is further stipulated that the printed pamphlet entitled 'Correspondence—Beech-Nut Packing Company and P. Lorillard Company—in re: "Beech-Nut trademark,"' embodies true, complete and exact copies of the original correspondence, and that the printed copy of the correspondence may be used in this cause with the same force and effect as duly proven and acknowledged originals, the execution or genuineness of the originals being admitted by both parties."

Mr. Bulkley: Have you offered that in evidence as yet, Mr. Cavanagh?

Mr. Cavanagh: No, I will in a second. (Continuing:)

"(3) It is further stipulated that regular uncertified Patent Office copies of trademark registrations, and other governmental publications may be introduced in evidence with the same force and effect as if duly certified, subject of course to correction for error.

"OFFIELD, BULKLEY, POOLE & SCOTT,
Counsel for Plaintiff.

"RICHARD B. CAVANAGH,
Counsel for Defendant.

"Dated:
New York City,
October 29th, 1923."

Mr. Cavanagh: Now, in that connection, your Honor, I would like to offer in evidence this correspondence between the parties.

(Received in evidence and marked Exhibit D. 18.)

Mr. Cavanagh: Now, I would like to explain to the Court that in connection with some of these books which bear the tobacco trademark names and the trademark names of the food product companies, plaintiff at one time was unwilling to stipulate that the food companies had no connection with the tobacco companies or vice versa, so we entered into this stipulation after affiadvits were made.

JAMES T. NEWTON, called and sworn in behalf of the defendant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Meyer.

Q. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. James T. Newton, patent and trademark attorney and solicitor of foreign patents and trademarks.

Q. With whom are you now associated in business?

A. I am now associated with the firm of Marks & Clerk, of London, Washington, New York and Chicago.

Q. What is the business of Marks & Clerk?

A. They are solicitors of patents, trademarks, foreign and domestic.

Q. Prior to your association with Marks & Clerk, what was your business?

A. For seven or eight years I was Examiner of Trademarks in the Patent Office, and I was afterwards made Assistant Commissioner and then Commissioner of Patents, and had as my duties mostly the passing on trademarks, questions that had been appealed from the Examiner of trademarks before the Commissioner, under the statute.

Q. How long were you in the Patent Office, all told?

A. Twenty-eight years, about.

Q. While in the Patent Office you became intimately associated and familiar with the trademark practice, as I understand?

A. Yes, I had charge of the trademark division, regulated it, prescribed rules and regulations, under the statute.

Q. And for what part of the time were you in charge of the trademark division of the Patent Office?

A. About seven or eight years.

Q. Has the trademark division of the Patent Office a pamphlet giving a classification of these trademarks?

A. It has.

Q. Have you such a pamphlet?

A. I have.

Q. Where in that pamphlet do you find the classification?

A. On the last page of the pamphlet, page No. 46.

Q. What is the heading?

A. "Classification of Merchandise under the Act of May 4, 1906."

Q. How many classes are there in that list?

A. Fifty classes, numbered here from 1 to 50.

Q. And those various classes pertain to various manufactured commodities, as I understand?

A. Yes.

Q. Under what class do you find food products? Has it a number?

A. The food products are numbered in this list of classes No. 46, foods and ingredients of foods. All trademarks that are registered for foods and ingredients of foods are supposed to be in that Class 46.

Q. Do you find also in that list a class for tobacco, and if so, what is the number of that class?

A. That class is numbered 17, "Tobacco products," and in that class are supposed to be all the registrations for tobacco products, such as cigars, tobacco and cigarettes.

Q. Please look at this list of commodities that the Beech-Nut Packing Company was putting out in 1915 as appearing on the list of Complainant's Exhibit 35, and state in what class the commodities are.

A. The list you handed me of the products of the Beech-Nut Company for 1915, bulk goods such as hams and bacon, sliced bacon, sliced beef, peanut butter, tomato sauce, prepared mustard, Jaffee, cider vinegar, beans, olive oil, chewing gum, mints, conserves, jams, jellies, marmalades, and fruits, and syrups, seem to me to be all classified under the Class 46, "Foods and Ingredients of Foods."

Q. Have you made an examination to ascertain instances in which the same trademark owned by different people has been registered in two registrations respectively for tobacco and food products, and if so, produce a few instances of such?

A. Yes, I have, at your suggestion, made that examination and I find there are a great many trademarks that have been registered in quite a number of classes; some trademarks seem to be more popular than others, for instance, the mark "Climax." I find that has been registered 68 times, that is, 68 different owners of the word "Climax" have registered that in the office in various classes. P. Lorillard have registered it in the class of chewing and smoking tobacco. The Climax Coffee and Baking Product Company have registered it for coffee.

Q. In what class is that?

A. That is in Class 46; that is in the foods and ingredients of foods.

Q. You find Eureka has been registered in about 60 cases?

A. In about 68 or 70 classes, different classes.

Q. And in various classes?

A. Nearly all the classes of the office, I think that word has been registered. It is quite a popular trademark and is registered for various things.

Q. Did you procure copies of those registrations, and have you them here?

A. I have. I can furnish those copies of registrations.

Q. In how many volumes are they?

A. There are three volumes.

Q. Will you tell me which of the registrations are in Volume I, just by name?

A. In Volume I are the marks "Climax," which has been registered about 68 times; the "Between the Acts" was registered several times, four or five times; "Red Cross" was registered, oh, a great many times, probably 75 or 80 times, for various kinds of goods. It has been registered in nearly every class in the Patent Office. I suppose every class in the Patent Office has some trademark, some Red Cross trademark registered in it. "Honest" has been registered several times and "Eureka" is another popular trademark that has been registered probably 75 or 80 times.

Q. What about Volume II?

A. Volume II is another list in which some of the popular trademarks and some of the trademarks that are used by the various tobacco companies show the number of registrations granted for each one of those names. For instance, "Camel" has been registered a great many times; the word "Omar" has been registered in several classes; "Omega" has been registered in many classes. The word "Rainbow" has been registered something like 75 times, I should say, for various classes of goods. These classes, of courses, are made by the Patent Office in its attempt to follow the decisions of the courts, and these classes contain what the courts would ordinarily hold to belong to the same class of goods, similar class of goods or, as they express it, goods of the same descriptive character.

Mr. Bulkley: We object, if your Honor please, to the expression of opinion on the part of this witness as to what the courts would or would not hold, as immaterial.

The Court: Well, strike out the latter part of the answer.

Q. And Volume III contains what trademark brands?

A. Volume III is another collection of registered trademarks that have been registered in various classes. The word "Navy, "Army and Navy," the word "Polo," the word "Blue Ribbon," have been registered a great number of times; so has the word "Clipper," "Horse Shoe," "King Pin," "Liberty Bond," "Liberty Bell" and the word "Liberty" itself have been registered probably 75 times in the various classes.

Q. And, as I understand you, those volumes contain trademark words which have been registered in the class of tobacco, for tobacco products, and there are also examples of instances, numerous examples of instances where the same mark has been registered for other products, like food products?

A. Yes. Most of these marks I have read have been registered in the tobacco class and in the food products class, food and ingredients of food.

Q. By different concerns?

A. By different proprietors, by different owners.

Q. So far as you know, and from your experience in the Patent Office, when an applicant, when a trademark applicant files an application, does the examiner extend his investigation outside of the class which this application belongs to, or does he confine it to that class?

A. He, I might say almost invariably, confines it to a class that the owner of a trademark says the goods belong to. For example, if an application for registration of a trademark in tobacco products were filed in the Patent Office, a search through the class of tobacco products would be made. There would be no search made outside of that class, I don't think, in any other class, except in the class of tobacco products.

Q. So far as this classification of the United States Patent Office is concerned, to which you have referred, do you know whether there is any similar classification in other countries?

A. Yes.

Mr. Bulkley: Objected to as immaterial.

Mr. Meyer: I simply want to show it is the practice of practically all of the countries to have a trademark classification of this kind.

The Court: I will permit it. The answer is yes.

The Witness: Did you—

The Court: I heard you say yes, is that right?

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Meyer: I would like to offer in evidence the list to which the witness has referred as Exhibit D. 30—and also bound Volumes 1, 2 and 3 of the trademark registrations as Exhibits D. 31, D. 32, and D. 33, and also the Patent Office pamphlet of trademark classifications, D. 34. That is all.

Mr. Bulkley: Your Honor, we are prepared to admit all that the witness has testified to with respect to registration of different foods and different classes. We, however, do object to the admission in evidence of these large lists that have been prepared here, on the ground of immateriality.

The Court: Objection overruled. Any cross examination, Mr. Bulkley?

Mr. Bulkley: No, sir.

Mr. Cavanagh: If your Honor please, in the continuation of defendant's case at this time, there have been a great many depositions taken, and I would like to read just about three comparatively short ones to give this Court an idea of the rest of these depositions. If I have that permission I will be glad to read them.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Cavanagh: The first deposition we will read is that of Samuel Rackmales, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, at Baltimore, Maryland. Direct examination by Mr. Cavanagh, Volume I of defendant's record, page 326.

(Deposition read by Mr. Cavanagh.)

Mr. Cavanagh: I will now read the deposition of J. S. Weiner, taken on behalf of the defendant. It appears in Volume II of defendant's record, page 795.

(Deposition read by Mr. Cavanagh.)

Mr. Cavanagh: I just have one more deposition, the deposition of Barnett Dickstein, presented on behalf of P. Lorillard & Company which appears in Volume II, page 1194 of defendant's record.

(Deposition read by Mr. Cavanagh.)

Mr. Cavanagh: I think that is sufficient, your Honor, to give you an illustration or an idea of the character of some of the testimony.

Mr. Bulkley: Mr. Bailey, will you take the witness stand?

HOWARD C. BAILEY, called as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Bulkley.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Bailey?

A. Port Washington, Long Island.

Q. What is your business?

A. Advertising manager of the International Motor Company.

Q. Did you ever see any packages of cigarettes with the word "Beech-Nut" on those cigarettes?

A. I saw these Beech-Nut cigarettes on the counter in one of the Shulte stores some months ago; I don't know exactly, and I didn't buy any, but I simply took it for granted they were Beech-Nut products.

Mr. Milton: Just a minute, Mr. Witness, not so fast. I move to strike out all of the answer after he said he had seen them on the cigar counter.

The Court: Strike out.

Q. Were you familiar with the products made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company at the time or prior to your having seen these Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir; I am familiar with the household products.

Q. To what extent are you familiar?

A. To the extent that we buy quite a few of them, my wife buys them.

Q. Sir?

A. My wife buys them frequently, serves them on the table.

Q. What was the impression made upon you by reason of having seen these Beech-Nut cigarettes, with these words, "Beech-Nut," upon the package?

A. I naturally took it for granted that they were produced by the Beech-Nut Company.

Q. How long a time did you remain under that impression?

A. Until about two days ago.

Q. How did you learn you were not correct in that impression?

A. I was talking to Mr. Anderson of the McKann Agency, and he happened to mention that there was a difference on that subject, and we talked it over.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

Cross examination by Mr. Milton.

Q. Mr. Bailey, when you saw these Beech-Nut cigarettes on the counter in the Shulte store, you didn't buy any, I assume?

A. No, sir.

Q. You just happened to see one or more packages on the counter?

A. On display.

Q. And that was, you think, during 1923?

A. Why; yes, yes.

Q. During this year. Are you still using in your home the food products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the assumption, however erroneous it might have been on your part, that the Beech-Nut Packing Company was the manufacturer of a cigarette, had no influence upon you in the purchase of these food products after that?

A. No.

Q. You were still willing to buy all of the food products which you could use of that company, notwithstanding the fact that it had gone into the tobacco business, so far as you assumed?

A. Quite right.

Q. When you saw this display, did you take any of the packages of the cigarettes into your hands, or just see them lying on the counter?

A. Saw them on the stand and took it for granted.

Q. That was while you were in buying some article of tobacco or something else?

A. Buying tobacco.

Q. Are you a cigarette smoker?

A. Yes, sir; part of the time.

Mr. Milton: I think that is all.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

We have a witness coming at three, but rather than delay the proceedings or annoy the Court any further, we will close.

The Court: If the other side can fill in—in the meantime, it won't annoy me any.

Mr. Milton: As I said this morning to your Honor, when the counsel on both sides were in conference early this week, I think on Monday of this week, it was stated by the other side that they expected to take all of Tuesday and all of today. This sudden termination of the plaintiff's case has left us in the position where I don't think we can go on this afternoon beyond the point which we have gone. We will be prepared to start early in the morning and finish tomorrow, assuming that the cross examination is no longer than the examination in chief, and we will finish well by four o'clock, or before that.

The Court: And you will use Friday for argument of the case?

Mr. Milton: I think there was some agreement between counsel that the testimony should be written out.

The Court: First.

Mr. Milton: First, and that a sixty-day period should intervene for the preparation of briefs, if this course is satisfactory to your Honor, of course.

The Court: That would give the Court plenty of time to forget all about the case.

Mr. Scott: The understanding, your Honor, was—I think the defendant requested that the argument be put off to a later date, and we responded that we would accede to that, to the extent of asking the Court, joining them in a request, ask the Court for time to file briefs, and if the Court wanted some more argument after that we would argue, but we put that entirely as to whether the Court wanted the argument—

The Court: You mean oral argument?

Mr. Scott: Yes.

The Court: The Court wants oral argument at some time or other.

Mr. Scott: Whether the Court wanted it later or at the close of the trial—we said if the Court wanted one later, it would be perfectly agreeable, and that is all we said. We didn't try to arrange the matter, so I think that is simply a matter for the Court to state its wishes on, whether we shall argue it now or later, or whether the Court wishes to hear some arguments now or some after the briefs. It seems to me it is simply a matter for the Court to express its wishes on.

The Court: Well, we will discuss that tomorrow. A witness will be here at three?

Mr. Bulkley: That is what we were told.

The Court: All right, I will wait until three.

Mr. Milton: We can perhaps take another witness and utilize as much of the time this afternoon as is possible.

The Court: All right.

WILLIAM R. PERKINS, called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Milton.

Q. You live where, Mr. Perkins?
A. Montclair, New Jersey.
Q. What is your business or profession?
A. I am a lawyer.
Q. Associated or connected with whom?

A. I am counsel for the P. Lorillard Company.

Q. And have been counsel for the P. Lorillard Company for how long?

A. Well, off and on since December, 1911. The last time I came with them was in the spring of 1917, I think, 1918.

Q. You have been continuously with the Lorillard Company since the spring of 1917?

A. Yes.

Q. And prior to the spring of 1917 you have been counsel for the company off and on?

A. From December, 1911, until about December, 1913.

Q. Prior to December, 1911, were you associated or connected with any of the companies, the tobacco companies?

A. With the American Tobacco Company.

Q. When was the present P. Lorillard Company formed?

A. In the latter part of November, 1911.

Q. How long prior to December, 1911, had you been associated with the American Tobacco Company?

A. Since October, 1906.

Q. And in what capacity?

A. In the legal department, as one of the counsel.

Q. I show you a paper, Mr. Perkins, which is headed, "P. Lorillard Company," and under that "cigarettes," consisting of a number of sheets, 16 sheets, upon which appear the names of various cigarettes, little cigars, plug tobaccos, long cut tobaccos, plug cut tobaccos, granulated tobaccos, clippings and scrap tobaccos, and then various names under the caption of Luhrmann & Wilbern, fine cut tobaccos, packed cheroots and cigars, Federal Cigar Company brands, little cigars, another sheet headed "Federal Cigar Company, Active cigar brands, Federal Cigar Company," ditto, another sheet the same, the same on another sheet, the same on another, and the same on the last, and ask you what you know about the preparation of that paper?

A. In or about the year 1908, the Government of the United States began a suit in equity under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law against the American Tobacco Company and its subsidiary and affiliated companies, charging that they were a combination and monopoly within the terms of that Act, and after some years in which the litigation proceeded, the Supreme Court of the United States in May, 1911, rendered an opinion holding the American Tobacco Company and these affiliated and subsidiary companies a combination and a monopoly in restraint of trade under that Act, and sent the case back to the Circuit Court of the Second District of New York to work out and enter a decree which should restore lawful conditions in the opinion of that Court. Such a decree was worked out and was entered in November, 1911, by the Federal Circuit Court of the Second District of New York, and this paper was prepared, and at the time that decree was entered, shortly after, in the carrying out of that decree, was given to the P. Lorillard Company stating the brands which under the decree it became entitled to get.

Q. Let me interrupt you right there. Have you a copy of the decree here? Is it this pamphlet (indicating)?

A. Yes. The whole proceeding is reported in 191 Federal Reporter, but there are printed pamphlets of the decree made at that time.

Q. I want you to refer us to the particular paragraphs of the decree which provide for what you have just said. Is that the decree (indicating)?

A. Yes, this is a printed copy of the decree.

Q. Oh, is it, all right.

A. That was made at that time, yes.

Mr. Bulkley: It seems to us, your Honor, that the witness should not express his opinion as to the findings under that decree, but let the decree speak for itself.

The Court: He is going to point out a paragraph.

Mr. Milton: I am not going to ask this witness to construe the decree. I am going to ask him to point out that paragraph which he—

Mr. Bulkley: Then I move that the latter part of his answer which consists of a conclusion as to what the findings in the decree were, shall be stricken.

The Court: I forget just now what he did say.

(The last answer of the witness repeated by stenographer as follows:)

"The whole proceeding is reported in 191 Federal Reporter, but there are printed pamphlets of the decree made at that time."

Mr. Bulkley: Just preceding that.

(The answer was repeated by the stenographer as follows:)

"Such decree was worked out and was entered in November, 1911, by the Federal Circuit Court of the Second District of New York, and this paper was prepared and at the time the decree was entered, shortly after, in the carrying out of that decree, was given to the P. Lorillard Company, stating the brands which under the decree it became entitled to get."

Mr. Bulkley: That is the conclusion to which we object.

The Court: Strike out the latter part of that.

Mr. Milton: "The brands to which under the decree it became entitled."

The Court: Yes, just that part.

A. On page 17 of this pamphlet is provision F of the decree and that is the provision that provides for what we called at the time the division of the direct business of the American Tobacco Company. If I may explain that, the American Tobacco Company controlled a good many companies through stock ownership, and the decree required it to distribute the stock in various of those companies.

Mr. Bulkley: Now I move to strike that.

The Court: I will let that stand. It is a reference to facts. I will let it stand.

Mr. Bulkley: But I think not within the knowledge of the witness.

The Court: I beg your pardon?

Mr. Bulkley: Perhaps not facts within the knowledge of the witness.

The Court: You may ascertain the source of his knowledge.

A. (Continuing.) That portion of the decree is Section E of it, which says: "The American Tobacco Company will distribute among its common stockholders by way of dividends, and to be charged to its surplus, all of its securities of the following described classes, whether now owned by it or bought by it from American Cigar Company, as hereinbefore set forth, or bought by it from P. Lorillard Company, as just hereinbefore set forth, or received by it by way of dividends from any of the accessory companies defendant, as hereinbefore set forth, to wit.:

"American Snuff Company—"

And then follows a list of those companies.

Q. Do you find the Luhrmann & Wilbern Company in that list?

A. Not in that list. Then comes provision F, which provides—I will read from the decree—"There will be organized a new corporation called Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company, and a new corporation called P. Lorillard Company, and The American Tobacco Company will sell, assign and convey to these two companies factories, plants, brands and businesses, and capital stocks of tobacco manufacturing corporations, as shown in Exhibit 'A' hereto attached."

And Exhibit A reads: "To P. Lorillard Company: All the rights of The American Tobacco Company in the present P. Lorillard Company, to wit: all the common stock and $1,596,100 at par out of a total issue of $2,000,000 of eight per cent. preferred stock; it is contemplated that as a part of these reorganizations the Lorillard Company, as at present constituted, be wound up and the new company be organized, taking over assets of the P. Lorillard Company;

S. Anargyros, a company engaged in the manufacture of cigarettes, in which The American Tobacco Company owns all the stock, and of which it has always owned all the stock;

Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company, a company engaged in the manufacture of scrap tobacco (a kind of smoking tobacco), of which The American Tobacco Company owns, and has for many years owned, all the stock;

Philadelphia Branch B at Philadelphia, Wilmington Branch B at Wilmington, Penn Street Branch at Brooklyn, Danville Branch B at Danville, and Ellis Branch B at Baltimore, branches of The American Tobacco Company manufacturing little cigars, the principal brand being 'Between the Acts';

Federal Cigar Company, a company all of whose stock is, and has always been, owned by American Cigar Company, but which, as hereinbefore provided, is to be purchased for cash by The American Tobacco Company."

Q. Now, what connection was there between those provisions of the decree and the schedule which you have read and the paper which I have shown you consisting of a number of sheets that I specified?

A. That was the paper which was gotten up and delivered to the Lorillard Company, the new Lorillard Company, which this decree which I have read, required to be formed, as showing the brands that it got under this decree, in the division of the assets, under this decree, of the American Tobacco Company.

Q. And do you know in whose possession this paper has been ever since that time in 1911?

A. Why, it was in the possession of the officers of the Lorillard Company.

Q. I refer you to the fifth sheet, and ask you to read the names of the brands listed under the caption Luhrmann & Wilbern?

A. "Bag Pipe," "Beech-Nut," "Honest Scrap," "Natural Leaf," "Old Nut," "Polar Bear," "Scrap Iron."

Q. What had you to do with the preparation of the lists, Mr. Perkins?

A. I represented the American Tobacco Company's legal department in the preparation of them.

Q. Did you actively take part in the getting up of the lists of the brands that were divided among the different companies?

A. Oh, sure. I talked with the officers of the companies and we together prepared that list, at the same time, we prepared, of course, lists to be gotten by the American, and lists to go to Liggett & Myers.

Mr. Milton: We offer this, if the Court please.

(Received and marked Exhibit D. 35.)

Q. I now show you, Mr. Perkins, paper purporting to be assignment of business, and so forth, American Tobacco Company, to P. Lorillard Company, dated December 1, 1911, and ask you if you have ever seen that before?

A. I drew that.

Q. You drew it. And did you know the signature of Mr. Percival Hill? Is that it?

A. Yes, that is the signature of Mr. Percival Hill, also Mr. Willcox, the secretary. There is my pencil memorandum "O. K." made at the time.

Q. Made on or about the 1st day of December, 1911?

A. On or about that date.

Q. You recognize your initials?

A. Oh, yes, those are my initials.

Q. In connection with what transaction was this paper prepared?

A. The distribution of the assets of the American to the Lorillard, pursuant to the provision of the decree I have just read.

Mr. Milton: We offer that and ask that it be marked.

A. (Continuing.) You will see that that is the language of the decree.

(Received and marked Exhibit D. 36.)

Mr. Milton: I am going to call the Court's attention to it in a minute. The emphasis that we desire to lay upon this, and I will call the Court's attention to the pertinent part in the assignment, is: "All the rights of the American Tobacco Company in the old P. Lorillard Company, to wit: all the common stock and $1,596,100 at par out of a total issue of $2,000,000 of eight per cent. preferred stock." Following the language of the decree. "All the stock of S. Anargyros, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, engaged in the manufacture of cigarettes;

"All the stock of Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company, a corporation of the State of New Jersey, engaged in the manufacture of scrap tobacco;

"All the stock of Federal Cigar Company, a New Jersey corporation, engaged in the manufacture of cigars;

"Philadelphia Branch B at Philadelphia; Wilmington Branch B at Wilmington; Penn Street Branch at Brooklyn; Danville Branch B at Danville, Virginia; and Ellis Branch B at Baltimore; all branches of The American Tobacco Company, engaged in the manufacture of little cigars, the principal brand being 'Between the Acts.'

"Each of the foregoing properties is conveyed as a going concern."

That language is preceded by the general assignment clause which sets over to the vendee, the Lorillard Company and its successors and assigns, the factories, plants, brands and businesses and capital stocks of tobacco manufacturing corporations as follows: which I have read, your Honor.

Cross examination by Mr. Scott.

Q. In compiling this list, Mr. Perkins, which was referred to by you containing a dozen or so sheets, do you remember where you got the information to compile the lists of different brands?

A. From the records of the American Tobacco Company.

Q. What was your procedure? Simply to go to the records of these old companies and copy out lists of brands they had used?

A. We took the brands of the various companies, just as their records showed.

Q. Simply went to the records of those companies, found out all the brand names that appeared on their books and copied them into here?

A. We took the brands they thought they had a right to convey.

Q. That they had a right to convey?

A. Yes.

Q. But you simply went to the records of these companies—I want the practical procedure—didn't you, and took off from those records the names of all the brands that appeared there?

A. I went to the officials of these companies, and in conjunction with them and their records, we made out what we regarded that these companies were entitled to of the various brands under that decree according to the best information we could get.

Q. Did you omit any that appeared on the books of those companies?

A. Not that I recollect.

Q. You made a sweeping and complete list?

A. I couldn't tell you about that, Mr. Scott. We made what we thought they ought to have under all the circumstances.

Q. So this merely represents what you individually thought they ought to have?

A. No, what the officers thought, too. It isn't my individual thought.

Q. And you say that you don't remember omitting anything, simply made a complete list of all the brands you could find on the records of these companies?

A. I cannot say that, Mr. Scott. I say that this is what we made and delivered and what the officers and myself concluded then they were entitled to. I cannot tell you whether we took all on the list or not. I cannot just remember that, I cannot remember that.

Q. You don't remember then, the origin from which you got these names?

A. I got it from the records in the office.

Q. What are those records?

A. Books and papers of those companies.

Q. What kind of books?

A. Various books they had, their conveyances, their brand books.

Q. What is a brand book?

A. Their various records that they had.

Q. Did each of those companies keep a separate book called a brand book and have a list of its brands in it?

A. I think the American had something like that, if I recall. I don't recall that the others did.

Q. What form was this record in as possessed by the other companies?

A. Why, they had their price lists and they had the conveyances to them, when they acquired them, and all those things. We went by all of them.

Q. So this list, as a practical proposition, is a summary copied off, of the names that you found on the brand books and upon the price lists and brands named in conveyances that you found in the files of these old companies?

A. Yes.

Q. That is what this is?

A. It is the brands we ascertained, and the officers said and we agreed at that time, should be included. Now, whether it was all of the brands or whether they omitted some I cannot tell you, because that is what we decided ought to be put over to these various companies.

Q. Do you remember at this date omitting any brand whose name you found on those old records?

A. No, I don't recall any.

Q. That is all.

Mr. Milton: That is as far as we can go today.

Mr. Bulkley: We have two witnesses.

HUGH PETERS, called and sworn in behalf of the plaintiff, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Bulkley.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Peters?

A. Englewood, New Jersey.

Q. What is your business?

A. In partnership in Wall street, Mackay & Company, I am one of the partners.

Q. What is the general nature of that business?

A. Banking and investment business.

Q. And do you buy and sell listed stocks?

A. Unlisted?

Q. Listed and unlisted?

A. All classes of securities.

Q. Did you ever buy and sell any of the stock of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes, sir; sold some today.

Q. Did you ever see any cigarette packages bearing upon them the word "Beech-Nut?"

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long ago was that, about?

A. It was in the late spring or early summer of 1921.

Q. What was the impression made upon your mind by seeing such packages of cigarettes with those words upon them?

A. I was very much surprised.

Q. Why?

A. My estimate of the Beech-Nut Company was that they wouldn't undertake that type of business.

Q. Were you previously familiar with the general type of business of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Yes, sir; we had handled some of their preferred stock.

Q. Well, I mean more particularly did you know of the variety of products which they were making and selling upon the market?

A. In connection with that preferred stock issue, I myself had to write the circulars, so I had to investigate it quite thoroughly.

Q. State whether you ever heard any questions asked or any inquiries made by anyone which would lead you to believe that they thought the same concern which put out the Beech-Nut cigarette and the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco also put out the Beech-Nut chewing gum and the Beech-Nut food products?

Mr. Milton: Just a minute, Mr. Witness. Will the Court direct the witness to answer the question yes or no.

The Court: You can answer that question yes or no.

The Witness: May I have that question repeated again? It seemed to me back end foremost. I didn't quite get that clearly.

Mr. Bulkley: Well, I am reading it from the defendant's record.

(Question repeated by stenographer.)

A. Yes.

Q. How often did you hear such inquiries or comments?

Mr. Milton: Objected to on the ground it is immaterial and irrelevant.

The Court: I will permit it.

A. I should say at least 20 times.

Q. And how were they made to you?

Mr. Milton: Objected to.

The Court: I will permit it.

A. How were the questions made to me?

Q. Yes. How did you hear those questions, under what circumstances?

A. Well, I can give you one or two illustrations if I am permitted.

Mr. Milton: No, I would have to object to that.

The Court: You don't object?

Mr. Milton: I would have to object.

Q. Well, I put that in the form of a question to the witness, and ask him to state such instances or illustrations that he has in mind?

Mr. Milton: I object to that, sir.

The Court: I sustain the objection to that.

The Witness: Perhaps I can answer the other question.

(Question repeated by stenographer as follows:)

"Q. How were the questions made to you, how did you hear those questions, under what circumstances?"

A. In one instance from a person in a more or less similar line of business with myself who knew that we handled the Beech-Nut products and who spoke of it to me with some surprise.

Mr. Milton: Well, now, I move to strike that out, if the Court please.

The Court: Strike out "and who spoke of it to me with some surprise."

Q. What did he say to you?

Mr. Milton: Objected to on the ground it is incompetent.

The Court: I sustain the objection.

(Exhibits before offered in evidence received and marked as follows:

D. 30, Judge Newton's trademark list.

D. 31, D. 32 and D. 33, bound volumes of trademark registrations.

D. 34, pamphlet of trademark classifications.)

Q. Have you found in connection with the sale of the stock of the Beech-Nut Company that the impressions which were gained by you and others had any effect at all upon the sale of Beech-Nut stock?

Mr. Milton: Objected to.

The Court: I will permit that.

A. The best answer I can give to that is that the fair proportion of the cases in which this was spoken of was by stockholders who asked for information in regard to it, because they thought it affected the value of their stock adversely.

Mr. Milton: I move to strike that out, if the Court please.

The Court: Strike it out, it is not responsive.

Q. In your opinion as a broker, selling the stock of the Beech-Nut Company, has the impression that the Beech-Nut Packing Company is engaged in the sale of tobacco and cigarettes in any way affected the sale of the stock of that company?

Mr. Milton: Just answer that yes or no, if you will, please.

The Witness: I don't believe I can without creating an improper impression.

Mr. Milton: Then I object to the question, sir, on the ground it calls for a conclusion.

Mr. Bulkley: I think the witness, if the Court please, may answer the question.

The Court: Why can't it be answered yes or no?

2542

Mr. Bulkley: I think it can.

The Witness: I think it calls for a conclusion.

The Court: We don't want any conclusions.

Mr. Bulkley: May not the witness be permitted to answer it directly and then add such explanation as he may think is necessary to guard his answer as he seems to desire to so do.

Mr. Milton: That is objected to; I don't think that is a subject for opinion evidence.

The Court: I don't think it is either. I sustain the objection.

Q. When you saw this package of these cigarettes, were the packages covered with some translucent paper?

A. Yes, sir; I purchased a package in order to find out the maker.

Q. And did you perceive the name of P. Lorillard Company on the package of cigarettes that you purchased?

A. Not until after I had made the purchase and examined it carefully. I bought it under artificial light in the Shulte store; it was on exhibition in the basket there, with a label, quite a fair-sized label, about so big, "Beech-Nut cigarettes," and the price, but no name of any maker visible. I at that time didn't know who made it.

Mr. Milton: I move to strike out all the witness' answer after the words "I bought it under artificial light."

The Court: No, I will permit it to stand. He states what he did.

Mr. Milton: Will you permit the witness to state what appeared on the advertising card?

The Court: Yes, you may ask him that, if counsel does not.

Mr. Milton: Counsel did, that is my objection. The witness is now describing an advertising card which we don't see.

The Court: I will permit it to stand. It tells the condition under which he bought the package of cigarettes, what he saw there, how it was displayed.

Q. What did you do in order to ascertain who was the maker of these cigarettes, not being able to see the name under this light?

A. I happened to have this original package in my pocket. It has a glacine cover on it.

Q. What is that that you hold in your hand?

A. That is the original package I purchased at that time, which I put in the bottom drawer of my desk after sampling the cigarette. It has a glacine cover, and I pressed down on the cover and held it to the light this way (indicating), and then could read the name "Lorillard."

Q. What impression did you get, first as to who put out those cigarettes, from seeing finally the name of P. Lorillard Company on the package which you bought?

A. I then got the definite impression they were put out by P. Lorillard Company.

Cross examination by Mr. Milton.

Q. What period of time elapsed between your first impression that the cigarettes were put out by Beech-Nut Packing Company and your information acquired in the manner you have described that they were put out really by Lorillard?

A. The length of time it required to make the purchase and examine the package, part of a minute.

Q. I see. So that practically simultaneously your impression was corrected?

A. As soon as I made the examination.

Q. Yes, sir. Was this in a Shulte store that you—

A. It was in a Shulte stand, not a Shulte store.

Q Where was the stand?

A. My memory of it is it was the stand that is in the Erie subway, Erie passageway in Jersey City, but I am not certain of that exact location, that is my impression.

Q. For what purpose had you stopped at the stand?

A. I stopped because I saw the exhibition of these cigarettes right beside the Beech-Nut chewing gum and other products for sale.

Q. You stopped, saw the package—

A. I stopped because I saw it, happened to glance over there and saw it.

Q. Saw the word "Beech-Nut" on the package of cigarettes, bought it for the purpose of finding out who the maker was—

A. I bought it because I was completely thunderstruck with the idea that the Beech-Nut would manufacture those cigarettes.

Q. Let us understand that, Mr. Witness. If your impression was when you saw the package that the Beech-Nut Packing Company was the producer of this cigarette, why did you buy it, to confirm that impression?

A. Because I could hardly believe my eyes.

Q. So that you were not deceived, were you?

A. Deceived in the purchase?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I made the purchase to prevent being deceived.

Q. Precisely. When you saw this package with the word "Beech-Nut" on it you bought it not as the casual public might buy, if I might use that impression, but for the specific purpose of ascertaining whether or not the Beech-Nut Company was the producer and manufacturer; that is right?

A. I certainly did, because I heard only the day before they were making it, and had denied it, through my knowledge of the company and belief that they wouldn't do it, but I had no official knowledge.

Q. That is the first time you mentioned you heard it the day before, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had denied it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that when you saw the package of cigarettes on the counter of the Shulte stand, then you were not deceived, were you?

A. I was under the impression I may have given an incorrect statement the day before to a client of ours.

Q. And you stopped to buy the cigarettes to find out whether or not that was true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you a cigarette smoker?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What cigarette do you smoke?

A. Lucky Strikes.

Q. Were you then selling the preferred stock of the Beech-Nut Company?

A. We had completed the issuing of it; it was only in so far as we deal in the market from time to time, as stock may be offered, that is all.

Q. Which you, of course, would do for any customer, sell any reputable stock to any man who has the money?

A. Yes. We more or less make the market for that particular stock. They come to us because we were connected with the original issue.

Q. You did market the issue of the original stock?

A. We assisted in it.

Q. When was that?

A. I don't recall the exact time, prior to this some little time.

Q. How long prior to it?

A. Couldn't tell you that without checking up.

Q. Approximately.

A. Well, at least some months, I would say at least some months.

Q. Can you fix how many months?

A. I can easily fix it by checking back, but not from memory.

Q. As a part of the campaign of marketing and selling the preferred stock of this company, were you furnished with a list of the products which it produced and manufactured and sold?

A. At that time, yes.

Q. And cigarettes were on that list?

A. They were not.

Q. Nor chewing tobacco?

A. No, sir.

Q. Nor tobaccos of any kind?

A. No, sir.

Q. So that when you approached the Shulte stand for the purpose of purchasing that pack of cigarettes, you were in the frame of mind of one who believed that the Beech-Nut Packing Company did not in fact manufacture or sell this cigarette?

A. I believed that before I saw the package even. I was somewhat shaken in the belief by the sight of the package.

Q. I say, when you approached the stand for the purpose of buying it, did you then believe—

A. I was not entirely convinced, no. I still thought it must be something wrong somewhere.

Q. This was really an investigation that you were carrying out, was it, for your own purposes? Is that right?

A. Well, yes, it was.

Q. How did the facts which you have just testified to become known to the Beech-Nut Packing Company and its lawyers?

A. Why, I was quite surprised at the fact that the Lorillard Company should use a brand so similar, and I thought that the Beech-Nut Company were probably protected in the use of that brand, and I wrote and supplied them with that information, more or less as an inquiry at that time, and heard nothing from it since.

Q. When was that?

A. That was only a comparatively short time after I had made that purchase. I knew of no case at the time.

Q. Have you fixed the time when you made the purchase?

A. In the late spring or early summer of 1921.

Q. Of 1921?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Peters, were you a user of Beech-Nut Packing Company products prior to the time you made this purchase of cigarettes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you still a user of the products?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was there about the apparent addition of cigarettes to the Beech-Nut line that surprised and thunderstruck you?

A. Why, it seemed somewhat of a departure from their policy, and from the character of their business.

Q. You mean the goods are so different?

A. I mean that.

Q. Separate and distinct classes?

A. While they have a very diverse business in the main it is food products of some sort, and this was somewhat of a departure.

Q. You regarded that as a distinct line, I suppose?

A. What do you mean?

Q. You regarded that, meaning tobacco, as a separate and distinct line?

A. I regarded it as somewhat apart from their usual line of products, yes.

Mr. Milton: I think that is all.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

PHILIP V. R. VAN WIRTH, called as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Bulkley.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Van Wirth?

A. In Summit, New Jersey.

Q. What is your business?

A. What is my business?

Q. What is your business; yes, sir.

A. I am the secretary and treasurer of the Electrical Securities Company.

Q. Did you ever see any package of cigarettes bearing the words "Beech-Nut" upon it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where and under what circumstances?

A. Why, I saw them on some cigarettes packages.

Q. Where?

A. In New York.

Q. Whereabouts in New York?

A. On a stand in New York where they sold cigarettes and various other things.

Q. What was the impression that you gained from seeing those words upon that package?

A. I thought that the Beech-Nut Company had added another line to their ordinary line.

Q. Were you familiar with the Beech Nut products before you saw this package with the name of the brand on it, "Beech-Nut"?

A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. To what extent?

A. Well, I had bought them, candies and the Beech-Nut bacon, and ginger ale, I think that was all that I—

Q. Was this a tobacco stand?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was it?

A. It was a newspaper stand and candies and newspapers and various things of that sort.

Q. How long a time did you remain under the impression that cigarettes were being sold by the Beech-Nut Packing Company under the name Beech-Nut?

A. Why, I remained under that impression until I inquired. I didn't investigate then at all. I simply saw them, noticed them and passed on, and then I was interested because I happened to be an owner of Beech-Nut stock.

Q. Of whom did you purchase that stock?

A. I don't remember now. I purchased it through the market, and I inquired, I thought the Beech-Nut Company had gone into another additional line.

Q. Of whom did you make this inquiry?

A. I made the inquiry of a friend, through whom I bought the stock, I think.

Q. Do you remember from whom you purchased this stock of the Beech-Nut Company? Who was the agent?

A. Yes, I purchased it through Mackay and Company, Mr. Murray of Mackay and Company.

Mr. Bulkley: That is all.

Cross examination by Mr. Milton.

Q. That is the house that the last witness, Mr. Peters, is connected with?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is Mr. Peters the friend of whom you inquired about the manufacture of Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. I spoke to Mr. Murray; I think probably Mr. Peters, too.

Q. I see. Did Mr. Peters arrange for your coming here today to testify?

A. He did.

Q. About how long in point of time did you remain under the impression that the Beech-Nut Packing Company was a producer of these cigarettes?

A. Why, about an hour or so, until I inquired. I had that impression until I inquired about it.

Q. You didn't buy any of these cigarettes?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was this at or about the time you had acquired the stock of the Beech-Nut Company?

A. This was some time after that, I think, I acquired the stock previous, I owned the stock at that time.

Q. You had purchased the stock previously?

A. I had purchased it previously; yes, sir.

Mr. Milton: That is all, I think.

Mr. Bulkley: The plaintiff rests.

(An adjournment was thereupon taken until Thursday, November 1st, 1923, at 10:30 o'clock A. M.)

Beech-Nut Packing Co.,
vs.
P. Lorillard Company.

Thursday, November 1, 1923, 10:30 A. M.

(Case continued.)

Appearances as before.

Mr. Johnson: If the Court please, the plaintiff has several exhibits which have been stipulated into this case with the consent of defendant's counsel. Plaintiff would now like to offer those formally in evidence. They are Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 12, the scrap book of circulars and letters; Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 28, board of Beech-Nut labels displayed before the public, 1891 to 1921 —that is that big board against the wall; Plaintiff's Exhibit 32, collection of defendant's posters and signs. That is the collection against the rear wall, mounted on some boards in three panels; Plaintiff's Exhibit 33, scrap book, collection of labels used by defendant; that is this collection here. These are all labels supplied by defendant and stipulated into this case. Plaintiff's Exhibit 34, scrap book, collection of specimens of defendant's publication advertising; that is this little book. The stipulations covering these are in the printed record. I presume your Honor does not care to have them read?

The Court: Oh, no.

Mr. Johnson: In addition to that, with consent of the defendant's counsel, we would like to offer certified copies of the decisions in the Patent Office case, between these same parties, the record of which has been stipulated into this case. That is Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 41, certified copy of the decision of the Examiner of Interferences in Patent Office Trade Mark Opposition No. 2805, and Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 42, certified copy of the decision of the Assistant Commissioner of Patents in Patent Office Trade Mark Opposition No. 2805.

Mr. Cavanagh: If your Honor please, I would just like to state with respect to the exhibit board back there of the Beech-Nut advertising of the Lorillard Company that that does not include a complete collection of everything that Lorillard has ever put out respecting the advertising of its cigarettes. Of course, we have had a great many pieces of different advertising, as your Honor will understand.

(Exhibits referred to by plaintiff's counsel, are received and given the respective marks which counsel enumerated.)

DAVID H. BALL, called and sworn in behalf of the defendant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Cavanagh.

Q. Your name is David H. Ball; you are of legal age; you reside in Mount Vernon, New York, and you are vice-president of P. Lorillard Company, the defendant in this case. Is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. In what line of business is the P. Lorillard Company engaged in?

A. Tobacco business.

Q. How long have you yourself been engaged in the tobacco business?

A. In my thirty-fourth year.

Q. Would you please give us a brief history of your experience in the tobacco business, including the positions you have held, the lines of the business in which you have been engaged and the like?

A. In the spring of 1890, I secured a position with Marburg Brothers, who were then engaged in the tobacco business in Baltimore, Maryland, as a retail salesman, and what we term a missionary man, advertising and selling to the retail trade and producing business by tacking signs and sampling the consumers. I remained in that capacity with Marburg Brothers until they sold out to the American Tobacco Company, which I think was in 1891, at which time I went with the American Tobacco Company and continued in their employ in that capacity until 1892, at which time I was sent to St. Louis and put in charge of one of their departments, called the Fine Smoking Department, as head salesman in that department, and I remained in that capacity several years and from time to time, as the American Tobacco Company's business grew and my efficiency seemed to impress them, and I was given charge of their various lines from time to time until it included plug tobacco, smoking tobacco, cigarettes, little cigars, cheroots, big cigars, snuff, and, in fact, practically every commodity in the tobacco line. I remained in St. Louis in that capacity until 1904, at which time I was brought to New York City, and put in charge with another gentleman of the Bull Durham and Cut Plug Department, where I remained about six years, I think, and in January, 1910, I was made assistant to one of their vice-presidents, Mr. P. S. Hill, and remained in that position until the dissolution of the American Tobacco Company, at which time I was appointed as vice-president of the P. Lorillard Company, and have occupied that position continuously up to the present time.

Q. During these years did you sell and supervise the selling of tobacco products throughout the United States?

A. Well, not during all of those years. During the time I was located in St. Louis, of course, I only had a specific territory, Missouri and Southern Illinois. When I was a retail man, I worked Minnesota, North Dakota and part of Wisconsin. After I came to New York, then I had the supervision over the Cut Plug and the Bull Durham business together with another gentleman, for the entire United States, and since I have been with the Lorillard Company, I have had supervision over the line which I have looked after for the entire United States.

Q. Now, during these years of your experience since you have been in the tobacco business, can you mention a few of the famous brands of tobacco which have come under your charge in the selling of the same; give us the names of some of them?

A. Bull Durham, Battle Axe, Duke's Mixture, Honest Scrap, Beech-Nut and Mechanics Delight, Climax, Planet, Sensation, Union Leader, and numerous other ones.

Q. In all your experience in the tobacco business have you ever known a tobacco concern that made and put out food products such as bacon, jelly, preserves, soft drinks, chewing gum or mint candies?

A. I never have.

Q. In all your experience in the tobacco business have you ever known of any concern that put out such food products as I have enumerated making and putting out a tobacco product?

A. I never have.

Q. In your experience have you ever known of different concerns using the same trademark, one for a tobacco product and the other for a food product?

A. Quite frequently. In fact, the custom is quite general.

Q. How generally, if at all, has it been the custom for concerns not engaged in the production of tobacco products to use trademark brands which are used by manufacturers of tobacco products?

A. It has been quite general. In fact, there are quite a few of our brands alone used for various products.

Q. Can you name some of them?

A. Yes, sir. We have one exhibited there, Mogul, and there are our brands of Comet and Climax.

Mr. Scott: Before the witness continues this answer, I wish to object to this line of testimony on the ground of its immateriality. The testimony is evidently directed to showing that these labels are used upon different products, and it stops there. The parties are not parties to the case. It has no bearing upon any issue in this case. It was simply proving the existence of this mark upon different classes of goods by different makers. As far as that goes, it can in no way affect any suit here; there is no foundation for it, or even proof that the same parties do not own both lines of goods.

Mr. Cavanagh: This goes right to the very heart of this case, if the Court please. In their charge they have alleged that the goods are practically the same class and belong to the same group. Now it comes down to this question of different description of goods and different classifications. We are entitled to show that it is a general rule that the same name that is used for tobacco is used for other products, so that any member of the public would know that that is a custom or a general rule in the business. I think under every rule of evidence we are entitled to show that. This is of the essence of the charge against it.

The Court: I will not eliminate this class of evidence. I think it would be unwise to keep this class of evidence out. I will overrule your objection.

Q. To your knowledge for how long has this been the practice or the rule?

A. As long as I have been in business.

Q. Of using tobacco trademarks in other lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever known any objections, to your knowledge, to be made of this practice, outside of this suit?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has any concern that you have been connected with in an official capacity, to your knowledge, ever made any objection to any other concern not in the tobacco line of business using one of your tobacco trademarks?

A. No, sir.

Q. I show you a package which is in evidence in this case as a product of the P. Lorillard Company, and which has been put upon the market since 1915. Will you kindly state what you remember about the placing of this package upon the market by your company and why this was done?

A. At the time of the dissolution of the American Tobacco Company in December, 1911, the bulk of what we term the scrap business was turned over to the Lorillard Company, and their big brand was "Honest." The year before the dissolution, or rather the year of the dissolution, which was 1911, the brand of Honest started to decline, and for three or four succeeding years, the decline was gradual all the time, and that also applied to some of our other brands, and I went out myself to make a personal investigation to ascertain the cause of this decline. And after looking the field over very carefully I decided that the taste of the consumer was changing somewhat; that brands that were somewhat sweeter than ours seemed to be growing, and our brands that were less sweet were declining, so I came back and reported it to our president and suggested that we endeavor to get up a new formula that would be better suited to the taste that seemed to be changing at the present time; and after experimenting quite a while he brought over a sample package of a piece of goods that struck me as being an ideal product to put out. So we decided to put out another brand, and in looking around for a brand, as is our usual custom, I referred to our list of brands to see what were in a way dormant, and that had been turned over to us as our property by the American Tobacco Company, and one of the first brands I noticed was the brand of Beech-Nut, and that seemed to me to be a very appropriate name for this article, and we decided to use this brand for that purpose.

Q. And when was this, at what time?

A. This was in the fall of 1914, I think.

Q. And at that time were you in complete charge of the scrap tobacco department?

A. I was, the selling end of the business.

Q. What is included in the tobaccos that you had charge of the selling of, what was your department at that time?

A. I had charge of all the smoking tobaccos, all the plug tobaccos, all the scrap tobaccos, all the fine cut tobaccos and part of the time, little cigars.

Q. And you at that time were a vice-president of the Lorillard Company?

A. I was vice-president of the Lorillard Company.

Q. Now you have referred to a list from which you selected this Beech-Nut tobacco mark.

A. Yes.

Q. Is this Exhibit D. 35 the list (indicating)?

A. This is the list that was turned over to me at the time of the dissolution of the American Tobacco Company, some time in December, 1911, and has been continuously in my possession since that time and has been referred to by me on numerous occasions.

Q. In that list have you from time to time selected other names of brands and put them on the market?

A. We have.

Q. Can you name one or two besides Beech-Nut that you also selected?

A. Comet, Pioneer, Yacht Club, and probably there were some others in addition to Beech-Nut.

Q. Under what heading does the Beech-Nut appear on that list?

A. Under the heading of Luhrmann & Wilbern.

Q. Is there any sub-division heading there?

A. That is a sub-division heading, Luhrmann & Wilbern. Luhrmann & Wilbern made only scrap tobaccos at the time they were turned over to the P. Lorillard Company, and of course the Luhrmann & Wilbern business was turned over in a body and the brands enumerated.

Q. Now, in relating the history of this Lorillard Beech-Nut scrap tobacco which you marketed in 1915, will you please tell the Court, if you can, how you came to adopt this form of package?

A. Well, after referring to our list and ascertaining that we owned the brand, I sent for one of my assistants and asked for him to get for me a bag in which we packed Beech-Nut and he brought the old style package—this is the bag, sample of the bag that he brought at that time, and it immediately occurred to me that this package was out of date; in the first place, it had too much reading matter on it.

Mr. Milton: What exhibit number is that, please, so that we may have it in the record?

Mr. Cavanagh: It is a Patent Office exhibit.

Mr. Milton: All right.

The Court: Just refer to it for the purpose of the record.

Mr. Cavanagh: Just refer to it as the Weissinger Beechnut bag.

Mr. Milton; Patent Office Exhibit No. 17.

Mr. Cavanagh: Patent Office record "P. Lorillard Co. Exhibit No. 17."

The Witness: All right.

(Answer read.)

A. (Continuing.) It had the name of the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company that had long since gone out of business, having sold their business to the Continental Tobacco Company, and later transferred to the American Tobacco Company, and I also noticed that it had a picture of a squirrel on the package, which immediately brought to my mind the fact that there was an active brand on the market by one of our competitors which also had the picture of a squirrel, and as is always our policy, we don't desire to, when we are putting out or revamping an old brand, to do anything that might in any way conflict with any tobacco product that is on the market and belongs to any of our competitors, and I sent for a lithographer and gave him my idea, as is usually the case, and asked him to draw a pencil layout of the brand, and while I don't recall the first pencil layout that he brought to us, but I do recall the instance of the selection of the two nuts appearing on our Beech-Nut, this Beech-Nut package, on account of—

Mr. Cavanagh: Just put in Defendant's Exhibit No. 1.

A. (Continuing.) —on account of the argument that came up on one of these sketches that was brought in as to the representation of the Beech-Nuts for our president entered into the argument and criticized the sketch that he had drawn, and the artist or lithographer seemed to be just as decided in his views that it was a good representation, and our president said, "I will bring in a couple of beechnuts to you and you can see how much different they are." And that is how I come to recall those nuts. It was rather an odd incident that came up in the line of business, it is out of the ordinary.

Q. You have spoken of another package which was on the market by one of your competitors.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have spoken of another package which was on the market by one of your competitors which bore the representation of a squirrel. Can you produce this package?

A. That is the package, the Hazel Nut made by John J. Bagley & Company.

Mr. Cavanagh: Package of Hazel Nut tobacco produced by the witness is now offered in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit D. 37.

(Received and marked Exhibit D. 37.)

Q. Will you please state, if you know, how you came to adopt the oval on that tobacco package of Lorillard, 1915, which is cross exhibit No. 1?

A. Well, to state positively in this particular instance would be probably somewhat difficult, but we try to make our packages as strong as we can when we put them on the market, we try to make our design as different as we can to give them an individuality and ovals have been used on many brands of tobacco in order to give more space for the name. Now, if we had used a circle on that, for example, we would have had to pinch the name of the brand down to a point where it would make it less conspicuous than it is.

Q. Can you produce any other specimen of scrap or chewing tobacco package in which the brand is owned by your company which uses an oval?

A. We have a brand of Bag Pipe.

Q. How long has that brand been on the market to the best of your knowledge?

A. That brand has been on the market—that was one of the brands that came over with Luhrmann Wilbern business, and where it originated, I don't know, but it has been a rather inconspicuous brand and we did the same with this brand here about two years ago that we did with Beech-Nut. We owned the brand and we remodeled it, dressed it up in what we thought was a more attractive design and put it out in that form.

Q. But to the best of your knowledge that Bag Pipe brand has always used an oval?

A. Oh, yes, there was always an oval on this package, and that was the trademark, those two Scotch pipers.

Mr. Cavanagh: The Bag Pipe chewing tobacco package produced by the witness is offered in evidence, as D. 38.

(Received in evidence and marked D. 38.)

Q. Mr. Ball, from your knowledge of the tobacco business, and particularly chewing tobacco and scrap tobacco, would you say that these scrap tobacco or chewing tobacco packages have a certain standardized individuality or shape or form?

A. Yes. Scrap tobacco has been put up almost universally in that form for the last—well, as far back as scrap tobacco has been made that I can remember. That is evidenced by that line of leading brands that we have over there on the table. Now, the Hazel Nut package is not a scrap tobacco. That is a long cut, you understand.

Q. For the information of the Court, if you can from where you are at present, will you just enumerate those chewing or scrap tobacco brands and tell, if you know what concern controls or owns them. Do you know those brands?

A. Union Workman is owned by Scott & Dillon; Yankee Girl, same; Beech-Nut by ourselves; Honest by ourselves; Mail Pouch by the Bloch Brothers; Open Book by ourselves; Red Man by the Pinkerton Tobacco Company; Polar Bear by ourselves; Havanna Blossom by ourselves; Pinch Hit by the Pinkerton Tobacco Company.

The Court: You skipped Hazel Nut.

The Witness: Hazel Nut by the John J. Bagley Company. His question was scrap tobacco and Hazel Nut is a long cut, that is the reason I omitted it.

Q. But both long cut and scrap tobacco are used for chewing purposes?

A. Both are used for chewing purposes.

Q. Now, as one familiar with the Beech-Nut tobacco of the Lorillard Company, as illustrated by that package of 1915, Defendant's Cross Exhibit No. 1, can you tell us how you happened to those red radiating lines?

A. At that time the big sellers were solid colored packages, Red Man, Honest, Polar Bear, and the only exception were the two packages of Scott & Dillon, which were minor brands.

Q. What were they, just name them?

A. Union Workman and Yankee Girl. And in remodeling the Beech-Nut package we wanted to dress it up as much as possible, entirely different from anything in the tobacco line, and we did not want to use round symbols or square symbols as our competitors were using, and the question of these rays was suggested by some one—I may have suggested it myself, I don't recall—but it struck me as being a good proposition, giving this package individuality over any others that were on the market in that line at that time.

Q. To what do you attribute the success of the sale of your Beech-Nut tobacco like that 1915 package?

A. Well, there were many features that entered into the cause for the success of Beech-Nut. I think in the first place, in putting out a brand of tobacco or anything else in the tobacco business, it may not be so in other businesses, but in the tobacco business, I have observed in my experience that if you are fortunate in putting a brand on the market at the psychological moment you will go very much faster, and probably make a success with that brand, whereas, if it had been put out three or four years earlier or three or four years later, it might have been quite a failure, and in this investigation that I made when I went out in the territory, I found a great many people, consumers I interviewed largely, because he is the man you have got to get in the tobacco business—I found a great many consumers that were very much dissatisfied with the brands that they were using. One of the most common expressions of a consumer who is dissatisfied with the brand that he has been using, "Well," he says, "it ain't as good as it used to be." Well, when a man gets that idea into his head that it isn't as good as it used to be, he is looking around for something else. That was one of the causes that made me so enthusiastic in getting our president to originate a little different formula, and the fact that this formula that he originated suited the taste, hit that change that so many people were seeking at that time, was one cause backed up by the manner in which the brand was marketed. We, I think, did a very thorough job of work when we introduced it. We worked it very hard with the dealers. We made quite an inducement to the dealer to push the brand, over and above any other brand of scrap tobacco that he was handling at that time, by giving him four packages free with a carton. We, I think, did the most effective advertising, and what we term missionary work, which is sampling, that was ever done on a brand of tobacco, and that was probably due to the enthusiasm that we created in our men and the response that we received from the consumer whom we sampled. They all liked the tobacco. Everybody had a good word for it and they had their various ways of expressing it. And if I may be allowed to give an experience that I had with one man, a switchman that I went to, and asked whether he chewed tobacco, to my astonishment, he pulled out a package of Beech-Nut, and I asked him how he liked it, "Why," he says, "that's the best piece of chewing tobacco I ever got a hold of." I says, "What is the difference between that and what have you been using?" This particular fellow said, "I have been using Honest." I said, "What is the difference between Beech-Nut and Honest?" "Why," he says, "it is sweeter, and that is the cleanest piece of tobacco I ever got hold of." He says, "It feels clean," and he held up the package. That was his expression. Now, that man did not mean that it felt clean, he meant that it was a soft, silky pliable chewing tobacco, but that is the way he expressed it. And those things encouraged us to believe that we had hit upon a formula that would suit the people.

Q. In carrying out what you call the missionary work on this Beech-Nut tobacco during the campaign of placing it before the public or on the market, just what procedure did you follow in that missionary work? Tell the Court, so he will understand.

A. Our first method, of course, was to ship our goods to the jobbers, and after the goods reached the jobbers, then we put our men to work on the brand, and to make certain that we had as good a piece of goods as we thought we had, we at first limited it to putting it out in six towns, two towns in Pennsylvania, one in New York, and three towns in Ohio, the center of the big scrap consuming territory. And after those towns had been worked by our retail men, by soliciting orders from the retailer for the account of the jobber, the jobber had delivered it, then our men went out and visited the consumers, ascertaining first whether or not they chewed tobacco, and if they chewed tobacco then we handed them a sample, then we put our advertising matter up in the stores, using window posters and window pieces and dressing windows, using our cartons and dummy packages and things of that kind to make window displays. That was the method we used principally, but our big effort, and I think the work that got us the best results, was the sample.

Q. Is that the procedure you use in presenting any [illegible] in the matter of conducting a campaign?

A. That is the general procedure; yes, sir; although many times brands are put out broadcast, without trying them out in certain sections as we did with this one.

Q. Now, at the time you were conducting this intensive campaign on this Lorillard Beech-Nut scrap tobacco or chewing tobacco, how many men were in your sales department under your direct charge?

A. There was approximately 300.

Q. And how many employees were under your charge or in your department? I mean, what was the total of the employees in your department?

A. Well, in the selling end of it, there was something over 300, and in our auditing end of the business, there was approximately 250.

Q. And during that intensive campaign, did you put the entire strength of your department back of that Beech-Nut tobacco?

A. At that time, when we started we had our business divided into departments, and the brand of Beech-Nut was put out by the scrap department. In the scrap department, we had some 50 or 75 men, and during that time we put the entire force of the scrap department on the brand of Beech-Nut working nothing else.

Q. From your experience in the sale of chewing and smoking tobaccos, do you know of any other tobacco other than Beech-Nut considering the time of its appearance on the market that had a relative or corresponding growth in sales as compared with Beech-Nut, and if so, will you name the brand?

A. Yes, I have known several. Honest was one of them. Honest was a brand that came into the market very rapidly and then, one of the most phenominal successes ever made in the tobacco business, going back a little farther, while it wasn't a scrap brand, it was a chewing tobacco, was Battle Axe plug. Battle Axe plug, I think obtained a bigger volume of business in two years than ever was obtained by any brand that was ever put out in the world. I think the volume of Battle Axe business ran up to 30,000,000 pounds in two years.

Q. Is this the Honest package of scrap to which you referred as having had a great growth?

A. This is the tobacco.

Q. Can you produce for the information of the Court any figures or data illustrative of the growth of the Honest scrap?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Cavanagh: I offer in evidence the package of Honest scrap tobacco produced by the witness.

(Received and marked Exhibit D. 39.)

A (Continued.) The first year Honest was put on the market, in 1906, it sold 1,316,242 pounds; the second year, 1907, 5,290,828 pounds; the third year, 1908, 11,538,322 pounds; 1909, 16,561,659 pounds; 1910, 18,527,034 pounds. Now, I might call your attention to this, that at the time Honest was put on the market the volume of the scrap business was very much less than it was in 1915.

Q. Why was that?

A. Well, scrap business started in the 90's in a very limited volume, and it never got any very great big volume until the brand of Honest came on the market, and it was probably due to the fact that Honest was campaigned very heavily, and it has been my experience that in campaigning any particular line of tobacco business it always produces a greater volume, on that particular line? Then, in 1908, 1909 and 1910, there were other brands campaigned and the scrap business in what we call the big scrap territory ate up the plug business, so that in later years the plug business has almost been eliminated in this big scrap territory.

These figures also show, as I related previously, 1910 was our big volume year; 1911, the last year of the American Tobacco Company, the brand dropped from 18,527,000 to 17,703,000; 1912, 16,438,000; 1913, 15,139,000; 1914, 13,512,000, when our business commenced to slip, and then we commenced to get uneasy, and I went out and made as careful an investigation as possible.

Q. Just go down the list and give the rest of the figures, so that we will have the record complete.

A. Subsequent—

Q. Yes.

A. 1915, 11,721,000; 1916, 10,474,000; 1917, 9,773,000; 1918, 6,682,000; 1919, 6,988,000; 1920, 3,699,000; 1921, 3,197,000; 1922, 2,810,000.

Q. Have you the figures there of any other—

A. I have the figures here of Polar Bear.

Q. Scrap brand which has had a large sale and decline?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you at your convenience read these figures into the record?

A. Polar Bear was one of the first brands of scrap tobacco that was put on the market in a limited way by a small concern in Cincinnati called the Luhrmann & Wilbern Company, and the first figures we have are in 1902, 4,260,000—I guess that 5,260,000 in 1902 probably represented 60 or 70 per cent. of the scrap business, it was so small at that time. Today it has run up close to 100,000,000 pounds.

In 1903, 5,491,000; 1904, 5,731,000; 1905, 6,278,000; 1906, 6,819,000; 1907, 5,405,000; 1908, 3,984,000; 1909, 3,157,000; 1910, 2,813,000; 1911, 2,743,000; 1912, 2,404,000; 1913, 2,707,000; 1914, 2,595,000; 1915, 2,297,000; 1916, 2,491,000; 1917, 2,155,000; 1918, 1,518,000; 1919, 1,485,000; 1920, 958,000; 1921, 800,000; 1922, 778,000.

Q. Does this represent a Polar Bear package of chewing tobacco that you have mentioned (indicating)? A Yes, that is our brand, Polar Bear.

Mr. Cavanagh: The Polar Bear package of chewing and smoking tobacco is offered in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit D. 40.

(Received in evidence and marked Exhibit D. 40.)

Q. Now, Mr. Ball, can you give the Court from your wide experience in the tobacco business some idea of the territory or localities in which the scrap tobaccos are sold or consumed, that is, where the consumers principally are, for scrap tobacco?

A. You mean at the present time?

Q. Yes, historically and at the present time.

A. The scrap tobacco originated practically in the State of Ohio, and it spread from Ohio in through Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, bordering on the Ohio River, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and New York State. That is what we term the big scrap tobacco territory; but in the last four or five years, since we have been campaigning our scrap business more intensively, it has spread to all sections of the United States. The section that we have the last business is the New England territory, they don't seem to take to that type of chewing tobacco up in that part of the country, but we are selling Beech-Nut tobacco generally throughout the United States today.

Q. Well, what class of people generally use chewing tobacco?

A. Well, as a whole I would say mechanics, manufacturing people and agricultural people are the largest consumers of chewing tobacco.

Q. How about miners?

A. Miners in some sections use quite a little scrap tobacco, but miners, particularly Pennsylvania miners have been users of long cut tobaccos for a great many years, and they still use quantities of long cut tobaccos for chewing purposes.

Q. You don't sell much to women and children, do you?

A. I am sorry to say we don't. It is an accomplishment they have not acquired yet.

Q. Will you please outline for the benefit of the Court, so that he will understand the situation, the investment of P. Lorillard Company in the manufacture and sale of this Beech-Nut chewing tobacco from the time the present package was placed on the market in 1915, to the year of 1921, and refer to any memorandum you may have. Tell us where that memorandum was obtained (indicating).

A. I have had a memorandum made up by the auditing department, based on the value of our property that proportionately would apply to the brand of Beech-Nut where it is manufactured. If, for example, we had a factory that made 10,000,000 pounds of tobacco and 5,000,000 pounds of that was Beech-Nut, we would tabulate half of the value of that factory that would apply to the brand of Beech-Nut investment in that plant. Now, the real estate and building investment in 1915, was

	$ 83,946.90
In 1916,	138,430.96

1919,	713

1921,	900

Q. Can you produce any statement from the records of your company showing the total advertising expenses of the Lorillard Company on all these brands for the years 1911-1922, inclusive?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you read that list into the record?

A. 1911, we spent:

1911,	$ 172,373.10 (one month)
1912,	5,190,436.25
1913,	6,294,942.46
1914,	6,235,563.14
1915,	4,597,163.83

1918,	4,575,280.98
1919,	4,164,221.20
1920,	2,041,325.18
1921,	3,276,274.66
1922,	4,191,068.06

Q. Why was the advertising expense so small in 1911?

A. Well, in 1911, we only had one month, the month of December. You see we did not commence to function till December 1, 1911.

Q. Now, Mr. Ball, how many ounces of tobacco are in that Beech-Nut 1915 package, your present Beech-Nut package?

A. Two ounces at the present time.

Q. And what is the retail price of that package?

A. Ten cents a package.

Q. And how many ounces are in the ordinary scrap tobacco that is on the market to your experience?

A. There is only one today that is any smaller, all the others range from 2¼ to 2½ ounces. The smaller one—the two smaller ones that I recall, one is the Mail Pouch, and the other our brand of Havana Blossom. They are 1¾ ounces.

Q. But the usual, ordinary package of scrap on the market is a larger package?

A. A larger package.

Q. But the prices are the same, ten cents?

A. Ten cents.

Q. Now, the defendant has charged in this case that your Lorillard scrap tobacco is a cheap tobacco. What have you to say to that?

A. Well, comparing it with the popular sellers today in chewing tobacco, such as Climax, Star, Horse Shoe, which are the big popular sellers for which they pay 90 cents a pound, Beech-Nut costs a consumer 80 cents a pound, and it would seem to me that that charge is without foundation.

Q. Well, now, just turn your attention to the chewing tobaccos of the type called scrap that are on the market. How does Beech-Nut compare with those in its quality and price?

A. Well, Beech-Nut chewing tobacco is the best piece of tobacco on the market in our opinion. And as I say, there are only two other smaller brands that sell for more money than Beech-Nut, and it is made from the very finest quality tobaccos of its kind that we can buy.

Q. Isn't made from sweepings or clippings or anything of that sort?

A. And— (interrupted.)

Q. Is it?

A. No, sir. There are some cigar clippings in it. There are some tobaccos in Beech-Nut tobacco that go in cigars that sell for three for fifty cents. It is not all made up of the kinds of tobacco, but there is some of that type of tobacco in it, but Beech-Nut is made from the very best types of that kind of tobacco that are produced.

Q. It is made from expensive tobacco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From your experience in the tobacco business and particularly with chewing tobaccos, plugs and the like, what do you—how do you account for the fact that the sales of a brand of tobacco will rise and then fall, as in the case of Honest plug?

A. Well, that can be attributed, I think, to the change in the taste of people more than anything else.

Q Now, earlier in your examination, Mr. Ball, you stated that you obtained the name "Beech-Nut" from this list, brand list, I may call it, Exhibit D. 35, at the time that you made the selection from this list, was the Bag Pipe tobacco on the market?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was on the market?

A. That had quite a little volume of business at that time.

Q. Was Honest scrap on the market?

A. That was a big seller.

A. Natural Leaf?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Old Nut?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Polar Bear?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Scrap Iron?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had all those different brands on the market?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have mentioned Star, Horse Shoe and Climax brands. Are those plug brands?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They are not chewing or scrap tobacco like the Beech-Nut?

A. No, sir. They are chewing tobacco but not scrap tobacco.

Q. They are a plug tobacco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Ball, in getting up the present Beech-Nut package, did you or your company, you speaking as an official, from your knowledge of the business and of the history of that package, have any intention or purpose of marketing it on the reputation of the Beech-Nut Food products?

A. Absolutely not. We did not consider them or think of them at the time we got out the brand of tobacco to my knowledge.

Q. What is the reason for your answer? Why didn't you consider them?

A. Because their products is so entirely different from ours. The only thing that we think of when we get out a brand of tobacco is other brands of tobacco products. We would not want to put out a brand of scrap tobacco similar to a brand of our competitors of long cut, but when it comes to considering other products, it does not enter our minds, not for a minute. There cannot be any similarity between tobacco in my opinion, and bacon or jams or jellies or chewing gums.

Q. You are speaking as a tobacco man, now?

A. That is all I know. I have never been in any other business but the tobacco business, and I am sorry I don't know more about that.

Mr. Cavanagh: That is all the direct, your Honor.

Cross examination by Mr. Scott.

Q. You have given a statement, Mr. Ball, of the advertising expenses. About how many brands does that include, all of them?

A. That includes our output.

Q. All of the Lorillard brands; about how many are there?

A. Oh, there is probably fifty brands that we advertise, probably not that many. We advertise our principal leaders, probably twenty-five of any consequence.

Q. You have referred to and read some figures, regarding the sales of Honest Sscap. This is a tobacco made by the Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And marketed by the Lorillard Company itself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not supplied to some one else to market?

A. No, sir.

Q. Marketed by the Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the name Lorillard to be found upon that package?

A. No, sir.

Q. Does this occur in the name of any of your other brands, that the name "Lorillard" is not put on?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other brands?

A. I think the brand of Union Leader, if I recall correctly.

Q. Do you recall any more?

A. I don't have any at mind right now.

Q. Do you remember about Polar Bear, whether Lorillard's name is on there or not? I ask you whether you remember or not?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. You don't remember one way or the other?

A. No, sir.

Q. This question, then, of whether the Lorillard name is on a package is a matter with which you don't think it is worth while to charge your mind, I suppose?

A. Well, if I had thought a question of that kind would have come up, I would have familiarized myself with it, but if you will allow me to explain why the Lorillard name is not on the brands, I would be glad to do so.

Q. Pleased to hear you. Go ahead.

A. In the change of anything on a live brand, you frequently take a chance of prejudicing the consumer. I recall an experience I had with the American Tobacco Company years ago, with the brand Duke's Mixture. We put a coupon in it one time in one section of the country and left it out in other sections. And there was a "G" put on the package.

Q. A "G"?

A. A "G" put on the package to indicate at the factory that the brand had coupons in it, and Georgia was one of the states in which the coupon was packed, and when the coupons were discontinued, they left off the letter "G" and that small letter, not much larger than a pea in a circle caused the loss of quantities of business, the consumer got it in his mind that when that "G" was off of there, the tobacco wasn't as good as it was with the "G" on it. The imagination is a powerful factor in the tobacco business. Now, these brands that you mentioned, Honest and Union Leader were brands that were originated by the American Tobacco Company, and the custom of the American Tobacco Company in many instances at that time, was to leave their name from the package, and they had some very good reasons for doing it, the particular reason was that the American Tobacco Company had a big volume of the business, and they were looked upon as a great big trust and they did not care about exploiting that in the minds of the consumer, so they left the name off of the package. That custom continued up until the time of the dissolution of the American Tobacco Company, and at the time of the dissolution we had all been schooled in that school, and we thought it was all right. But as time went on, some years later, we commenced to feature the value of the Lorillard name, and today every package that we put out bears the name of the Lorillard Company.

Q. This letter "G" that you refer to, that was on what product? I have forgotten it.

A. Duke's Mixture.

Q. And the package before the "G" was removed was left otherwise unchanged, was it not, when the "G" was taken off?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the package was identical before and after except for this little letter "G," no larger than a pea, I think you said?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that proved to be a very important factor in the impression made by that package upon the consumer?

A. In that instance, in that particular state. The reason I mention that is because I came in contact with Georgia with those conditions. They were quite amazing, that such a small change would cause the effect that it did.

Q. Was that in that state only, or was it general?

A. That was where I experienced it.

Q. That was where your knowledge of it extended?

A. I mentioned that as an instance where we were always very careful not to change a package. We have some packages today that are big sellers, and as long as they sell, we jealously try to keep them identical with what they have been.

Q. I suppose there is danger of losing the benefit of the past reputation by changing this package in that way?

A. Well, it frequently affects brands.

Q. As it did there in the case of this Duke's Mixture?

A. Yes.

Q. And you guard very carefully against that?

A. Yes.

Q. This Polar Bear brand, to which you referred, is one, I believe, you purchased from the Luhrmann & Wilbern Company or came under a court decree, is that so?

A. Yes, the Luhrmann Wilbern Company was one of the companies that was turned over to the Lorillard Company as a whole by the American Tobacco Company in December, 1911.

Q. I wonder if on this table there is a Polar Bear package such as used before the conveyance to the Lorillard Company?

A. I don't know. There is a package there.

Q. That package, I think, has P. Lorillard on it, has it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember how this package was gotten up when the tobacco was gotten out by Luhrmann & Wilbern?

A. Well, it must have been in the '90s.

Q. Well, I didn't ask when, but in what kind of a package, was it the same package as that?

A. I think that that is the same package other than our name has been added to it as successors.

Q. And your memory would be that that package as put out by Luhrmann & Wilbern was identical with the one you hold in your hand, except that it would not have had on it, the name P. Lorillard?

A. That would be my memory.

Q. And that is in accord, is it not, with your statement just made that it is important to preserve the identity of these various brands?

A. Yes, sir. That is one of the instances that we may take exception to where at times we put our names on brands, and that was a custom that was followed.

Q. Surely.

A. By the American Tobacco Company.

Q. But did you not disturb the identity other than by putting on P. Lorillard at the bottom?

A. No, sir.

Q. And it would have been against your policy to do so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, how about this Honest Scrap. Do you remember whether that was one of those brands that came to you by conveyance from Luhrmann & Wilbern?

A. That was one of them. There it is.

Q. We have here, Exhibit D. 39, package of Honest Scrap that you referred to before. How does the package as put out by Luhrmann & Wilbern compare with that one?

A. In what way?

Q. In design and dress and ornamentation?

A. Well, one of them is black and the other is red. One is Polar Bear, the other is Honest.

Q. You misunderstood me. With the Honest Scrap as put out by Luhrmann & Wilbern?

A. Well, the Luhrmann & Wilbern never marketed the brand of Honest Scrap.

Q. What company did you get that from?

A. The American Tobacco Company.

Q. Well, I was wrong in the ownership.

A. The Luhrmann & Wilbern Company made this tobacco for the account of the American Tobacco Company who marketed it.

Q. It was marketed then by the American Tobacco Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when they marketed it, did it have a bag with a design substantially similar to this one on Exhibit 39?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that when that Honest Scrap was transferred from the American Tobacco Company to the Lorillard Company the style of package was carried forward practically in its identity?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That again was in pursuance of the policy that you outlined, I suppose, some time ago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You mentioned a brand called Bag Pipe. Was that a brand the Lorillard Company acquired from Luhrman & Wilbern?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Bag Pipe package to which you referred is designated Exhibit D. 38. Is that identical package one that was gotten out since the ownership by the Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is it the same in the style of the package and design as it was before it was acquired by the Lorillard Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. In what way does it differ?

A. Oh, it has changed in many ways. There is less printing matter on it and it is more striking in color; it is a complete change.

Q. Have you a sample in this collection here of that?

A. I don't know that we have one. We could get you one very easily.

Q. Was this picture upon the Bag Pipe package before it was assigned?

A. Before it was what?

Q. Before the brand was assigned to the Lorillard Company?

A. I think so.

Q. The picture of the two Highlanders?

A. I think so.

Q. Practically as it is there?

A. We would probably have perfected it a little more, changed it somewhat.

Q. A little refinement of printing and drawing, but the picture substantially as it was on the package before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You named the Comet, Pioneer and Yacht Club brands as being brands that you took from that long list, Exhibit D. 35?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. These are brands now made by the Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who made Comet before the Lorillard Company made it, any one?

A. That was a brand that was turned over to us by the American Tobacco Company. Just who made it and when it was made I don't recall.

Q. But they marketed it?

A. They marketed it.

Q. The American Tobacco Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. We didn't have a sample of that Comet here, did we?

A. No, sir; there is not a sample here that I recall. That is a cut plug today.

Q. What was scrap tobacco originally, Mr. Ball? It got the name, I suppose, originally from being made of scraps?

A. Scrap is rather a misnomer in the tobacco business. The cuttings from cigars are referred to by the cigar makers many times as cigar scraps, and the early days to find a market for that product that was too small to use to wrap up a cigar or a binder, they put it in packages, paper packages, and called it cigar clippings or cigar scraps.

Q. That was the origin?

A. I imagine it was; I haven't studied up on that particular point.

Q. I presume the sale of tobacco, called scrap now, is so great there would not be enough scrap to make it up?

A. Oh, yes, there is lots of straight tobacco bought to manufacture these big brands of chewing tobacco.

Q. Do you use any of that scraps in the Beech-Nut scrap?

A. Clippings?

Q. Clippings

A. I think we use some of it, although I am not as well posted on the contents of the packages as some of our other folks, who have charge of that end of the business.

Q. You may have some idea as to the proportion of clippings or scrap and of original new tobacco?

A. No, I have not.

Q. None at all?

A. No, sir; couldn't give you any idea.

Q. You made a statement that at the present time the name Lorillard is on all of the Lorillard brands, I think.

A. Did I say that?

Q. Well, I am asking you. I think you did.

A. If I said that I was in error, because some of these brands that were taken over by the American Tobacco Company did not bear any name, and we have not put our name on—such as in the case of Honest.

Q. That is a contemporary package right there?

A. Yes. We haven't put our name on that.

Q. That is Honest Scrap, the name Lorillard is not on it today (indicating)?

A. No, sir; they never have—there never has been, to my knowledge, a name on Honest Scrap tobacco. We haven't any hard and fast rule to go by of putting the name on the package. It has been, as I say, the custom was, up to the time of the dissolution, to leave it off, but since that time it has been put on and generally on all of our brands that we have revamped or new brands that we might put out.

Q. The name of the brand, I imagine, is the important thing about it?

A. Yes, we put a great deal of stress on the fact that the Lorillard Company has been in business since 1760, in fact, we got out a brand called "1760" and when we sample a man we impress that upon him in most instances.

Q. Can you name any other brands than you have mentioned that the Lorillard Company is putting out today without the name Lorillard on the package?

A. I believe this brand of Comet, I am not quite sure; it looks as though we didn't put it on the brand of Bag Pipe.

Q. Can you remember any more?

A. No, I don't know that I can.

Q. But I suppose there are a great many of these brands that you would be unable to say one way or the other about, whether or not it was on, aren't there?

A. There would be quite a few.

Q. You would be unable to say?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Whether or not it was on in the case of a great many?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Ball, you stated that you, I think I have you right, that you didn't know of any food company manufacturing tobacco products, was that your statement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of any food company, by food company meaning dealer in food products, groceries or whatnot, who puts out tobacco under his own name, whether manufactured by himself or not?

A. What do you term a food company?

Q. Wholesale grocery.

A. Wholesale grocery?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, yes; there are wholesale grocers that have their own brands. That was quite customary twenty-five years ago, but that custom has gone out of practice largely; there are very few today. There may be some.

Q. Do you remember any?

A. No, I don't recall any at the present time offhand.

Q. Is it usual for a tobacco manufacturing company to manufacture goods and put the brand of the purchaser on them?

A. Well, we don't do it. The large manufacturers as a class I don't think indulge in that business.

Q. You mean that the Lorillard Company does not manufacture tobacco products and put on those products the brand of a purchaser?

A. No, sir.

Q. There are tobacco companies that do that, are there not?

A. I think Scotton & Dillon make some private brands, but whether or not they put the name of the purchaser on I couldn't say; they may and they may not.

Q. Did the Lorillard Company ever make for anybody tobacco products and put on those products the brand requested by the purchaser?

A. They may have in the early days. As I say, that was quite customary twenty-five years ago, but when the American Tobacco Company came into the business they discouraged it and worked their own brands so aggressively it practically absorbed all the business of what we call private brands.

Mr. Scott: That will be all.

BENJAMIN LLOYD BELT, called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Cavanagh.

Q. Your name is Benjamin L. Belt, you are of legal age, you reside at Lakewood, New Jersey, and you are Vice-President of P. Lorillard Company, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what are your duties with the P. Lorillard Company, Mr. Belt, of what departments have you charge, or what part of the business?

A. At the present time I am co-manager in the sales department of the business, with the exception of cigars and little cigars. In 1922, the smoking and plug and scrap tobaccos and the cigarette brands of P. Lorillard Company were combined from a selling standpoint. The department of smoking, and so forth, as referred to by Mr. Ball, and my own department of cigarettes was combined on January 1, 1922, and I am jointly interested in the marketing of all the products with the exception of the big cigars and little cigars.

Q. How long have you been connected with the Lorillard Company as Vice-President?

A. Since December 1, 1911.

Q. And from December 1, 1911, until January 1, 1922, am I to understand that you had charge of the cigarette department of the Lorillard Company?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And from 1922, to the present time, you have been jointly in charge with Mr. Ball, another Vice-President, of the entire sales—

A. In directing the sales of all the brands combined, with the exception of big cigars and little cigars.

Q. Now, Mr. Belt, can you name some of the prominent cigarette brands of the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Egyptian Deities, Murads, Moguls, Turkish Trophy, London Life—you say prominent or all brands—Luxury; we have some business on that.

Q. What domestic brands?

A. Those are what we designate as all Turkish cigarettes, and in the blended cigarettes we have some business on Nebo, Zira and Cloudland, and Beech-Nut. I think those are the principal brands that we manufacture, that is about all of them.

Q. And from 1911, when you became Vice-President of the Lorillard Company, up to the present time, you personally have been in active contact and active charge of the sales of those cigarettes, of the various cigarettes of the Lorillard Company?

A. Yes, sir; sharing that charge with Mr. Ball for the last two years.

Q. Or since 1922?

A. Since 1922, beginning of 1922.

Q. Now, Mr. Belt, will you tell us how long you have been in the tobacco business, and give us a brief history of your connection with it right from the very beginning?

A. I have been in the tobacco business practically all my life. I was born on a farm, raised tobacco, seeded it, transplanted small plants into the field and kept them cultivated and cured, and graded tobacco and carried it to market. Later I traveled through the South extensively in selling what was known at that time as the old Virginia flat plug tobacco, and subsequently I was engaged in leaf, and had some business in export, made some foreign trips in behalf of the promoting of the exportation of Virginia and North Carolina leaf tobacco, and following that, in the year 1899, I was employed by the American Tobacco Company, which connection I continued until the disintegration of that company in 1911, and my elevation to the position I now occupy of Vice-President of the P. Lorillard Company, continuously in the business and actively in the selling end for the past twenty-four years.

Q. While you were in the American Tobacco Company, which I understand was from 1899 to 1911, what were your duties and of what did you have charge and what did you do?

A. Well—

Q. What was your experience with the American Tobacco Company?

A. My first duties with the American Tobacco Company of any moment, after a few months of sort of introductory work, I was sent to Bermuda to make a sale of some cigarettes of their ownership, purchase, made by some company they had recently acquired, the Union Tobacco Company, I think it was. I was instructed to attempt to dispose of those cigarettes in the market there, and also charged with the request to ascertain as much as I could relative to the general character of tobacco used then—from where it was obtained, from what country it was imported, the style of packing, and so forth and so on.

Upon my return—that trip lasted ninety days, probably, started out about the 1st of January, 1900, a few months after my employment, then I was put in charge of what was known as the Bright Long Cut, fine cut and German smoking tobaccos of the American Tobacco Company. That position I continued for about a year, as I recall, a little longer, and then I was put in charge of Perfection cigarettes, a brand known as Perfection cigarettes. I was given that brand exclusively, and made a little department, was told mainly for the purpose of beginning to absorb the knowledge and the experience of cigarette salesmanship, and that position I continued about another year, when the American Tobacco Company had formed the American Cigar Company, and decided to exploit extensively the cigar business, the principal brand being Cubanola, and the American Tobacco Company transferred me to the American Cigar Company and put me in charge of the marketing of the brand of Cubanola, a campaign that was conducted from the City of Philadelphia, involving that particular city and nearby sections of Pennsylvania, a very extensive and large financial campaign, employing 100 or more salesmen, and so forth. In the following spring, that was about September or October, it was decided to merge the American Cigar Company's selling end of their business into the Continental Tobacco Company, a company in which the American was interested. When this absorption was made of the American cigar business by the Continental I was put in charge, general supervisor or manager of the selling end, both from the New York office and the field of about seventeen states, having authority to direct which brands we would work—or, as we term it, which we would call "leaders." If you were in charge of one state I might direct you to make a special effort on this, that or the other brand, which might be under the supervision of various departments, several different departments in the New York office. I had the authority to do that, to employ men, promote men, increase salaries or cause the dismissal of men, and that position I continued for about a year; and then I was made co-manager of the cigarette departments, the little one I had had previously, and the general business were combined, and I was made co-manager of that department. There were two department managers in each of the principal departments of the company.

Q. That is the American Tobacco Company?

A. The American Tobacco Company. I was made one of the managers of the cigarette business, which as I recall it was in 1903, and I continued in the cigarette department with different co-managers, several changes took place but I kept on, and it broadened out into about five or six departments, of which I became general head, of all the departments of cigarettes. That lasted up to the disintegration; I was in that position when the disintegration took place in 1911.

Q. During the time particularly that you were connected with the American Tobacco Company in charge of their cigarette department, did you supervise the get-up and bring out any famous brands of cigarettes or take part in any campaign?

A. Quite a number, several.

Q. Name some of them.

A. Both got up some and some I revamped or promoted that we purchased or acquired, acquired through the purchase of the American Tobacco Company of their business. For instance, the brand of Fatima cigarettes, which is quite famous, was created by the Cameron & Cameron Company of Richmond, Virginia, and that company was purchased by the American Tobacco Company, and the brand of Fatimas, along with a number of other brands, was put on my desk with instructions to look them over, and so forth, and we decided to make some little effort on the brand of Fatima, being about the only one we saw much future to. In the course of a few years I had caused that brand to be built up to quite a large volume, something like a billion cigarettes a year, in 1910, 1911. A billion cigarettes at that time, particularly of that type cigarette, relatively speaking, represented a tremendous business. The whole cigarette business then was about eight billions; today it is perhaps approximately sixty billion; so a billion of Fatimas in two or three years was, we thought, a good many Fatimas; and I put out the brand of Piedmonts, that had grown from nothing in a few years up to about eleven hundred million, as I recall it. I also put out the brand of Meccas, and Hassen. They both were large brands of 1910, being somewhere around five or six years old. It all took place between 1903, or really, I didn't become active until 1904, because I was away from the fall of 1903, until July of 1904, on leave of absence, on account of ill health, so between 1904 and 1911, these brands had been conceived or revamped and built up into considerable volume.

Q. These specimen packages represent the Fatima and the Piedmont (indicating)?

A. And the Piedmont.

Q. Those are today well known tobacco brands of Liggett & Meyers?

A. They are large and prominent brands.

Q. Since you have been with the Lorillard Company as Vice-President, beginning in 1911, December, have you had charge of the bringing out, or have you been instrumental in bringing out any cigarette brands, and if so, will you name them?

A. Several. Immediately, early in 1912, we brought out a brand called Zira, I think that was the first one, and Nebo. They were right within a very short period, I am under the impression, without having made reference to it, the first to be brought on the market was the Zira—both perhaps before the middle of 1912, were on the market, and since that time other brands were brought out, both in what we call the blended cigarette, and in the all-Turkish cigarette, London Life in all-Turkish, Coat of Arms, Zubelda in the blended cigarette, I recall are other brands having brought out.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the bringing out of the Beech-Nut cigarette?

A. I did.

Q. Will you please first relate briefly how you came to bring out this Beech-Nut cigarette, like the package I show you, and which has been frequently referred to in this case as the Lorillard Beech-Nut cigarette? Just give us the history first briefly of how you happened to bring that out.

A. We had not been very successful in holding the volume on Nebo or Zira cigarettes. We had, however, in a very short time relatively been successful in getting them up to quite a conspicuous volume, but for some reason they did not stick, didn't last, and we found ourselves about in a position of no blended cigarette business of any consequence, our entire cigarette business being on the higher priced all-Turkish brands.

Q. Right there. The Lorillard Company practically controls the Turkish cigarette business, the great volume of it, doesn't it?

A. Our brands represent a majority volume, major portion of the Turkish cigarettes that are in existence.

Q. Now continue your answer.

A. But we were not satisfied to confine ourselves to all-Turkish, as we estimated a larger and more growing business on the other type of cigarette. So we were considering for a long time putting on the market another brand of cigarettes of a blended type and were about ready to do it a year or two sooner than we did, it being deferred on account of the war, and the great inability to get tinfoil and wrapping material and so forth. Well, we dragged it along, so to speak, and did not actually get the cigarette in question, Beech-Nut, on the market until in the spring of 1921. As I recall the opening campaign was started in the City of Boston just the day following Washington's Birthday, in the year 1921. Prior to that time, of course, we had created the brand of Beech-Nut in its present state.

Q. What did you have to do with the getting up of this package, that is, the design and the ornamentation? Did that come under your supervision?

A. I directed it.

Q. How did you happen to take the name Beech-Nut for the cigarette?

A. Because we owned the brand of Beech-Nut tobacco which was a very large seller, having at that time, as I recall, reached something like 30,000,000 of pounds—25 or 30,000,000 of pounds. It seemed very popular. The compliments that were bestowed upon it, its quality, merit and so forth, it had made many friends with the consumer, and I felt inclined to adopt it as the cigarette name, feeling security in the title which we had—we often had gotten brands and had some trouble much later, causing loss and so forth. But I felt that we were absolutely secure in that as we had been marketing it for five years or six years, and another factor that quite influenced me was the fact that one of our competitors, the American Tobacco Company had in the interim during this period of considering gotten out a blended cigarette, offered on the market a brand of cigarettes called Lucky Strike, and Lucky Strike cigarettes were derived in name from Lucky Strike tobacco that had been on the market for a very long time, perhaps twenty-five years, and had likewise built up a good reputation, had a good following. And that had a good deal to do with convincing me of the propriety, not of the legality, of our taking Beech-Nut, but of the propriety of taking it. That brand had gone out from a smoking brand as a base, to use as a cigarette with marked success. Then after conferring with our President, Mr. Ball, and perhaps others in the company of sufficient capacity, we determined then that we would make our fight, or we would select the brand Beech-Nut, and get up the package and undertake to secure our share, or as large a share as we could possibly obtain of that brand as a blended cigarette. And then I started the machinery to create a package.

Q. How did you happen to select a red color for this package?

A. Well, it has always been my idea and policy to obtain as great an amount of individuality as possible in our cigarette merchandise, and being quite familiar with the cigarette field, the principal brands in existence, that we would become competitors of, that were established and all of pronounced colors—Fatima—

Q. Will you produce some of the brands to which you refer and just briefly mention them in your answer?

A. Fatima being buff or yellow package like this, and Camels, which was then on the market and a very big seller, being a more or less similar package in color, buff with brown trimmings, Omars being a delicate baby blue and Piedmonts being white and Chesterfields being likewise white, Lucky Strikes being dark green and Salisburys brown or green, or very similar color. It really left me, by preference, however, I would say, about the only color of what we call the representative colors, of red; and the brand of Pall Mall cigarettes, a high priced Turkish cigarette, in a box, so entirely distinct, but of a red color had been very popular and I had heard many compliments of the color scheme of the Pall Malls being appreciated; so then I decided that to keep away from these brands in appearances, and to get something that was entirely distinct, that I would take a red color and promote that scheme, and in getting out a package we kind of adhered to the same general type of red that was already more or less in evidence in the Beech-Nut radiating red shoots or lightning scrolls. So we have about the same red in the Beech-Nut cigarette package as we have in the Beech-Nut chewing package, and in my anxiety to excell, if possible, in the appearance of my package to create the approval of the consumer, I went a little farther than any of these packages had gone, some of which I had created and some not, in taking what I call the border off of my Murad package, on this package, it being a very high class Turkish cigarette of large volume—there is a kind of Mosaic tile effect border, and I felt that I could take that, part of that, and use that with that color scheme in bordering the Beech-Nut which would give it more tone and class and appearance than I felt that these other brands, in a sense had, and that it would lend itself more to the eye of the consumer by having that character of border. So that is where we got the border. We took it from our own brand, and we did not think that it being so different, one a box selling at 15 cents for ten and the other a package to sell at 15 cents for 20, that there would be any question of mixing up or reflecting in any way on Murads by doing that. So that is about in the rough the way we come to get the red package.

Q. Now, as to the shape or form of this package, it is quite common in the trade and is known as a cup package, is it not, the general package?

A. Cup package.

Q. As distinguished from the box package?

A. That used to be open at the bottom, and the old-fashioned cigarette was put up with the foil around, and sort of half stuck here, either end would open, and they would fall out. So way back in the American days, I put the bottom on the Fatima package to change it from its open end package making it cup because it had a bottom that would hold, and it has since then been known pretty generally as the cup package. That is the way that originated.

Q. Now, as to the transparent or glazine wrapper, about the Beech-Nut package, will you tell us how you happened to put that on?

A. As a protection of the brand, as an impressive medium to the consumer of care and guarding the contents from exposure from which all tobacco suffers from too much moisture or too much dryness—suffers, perishes, loses its flavor and charm and so forth. So some years prior to this I had originated an idea to take our Egyptian Deities and wrap it in this paraffin paper, which presumably excludes the air and the contents would retain their natural moisture, just like it came from the machine.

Q. Were you the man in the tobacco business who got up the idea of wrapping packages?

A. I put that around Egyptian Deities and it was immediately seized upon by our competitors and we were unable to stop them because we had no patent on that way of doing it. Then we put it around this package on the same principle, to give it tone and class and appearances and protect the contents from too much moisture or too much dryness, and the belief in my mind was that it made you feel that it was particularly good and classy. I did not originate the thought, I applied it. I was lunching one day in a prominent New York restaurant, and I found a roll served to me in a little paraffin sack, and it impressed me as being very acceptable because the waiter did not have to handle the bread. I immediately went to work, put that sack in my pocket, and went to work applying it to cigarettes. It is an applied idea, not an originated one.

Q. Now, you spoke of this glazine scheme being adopted by your competitors. Do you know of any brands of cigarettes on the market today, other than the Beech-Nut which have the glazine put around them?

A. Yes, I think the Melachrino cigarettes use that wrapper.

Q. Have you any there which show the use of the wrapper?

A. I have not looked at these. The Salisbury has it. That is the American Tobacco Company's manufacture. Displayed again by Chesterfield, Liggett & Myers manufacture; Omar, American Tobacco Company, and Lucky Strikes, and two, four, five packages in my hand, and Sweet Caporals making six, all coming from that same channel and generally used.

Q. Now, turning to this Beech-Nut package how did you come to adopt the oval and the picture of the twin beechnuts on it?

A. I took it from the Beech-Nut package that we owned in principle, leaving off the 1760 established, which appears on this package, and applied it to the cigarette package as coming from that package. But I have, in my experience in getting out other brands used the oval, many years ago, before the present Lorillard Company was in existence, I put out packages with the oval on.

Q. What was the name of that package?

A. Twelfth Night was one, I recall.

Q. Now, in connection with this Beech-Nut package something has been said in here about the use of the word "quality" on the package. How did you come to put the expression, "perfect quality" on the Beech-Nut package that you did?

A. Well, we believed that the contents of the package warranted the use of the phraseology, and it wasn't new to us, the word "quality" on cigarettes. I was looking at the package recently of Piedmonts, and I found there,

"Cigarettes of quality." Pardon the reference, but I wrote that in there years ago when I was with the American Tobacco Company, on a piece of advertising matter and my superior officer was so impressed with it that he had it transferred to the package.

Q. To the Piedmont package?

A. To the Piedmont package. It was on a piece originally of window display, and I put on there "Cigarettes of Quality," because they were particularly good then, and our executive officer had it transferred and ordered the use of it on the package, on the theory, he said, that the phrase was right before the consumer all the time he held the package.

Q. So it is a common thing to use the word "Quality"?

A. Very frequently used and misused.

Q. Now, Mr. Belt, when you started your campaign with this cigarette in 1921—as I understand—what procedure did you use—what method did you use in introducing it to the trade?

A. We had shipped the goods to the jobber at Boston.

Q. That is where you started the campaign?

A. Practically confined the campaign to the immediate future, or for the time, to the City of Boston, and the very nearby towns like Lynn and Lowell, if you are familiar with the locality, they are so near that they interchange trade, and you have to incorporate those so that the jobbers may take care of the trade. We canvassed the retail trade and offered the jobbers' salesmen with the consent of the jobber, 25 cents a thousand for a period of 60 days or 90 days—60, I think, perhaps, that for every thousand Beech-Nut cigarettes that they would sell and cause to be delivered to the retail trade, to enable us to get a quick and interested distribution of the brand, and then I put in that section about 40 retail salesmen or missionary men whose duty it was to canvass these stores, street for street and block for block and obtain a sale, if possible, of one or more cartons, or one or more thousand of Beech-Nut cigarettes with every retailer, and in a very short time the cigarette was well distributed. They had advertising matter, as I recall, the poster on the far side to the right was the one that we used in posting on the windows of the stores, the top cream colored poster, practically the center, advertising these cigarettes, and then we sampled and we a little later reproduced something similar to that poster on what is known as bill boards, this large 24 sheets, and then a little bit later, I got the first cigarette ad I have ever seen on the front pages of the Boston papers, not a very large ad but on the front page. Generally, they always had to go back inside, but I was able to get the papers to accept a Beech-Nut ad presented on the front page, and that, of course, gave it very quick and prominent publicity.

Q. Just read this. Does this Defendant's Cross Exhibit No. 5 illustrate the ad that you had put on the front pages of the papers?

A. Yes, that is the thing.

Q. And that ad has the word "Lorillard" on it?

A. Yes, Beech-Nut, made by P. Lorillard Company, and we pursued those methods. I only roughly state them, with much energy and effort, and distribution was quickly obtained and the brand began to sell right away.

Q. In addition to your missionary crew of 40 men, did you use your regular salesmen in pushing the brand?

A. Well, those were our salesmen assigned to this brand. We had, as I recall, about forty men in the City of Boston. That was, we felt a sufficient number for Boston and the nearby towns. Our other employes of the Lorillard Company continued to feature their regular business, like Planet tobacco, or various other merchandise.

Q. But you made up a special crew to take the Beech-Nut territory?

A. We sent salesmen with a head man assigned to Beech-Nut and nothing else. Then an assistant and corps of salesmen and advertisers who devoted their exclusive time to the Beech-Nut cigarette.

Q. Did you have any intention or purpose of trying to sell this Beech-Nut cigarette or market it on the reputation of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Not the slightest in the world. As foreign to my mind, as it would be to commit a crime right here or murder somebody.

Q. When you were getting up the package, did you have such an idea?

A. Not the slightest on earth. We took what we thought belonged to us, and adapted it to suit our package as we have done on many occasions.

Q. Now, how did the Beech-Nut cigarette sell when you first put it on the market?

A. Very well, indeed. As well, perhaps, as any cigarette I have ever been associated with in marketing, maybe a little quicker at the beginning.

Q. Were you ever associated with the introduction of a cigarette which had a large sale at the beginning as the Beech-Nut along the same line?

A. Yes, several brands I had put out previously had a rapid sale, but maybe not the first week or ten days did they start going as quickly. But in a period of 30 days or 60 days, they had run the same momentum.

Q. Can you name some of them?

A. Yes, I put the brand of Meccas and Hassans on the market. They both got into a considerable volume in a reasonable time. We got such a sale on Hassans to such an extent that we had to cancel the orders. That was a cork tip and we could not get the machines to put on the cork, and we could not get the cork to put in the machine. We imported it from Spain. That was really what caused us to put out Mecca, which was on the same principle with the exception it was not a cork tip. That went right along. That is how it came upon the market. That was in the old days, prior to the present Lorillard Company's existence. When we put out Zira and Nebo cigarettes, to which I referred, in 1912, they both ran into tremendous volume in a very short period of time, and as I recall those cigarettes before the end of 1912, had reached approximately seventy-five to one hundred millions a month, which back in 1912, was a lot of cigarettes.

Q. Proportionately it was larger than Beech-Nut or as large?

A. Well, I haven't referred to those figures. I intended to do it, but overlooked it. I am under the impression that we sold as many of Zira or Nebo separately within the same fiscal period as we did of Beech-Nut approximately. I am not absolutely certain of the details, but in substance, as I recall, we put out about nine hundred and some odd millions of Beech-Nut in the year 1921, and I think that we sold something like that many of the other brands. I think so. Those figures, I must say, I am not positively accurate about.

Q. How are Beech-Nut cigarettes selling today?

A. Very poorly indeed.

Q. To what do you attribute the decline?

A. Well, primarily to the fact that our competitors, who have enormous volume of brands were selling to the consumer at the time we put Beech-Nut on the market at 20 cents a package.

Q. What cigarettes, for example?

A. Camels, Chesterfields, Lucky Strikes, Piedmonts, and there was quite a business on Sweet Caporals in some sections, and we came on the market in what has previously been referred to as what we thought was the psychological time to offer the public what we regarded as an equal cigarette in quality, and certainly in physical appearance to any cigarette on the market at 15 cents for the package. And it seemed to me to be a very happy response; in 1921, the whole country was recovering from the deflation and so-called panic and in tobacco merchandise, at least, everybody seemed to be looking for a little better bargain, and that was what we thought would be the psychological time to offer 20 cigarettes for 15 cents that we believed to be for smoking purposes, as acceptable and as good as 20 cigarettes of our competitors as represented by these several brands, Camels, Chesterfields, Piedmonts, and Lucky Strikes, which were being sold for 20 cents for 20, and we sailed along splendidly with the merit and quality of the Beech-Nut cigarette until in the late fall of 1921 when they tilted the prices a little bit, and by and by those big brands that were so powerful that they could command the situation got down not only to the price that we had expected to sell Beech-Nuts to the consumer, but got cheaper, and it was not an infrequent thing to find Camel cigarettes offered at two for a quarter, and Beech-Nut being unable to force its position by lack of its volume, 15 cents, and the big brands were really cheaper and it just took the living life out of Beech-Nut and cut them down from nine hundred million—on that basis a billion a year, and not the whole country covered at once, mind you—we begun in New England and worked across the country, and had about covered the United States at the time these other brands became cheaper.

Q. You had a cut price war, did you not?

A. We begun and went into the most pronounced cut price war that I have ever observed in my entire tobacco experience, and the more they cut, and the more general that cut got to be—until every little hamlet and country store and everything was selling these goods at 15 cents and two for a quarter, and some exceptions, it may have been 16 or 17 cents, but the great volume of the business was down to the same or lesser price than our brand had been, and we suffered tremendously and quickly and our volume today on this brand is represented by approximately five or six millions a month—six or seven—be-

Q All those four packages last referred to as exhibits were on the market prior to your adopting the red background for the Beech-Nut?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This morning in your testimony you also spoke of the rapid growth of Nebo cigarettes and Zira cigarettes, which I understand were put out under your supervision.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. If necessary can you produce the yearly figures from 1912, say, showing the growth of these cigarettes?

A. I think so; I think I have it; I have prepared it, I I didn't this morning, it has been prepared.

Q. Now, Mr. Belt, in connection with your designing of the Beech-Nut pouch or cup for the Beech-Nut cigarettes and its connection or outgrowth, as you have testified, from the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco package, which I will call it, I would like to read you from a letter, which is part of Defendant's Exhibit D. 18 in this case, which is correspondence between the Beech-Nut Packing Company and P. Lorillard Company. This letter says:

Mr. Gifford: Give the date.

Mr. Cavanagh: It is page 25 of that correspondence.

Mr. Gifford: Give the date.

Mr. Cavanagh: Dated August 7, 1919. "In discussing the situation"—this is to P. Lorillard Company from the Beech-Nut Packing Company, and it reads as follows:

"P. Lorillard Company,
119 West 40th Street, New York City.

Dear Sirs:— Mr. Thomas J. Maloney.

"Our president, Mr. Arkell, was here yesterday and your letter of July 28th was presented at a meeting of our Executive Committee.

"In discussing the situation, a suggestion was made which possibly has not occurred to you, and therefore we are submitting it to you for your consideration. In view of the splendid success of your Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, would it not be worth while to simulate your Beech-Nut scrap tobacco package in a wrapping for your cigarettes; in other words, use for your cigarettes a form of label which will immediately apprise the prospective purchaser that the cigarettes are made by the same company making the popular Beech-Nut tobacco, and tie up the advantage and publicity you have already gained through the merchandising of that product. Our thought in regard to the above is prompted by the procedure of the Patterson Co. in connection with their Lucky Strike Smoking Tobacco and Lucky Strike Cigarettes.

"Should you not care to follow the suggestion offered above, we hope you will abandon the red background and change the same to blue or some other color, and we would like to see the words 'Beech-Nut Brand' a straight line instead of a curve, provided you could work out this idea to your satisfaction.

"Mr. Arkell has no recollection of hearing mentioned the advertising matter or wrappings you have provided for your Beech-Nut cigarettes, and while Mr. Lipe recollects some mention of it, no reference, as far as he can recall, was made in regard to quantity and neither of these gentlemen gained the inference that you would expect the Beech-Nut Packing Co. to absorb the cost of these supplies."

Now, I call your attention in particular to that portion of the letter referring to the adoption or to the suggested adoption for your cigarettes of the design or the substantial design of the Beech-Nut package. Did you, as a matter of fact, prior to the receipt of that letter, ever attempt or design a wrapper or package for your cigarette along the lines of the Beech-Nut scrap tobacco design on the package, and if so, can you produce the same?

A. We did.

Q. Just tell us what happened.

A. We, I felt very much inclined to the same belief as expressed in that letter prior to its receipt, and I had ordered an experiment made in the reproduction of the Beech-Nut chewing tobacco package for a cigarette package, and this, as far as I can tell, is what was produced, but as soon as I got it down to this proportion, being so much smaller in area than a package of cigarettes, and being intended to reach an entirely different type of consumer, I immediately reached the conclusion that the amount of proper class, as I will term it, and appeal, did not exist in this package, and I felt the necessity of looking further for an idea and explore that. Besides, in the consideration of the fact as related, I recalled the so-called sunburst effect, I believe it was popularly called around our place, the sunburst package—those words have been applied to it at least, I recall the sunburst effect to some degree at least and similarity of the old Sweet Caporal package, and in the desire to steer as far as possible from any form of infringement or copy that we might even get by with legally, but be criticized in policy of having adopted it, it assisted me in forming the still further conclusion of an unfitness, and to that I will add another objection. Previous to that I had put on the market a brand of cigarettes called Zubelda, a brand of cigarettes intended to be considered as a more direct competitor to the Fatima cigarette than anything that was then in the market, and that package—I happen not to have one, it may be in the exhibit—I don't know—was distinctly of stripes, as I recall it, it was a bluish green stripe and another color, I forget what the other was, on a yellow background or a yellow strip, but I have had visions and nightmares, I might almost say, of the Zubelda striping, radiating yellow and green, and I did not want any more striped packages with the memory of the failure of Zubelda in my mind, and the fear of a criticism by my competitors, the American Tobacco Company, in the radiating lines that existed on the package of Sweet Caporal cigarettes, and therefore we didn't proceed farther in attempting to apply an exact reproduction of the tobacco package as a model and fashion of the style label for the cigarette package.

Q. And you had, as I understand your testimony, made this specimen design that you have produced along the lines of the Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco prior to the receipt of that?

A. Oh, long, that was the first thing we had tried out.

Q. Did the Sunshine package of Liggett & Myers, do you know, have any rays on?

A. Yes, but at the time that we were considering this the Sunshine package, I don't think was in existence. I think it has rays, but it was put out prior to the—subsequent to this period, after this period. I think that came along probably a year, the previous year. I think it was put out in 1920, and this was considerably before that time.

Mr. Cavanagh: If your Honor please, we offer in evidence this specimen wrapper of the Beech-Nut cigarettes.

The Court: Admitted.

(Wrapper marked D. 45.)

Mr. Cavanagh: And also the package of Zubelda cigarettes to which the witness has referred.

(Package marked Exhibit D. 46.)

Mr. Cavanagh: And I also offer in evidence the package of Sweet Caporal cigarettes.

(Package marked Exhibit D. 47.)

Q. Now, Mr. Belt, in your long experience in the tobacco business, have you ever heard of a tobacco company which manufactured any food products, confections?

A. I never have.

Q. Do you regard food products, from your experience in the tobacco business, do you regard food products and confections as being in the same class of goods?

A. By no means, entirely distinct.

Mr. Cavanagh: The direct examination is closed. The witness is yours.

Cross examination by Mr. Scott.

Q. I think you said, Mr. Belt, that your principal Turkish brands are Helmar, Deities, Murad, Mogul, Trophies, and London Life; is that correct?

A. Yes, that is.

Q. Do they form a material part of the business of the Lorillard Company, an important part?

A. You mean of the cigarette business or the total business?

Q. Do the cigarettes I have named in the aggregate form an important part of the Lorillard business?

A. Yes, they represent a considerable volume of that business.

Q. One of the most important parts of the business?

A. Perhaps classified as a unit, as against any other one proposition, that is, I mean as against any one brand other than Beech-Nut tobacco, they may be better than any other one brand taken as a whole, collectively.

Q. How about Helmar cigarettes, is that a big seller?

A. Very good seller.

Q. How does that compare in importance with the others of the list I named?

A. Well, the Helmar is about the same volume as Murad, but not as profitable a brand. We haven't been able to make as much money on Helmars, because the selling price is hammered down to such a point which has left but a small margin of profit with highly increasing cost of the imported Turkish leaf. We sell about equal in volume, about equal, but Murad pays a better profit to the company.

Q. Are there any of the all-Turkish that sell in larger numbers than the Helmar and Murad?

A. No, those are among the largest brands.

Q. Did you have a box of the Helmars in your hand?

A. I haven't had the Helmar.

Q. I think I have one with me. This is a box of the Helmar cigarettes that you have referred to, is it not (indicating)?

A. Yes, that is a package of tens. There are packages of twenties, fifties and one hundreds.

Q. Does the name Lorillard appear on that package in any place?

A. Yes, "Capital stock owned by P. Lorillard Company," I think, if it is a modern package. "Capital stock," I am sorry to plead my poor eyes, "owned by P. Lorillard Company" under the name S. Anargyros.

Q. Where did you read that?

A. Underneath the signature "S. Anargyros."

Q. On the inside of the cover?

A. Of the package, yes.

Q. You read it, did you not, with some difficulty?

A. Poor eyes.

Q. The name that you read appears in white letters upon the black scroll or flourish appearing under the name Anargyros?

A. No, that is a straight line, the—under Anargyros there is the corporation inscribed in the scroll, but the capital stock owned by P. Lorillard Company is in a separate and distinct line under the scroll, and very legible in most. That is a bad print. Most of them are very clear.

Q. The place where you have read the words "Capital stock owned by P. Lorillard Company," being on the inside of the package of the Helmar box, inside of the cover?

A. Yes.

Q. That is the only place, is it not, where the name Lorillard appears upon this Helmar box, that is right?

A. I think so.

Q. So that from the exterior of the box when sealed according to the Government regulation with a Revenue stamp, there is no place where the name Lorillard would be visible?

A. It is not visible as applied to the package on its exterior.

Q. Not in any place?

A. Not in any place.

Mr. Scott: I would like this marked for identification, to be offered later as plaintiff's exhibit.

Mr. Milton: Mark it in evidence, if you like.

Mr. Scott: All right, I offer that as Plaintiff's Exhibit P. 43.

(Package marked Exhibit P. 43.)

The Witness: I would like—am I permitted to make a statement?

Mr. Scott: You may.

The Witness: I don't know what the law is but the reason, Mr. Scott, that the "Capital stock owned by P. Lorillard Company," appears as it does, is due to the fact that those brands were gotten out under the name of S. Anargyros when S. Anargyros was a corporation owned by the American Tobacco Company before its disintegration, and it was transferred or made a part of the assets of the new Lorillard Company in toto, all the stock, physical assets, and so forth, came over, and the American Tobacco Company had been marketing the brand as S. Anargyros, but reasons developed that made it necessary to S. Anargyros, who was then operating as a corporation, but who was not known as a corporation and we applied the corporation and the capital stock owned by P. Lorillard to prevent the public from believing or possibly getting the impression that S. Anargyros was an individual and was offering cigarettes on his individual merit, and we put corporation on there to apprise the public of the fact S. Anargyros was a corporation, and as an individual might be dead or might be alive, might be in this country or might be in Greece, and we put the capital stock owned by P. Lorillard Company so as to show that all of that corporation was the property of the P. Lorillard Company and was not run as an independent separate corporation but to apprise the public of the fact that the capital stock belongs to the P. Lorillard Company, that S. Anargyros is a corporation and not an individual, and we did not think it would be judicious to affix P. Lorillard on the outside of those packages, because they were transferred without it, or to change the appearance of them, and we did not make an original place for it as we did not feel the necessity for doing so. It wasn't done and I think you will find that same thing applies to all the Anargyros brands owned by the Lorillard Company.

Q. The idea, as I understand you in short, was to have this information regarding the stock ownership conveyed?

A. As a legal proposition.

Q. In some part of the package but without at all interfering with the appearance of the exterior of the package? Is that right?

A. It was. The brand was in existence when that was decided to be applied. It had been on the market for some years.

Q. And I am right in my question?

A. Yes.

Q. You said that you thought that also applied, Mr. Belt, to the other brands?

A. I think it applies to all the Anargyros brands, Murad, Helmar, Deities, Moguls, Trophies—I think it is applicable to all of them.

Q. Your recollection, without verifying it—you may do that if you wish later—would be that the name Lorillard in this same way appears on all these brands you mention?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. You don't know whether it does or not.

A. I think so. I really think you will find that to be correct, although I am not absolutely certain.

Q. Have we a package of Deities in evidence? I will show you, Mr. Belt, a box of Deities, and you may examine it just to see whether your recollection was right.

A. It is on the front of this package, on the other it was on the inside, "Capital stock owned by P. Lorillard Company." I think it is on all the packages just under the name of S. Anargyros in every instance. On that package it appears on the outside.

Q. Very small type as compared with the Anargyros?

A. Yes. Put in after they had been running for years and could not be very well made larger.

Mr. Scott: If I may, I will also offer this as Plaintiff's Exhibit P. 44.

(Received and marked Exhibit P. 44.)

Q. Now, we will just run through some more of these. London Life was another one of these Turkish brands?

A. I believe I called that; I am not sure whether we transferred London Life to Lorillard. It has been a very inactive brand; I am not sure whether we retained it or not. I don't think it is on this one—yes, it is on the inside.

Q. It is on the inside of the London Life box in the same way as with the Helmar—I am correct?

A. Yes. Whether the S. Anargyros appears on the package, that is, when it appears solely on the inside it appears in that way; where it appears on the outside as in Deities it appears on that "S. Anargyros Corporation, capital stock of S. Anargyros owned by P. Lorrilard Company."

Q. I think you stated toward the close of your examination that you did not know of any tobacco company making food products. How about the converse of that proposition; any food company marketing tobacco products under the food company's own brand?

A. As a manufacturer, I believe the question was raised of what we call a wholesale grocer; that exists sometimes, a wholesale grocer has his private brands of food products and his private brands of tobacco products and may be using the same name, but I don't know of any so-called tobacco manufacturer who manufactures any food products under any name, and consequently, I don't know of any prominent food products manufacturer like the Beech-Nut Company being the manufacturer or who have intended to manufacture tobacco products.

Q. But you do know of wholesale grocers who put out cigars and cigarettes? A I think it was more or less in the old days, the custom of wholesale grocers to have the name that might apply to various merchandise, food stuffs, maybe some private brand. I am under the impression that Sprague, Warner & Company of Chicago had a brand made for them, Richelieu, I think is the name that is used on some food products, and also on some tobacco products. But this is a private controlled brand, not an open market brand.

Q. Private controlled brands of that kind are not unusual?

A. It is the property of Sprague Warner. I don't think the manufacturer, whoever it may be, makes it for anyone except Sprague Warner.

Q. That is not an unusual circumstance?

A. Not restricted to individual distributors, but as an open trademark, I don't know of it to my knowledge.

Q. Do you happen to know whether the firm of Park & Tilford in New York put out any cigars or cigarettes under their own private brand or under their own name?

A. Why, I think they are putting out a brand of cigars called Tilford. That is a controlled brand. Park & Tilford put out a cigar called Tilford.

Q. You don't understand that they manufacture it themselves?

A. Yes, I think they do. I think Park & Tilford manufactures Tilford cigars, a cigar that is called "Tilford."

Q. You think they have a cigar factory?

A. I think so. They did have, I am sure.

Q. Do they put out cigarettes, do you know under their own name?

A. I don't think so. I don't know of their putting out a cigarette.

Q. Do you know of any wholesale grocer who puts out cigarettes under his own name or his own brand?

A. I don't believe that I recall it, it has been once or twice my experience that we have given in the old days a controlled brand to a jobber, that is, he controlled it like Sprague and Warner did the Richelieu. I think I recall giving a firm of Stickney & Company, St. Louis, some years ago, a brand of cigarettes for which they had no competition, but I don't think we ever got a duplicate order. It has often resulted in similar efforts receiving no justification.

Q. You mean the Lorillard Company—

A. That was in the old days, in the days of the American Tobacco Company. We haven't done it, I don't think we have a so-called controlled brand—we manufactured a brand for Liggett Company—their property; we did the work for them, they sold it.

Q. Well, this instance you referred to in St. Louis. The American Tobacco Company made the cigarette and put the St. Louis Company's brand on, and the St. Louis Company took them and sold them.

A. Whether we put Stickney & Company's name on, I am not clear. It has been 15 years ago, but it is a clearly established fact that brands like that have never existed to any extent.

Q. The tobacco company manufacturers or many of them do manufacture when requested to do so, brands for customers, do they not?

A. Well, it may be possible that some do, we don't. I don't recall that we are making anything except this brand for the Liggett Company. We have made a brand or two but it is so infinitesimal.

Q. Of cigarettes or cigars?

A. No, cigarettes. I am not posted about the cigar end of our business much, but I think there are very few brands of cigarettes in existence other than the open trademark brands of the principal manufacturers, perhaps the percentage would represent less than nothing.

Q. Does the Liggett chain of drug stores have a brand of cigarettes?

A. Yes, I spoke of them. Black and White.

Q. You make them?

A. They have a brand that we manufacture for them. They own the brand.

Q. The Lorillard Company makes them?

A. We simply make it. They guarantee the wrapping material in case it is discontinued to reimburse us. We manufacture the brand, a certain grade, and deliver them to them at a price. That is all our connection with them. It is their property, the trademark rights of the Black and White lies with them. I spoke of that just before.

Q. In your direct testimony you spoke of offering special inducements to the salesmen who introduced the Beech-Nut cigarettes?

A. Salesmen of jobbers, or to the jobber, I believe, we made it; it, in the main, I think, reached the salesmen of jobbers.

Q. Salesmen who come in direct contact with the retailer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they any special instructions issued by the Lorillard Company that were directed to or intended to reach the salesman who came in contact with the retailers?

A. Well, only through the house we sent a circular, matter of record, we sent a circular to all of our customers in that section saying that we would pay an extra compensation of 25 cents per thousand on the sales of Beech-Nut in a fixed time, say two months, and the jobbers, most generally, almost without exception, unless it be some little fellow who did his own selling, they, as I understood it, extended that offer to their selling organization and the point was, it was maiden territory, you understand, and the goods were at that time sold at the price the manufacturer had hoped would prevail which gave the jobber a very radical profit and the 25 cents additional went to the salesmen, and a good big effort was made to get in quick and get the distribution. That is why I made the offer. We were able to accomplish more distribution and enthusiasm and co-operation with that 25 cents than we could buy without jobber salesmen with a dozen quarters to the thousand. It would probably cost us three or four dollars a thousand to do it straight from the shoulder with our forty men, as against the combined selling power of all the jobbers.

Q. During this publicity campaign for the introduction of the Beech-Nut cigarettes, did it come to your knowledge at any time that the Beech-Nut cigarettes were being mistaken for a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Do you mean thought to be a package of gum or a package of something else?

Q. No, thought to be a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. I cannot say that I recall directly. There was some discussion of it at different times. I think I met with some instances myself where something relative to that or in reference to that was mentioned. There seemed to be curiosity expressed by some dealers that I might visit or retailers who were familiar with the name Beech-Nut in gum, perhaps and were not at that time, much familiar with it in tobacco products because the brand of Beech-Nut tobacco had practically never reached at that time beyond a very extremely limited way in a distribution in New England and particularly in Boston, and I felt constrained to believe that, because, as we came further west, with the Beech-Nut cigarette there was practically no discussion of it as compared with at first, when we covered the area that had been covered by Beech-Nut. But these remarks that may have been made of whatever nature they were were at the immediate moment, so to speak, when the brand was put out, but it passed almost like vapor.

It did not linger. They quickly appreciated the fact that Lorillard was the manufacturer of Beech-Nut cigarettes. It was stamped on the package and pretty clearly admitted on the face of the package. I do recall that salesmen at different times might make some reference to the usual chat between retailers and themselves. There might have been some reference in some way, what I would call sort of careless conversation.

Q. Did you ever issue any instructions to or designed to reach the salesmen who came in contact with the retailer?

A. When that information came—

Q. Instructing such salesman to take precautions against the Lorillard Beech-Nut cigarette being mistaken for a product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Any time there was any discussion by the salesmen, I gave the men in charge of crews and channels down orders to make it very clear that we had intended to do that, and pointed out that we put the name "P. Lorillard" on the package to identify it very clearly as a Lorillard product, and that we did not wish anyone to be under the wrong impression regarding it, and therefore to please make it very clear that Beech-Nut cigarettes and Beech-Nut tobacco were manufactured by the P. Lorillard Company.

Q. The substance then of this communication, however conveyed, was that the salesmen were to take special precautions to make it clear that they were not made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. Well, they were to meet any careless remark with the proper information on the subject. As far as making any special precaution we did not take any, except that when a man said, "Is that made by the Beech-Nut Packing Company," we said, "No, it is made by P. Lorillard." We did not wish him to deceive himself. It was our intention to do just the opposite with all things.

Q. Then it did come to your knowledge that certain merchants were making that mistake?

A. There had been some remarks on the subject of the name.

Q. Mr. Belt, when the Beech-Nut cigarette was first put upon the market, did the package bear the expression "Cigarettes of Beech-Nut Quality"?

A. No. I think we had a phraseology to my recollection like that, that we changed slightly. Changed the wording, resulting from, I think, some kind of a protest or objection on the part of your clients. And not desiring to offend we acceded, I think, we making that change in the wording. I am not familiar with the exact words.

Q. My question, Mr. Belt, was more directed to know whether that change was made before or after—

A. I say, I think the label was in existence, but had not been shipped. That was my expression, that it was changed.

Q. You cannot be sure about it yourself?

A. I cannot at the moment. I am positive, though, almost positive, that the package as we have it, is the way we shipped it. That is my recollection.

Q. That is one of the new packages you have?

A. I imagine so. The only one I know of that was shipped, we were discussing several other things.

Q. Mr. Belt, about how many brands of all kinds of tobacco products, including chewing tobacco and smoking tobacco, cigars and cigarettes are now put out by the Lorillard Company?

A. There must be—

Q Approximately?

A. 50-75-80, extreme aggregate, taking everything that exists.

Q. Can you state how many of these brands are put upon the market without the name "Lorillard" on them?

A. No, I cannot, Mr. Scott.

Q. You know that some are, though?

A. Some are without the name?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes.

Q. And if I were to name any particular one of the brands barring a few that you definitely remember, you could not tell me whether or not the name "Lorillard" appears on it, could you?

A. The detail of them from memory isn't in my mind. My association has been with cigarettes.

Q. Well, limit the question to cigarettes?

A. How?

Q. We will limit the question to cigarettes.

A. Why, yes, I think the name "Lorillard," I believe appears on most of the brands that we have put out since the disintegration. I think it is on Zira and Nebo.

Q. On the outside or inside of the box?

A. That I would have to challenge my memory for. The brands have been very slow sellers for several years. And I haven't kept up with them, but I think they are on. I know from several years ago, now, a year or two ago, at least, Mr. Maloney thought that we were making a mistake in not making "Lorillard" more prominent, more closely identifying it with new packages. And I think we put it on our Muriel cigar, the front of the box, Lorillard Murial Cigar, or on the inside somewhere, I know that brand ran without it, and that has been more or less the case with a number. I know it is on our Lorillard cigars and our old Virginia cheroots, too, I imagine.

Q. Can you tell me definitely whether the Lorillard Company ever did issue any circular designed and worded to cause the salesmen to guard against any impression that the public or the retailer should think the Beech-Nut cigarettes were produced, or put out by the Beech-Nut Packing Company?

A. I don't recall any such publicity, Mr. Scott. I remember having spoken to the men, some small reference to it, but I don't recall. You see it has been several years ago, much has happened in my mind in that time. I don't recall such a circular. I don't recall any such—it might have been some direct letter to someone that may have written for information, I don't know.

Q. If there was any general custom on the part of district salesmen in this regard, it would not have originated with you then?

A. Well, no—yes, in so far as, for instance, if I was in Boston, and the district manager said, "Mr. Belt, somebody got into an argument, and asked me today about Beech-Nut and spoke about another Beech-Nut on the market." I may have said to him, "Well, I hope you made it very clear to him the fact in the case. I will be glad if you will do that whenever an occasion presents itself." But so far as in advance speaking to other men, and anticipating that, I cannot say that I ever did. I don't recall ever having done so. There was a very little of it and for a very short time.

Q. It would be your best opinion then that the only warnings of that kind would be merely casual and occasional?

A. They were, Mr. Scott.

Q. That is right?

A. Yes, sir. I don't recall such a letter, it may have been by the Legal Department or somebody else—it may be in existence, but I don't recall it at the moment.

THOMAS J. MALONEY, called and sworn in behalf of the defendant, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Cavanagh.

Q. Your name is Thomas J. Maloney; you are of legal age; you reside at 197 Belmont avenue, Jersey City, N. J., and you are president of P. Lorillard Company, the defendant in this case, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Mr. Maloney, how long have you been president of the P. Lorillard Company?

A. Since 1900, going on 24 years.

Q. You were president of the P. Lorillard Company while it was a part of the old tobacco combine?

A. The American Tobacco Company never controlled the old—it controlled it but it did not own the stock. It had never been dissolved and stayed intact, and I succeeded P. Lorillard as the president in 1900.

Q. So you have been the president of P. Lorillard Company for—

A. Going on 24 years.

Q. And the P. Lorillard Company is engaged in the manufacture of all kinds of tobacco products except snuff?

A. All kinds except snuff.

Q. Mr. Maloney, how long have you been in the tobacco business yourself?

A. About 50 years.

Q. Will you briefly, and in order, if you can, as you go along, describe your connection and experience in the tobacco business from the time you started out up to the present, to give the Court an idea of your experience in this line?

A. I started as a boy in the tobacco business in Covington, Kentucky. I went to strip tobacco for a cousin of mine who was in the tobacco business. From that I went with a firm by the name of Lovell & Buffington, who were manufacturers of fine cuts and smoking tobaccos, and afterwards went in the plug business. I left Lovell & Buffington concern and went with the R. Hamilton concern, better known as the Bull Dog Tobacco Works. I was with him then as the superintendent of his factory, and had been promoted to a buyer. From the fall of 1880, until the time I made a connection with the Lorillard Company of Jersey City, and during that period I was four years buyer for the company of the raw materials. In 1885, July 1st, I made my connection with the Lorillard Company as the superintendent of their fine cuts and smoking. After a period of three years, I became general superintendent of the Lorillard Tobacco Company interests, who manufactured all kinds of chewing and smoking tobaccos and snuff. In, I think it was the spring of 1900—no, the Continental Tobacco Company was formed in the fall of 1899, the Lorillard Company was taken over by the Continental Tobacco Company and in the following spring I was made president, through the control of the common stock of the Lorillard Company, and I have maintained and held that position since. During that time I had been made a director of the American Tobacco Company that same year, and also occupied the position of vice-president of the American Tobacco Company up until the dissolution of the American Tobacco Company. So that brings you right up to the moment.

Q And from the time of the American Tobacco Company in 1911—

A. Yes.

Q. —up to the present day, you are and have been president of the P. Lorillard Company?

A. I am and have been president of the Lorillard Company.

Q. Mr. Maloney, it has been testified in this case that Luhrmann & Wilbern Company was a part of or controlled by the American Tobacco Company.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever have any official connection with the Luhrmann & Wilbern Company?

A. Why, I have no recollection other than the supervision and production of their manufactured goods.

Q. Through your connection with the—

A. With the American Tobacco Company.

Q. As I understand you, Mr. Maloney, you have had a great deal of experience, years of experience, in the manufacture of tobacco and in the buying of tobacco?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the selection of tobacco.

A. During my vice-presidency of the American Tobacco Company my chief position was that of charge of the manufacture, purchase and construction.

Q. And, as I understand it, you have gone from the leaf end of the tobacco business, with which you are familiar, to the manufacturing end?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever yourself devise any blends or formulas for tobaccos?

A. Many.

Q. In order that the Court may gather something of your experience, will you please name some of the better known or famous tobaccos of which you have made the blends?

A. I made the blend of Honest, I made the blend for the Pickerton Tobacco Company of Red Man, I made the blend of Beech-Nut, I made the blend of Havana Blossom, and many other blends during my time with the American Tobacco Company and the Lorillard Company.

Q. The blend or formula of tobacco is a very important factor in its success, from your experience, is it?

A. I would say yes.

Q. Mr. Maloney, did you ever yourself invent or devise any machinery in connection with the manufacture of tobaccos?

A. I have invented quite a few machines.

Q. Will you name one or two types or kinds?

A. I own the invention of the first man in America to put foil and paper together, that is one; I have invented labelling and stamping machines, and also driers. I was the first man to introduce into the tobacco business what was the textile system of drying, which was used by yarns, which made an enormous saving in labor, and the breaking up of tobacco, as it was a continuous process, instead of like in the old days they put it on racks, carried it from room to room, and the tobacco stuck on those racks, they used to have to knock it off with pieces of belting on account of the sweetening material adhering to these racks, and there was great destruction and breakage of tobacco by this system. This was after I became associated with the American Tobacco Company. Some claimed it might destroy the texture, but through hard efforts I won out and had every plant connected with the American Tobacco Company throughout the United States equipped with that process of drying.

Q. How about stemming machines?

A. Stemming machines? I have had a great deal to do with it, but I have not been the inventor of stemming machines. I never invented a stemming machine.

Q. Mr. Maloney, in order that the Court may understand what we refer to as leaf tobacco and follow the case with more clearness, perhaps, will you produce some leaf tobacco?

A. I have some samples of leaf tobacco there which I would be pleased to explain to the Court. Like Mr. Bolt, my eyes are getting poor, and I have got to use glasses.

Q. You may then explain to the Court what the various kinds of tobacco are in the leaf.

A. This is what we call our grade M tobacco, Burley tobacco, which is used in the Navy plug chewing.

Q. What is a Burley tobacco?

A. It is a particular kind of tobacco grown in the State of Kentucky, in the eastern and western part of Kentucky.

There is a grade of leaf tobacco we call our P. grade (indicating), which we used in our second grade of plug chewing.

Q. Is that a Burley?

A. That is a Burley tobacco; that is the wrapper that goes to cover the plug (indicating). That is what we call bright Virginia or North Carolina tobacco.

Q. That is due to its color?

A. Due to its color and its process of raising.

This is what we call a Green River tobacco, it is raised in the southern section of Kentucky, used principally for long cuts and pipe smoking, and chewing tobacco, such as Five Brothers, Honest Long Cut, Liberty Long Cut, Mechanic's Delight Long Cut, and Green Turtle.

Here is what we call, Judge, Grade K (indicating). It is considered the highest grade of Burley tobacco that grows, used in Planet Plug Tobacco, which is sold in the New England States, the biggest seller that is in the New England country.

That is the wrapper, that is the dark Virginia, showing you how different the color may be between the two tobaccos grown in the same state, cured under different processes by heat (indicating).

The plug will show there. Have you the plug there, young man? (Package handed to witness.) There it is, right there. There is the Climax which shows the bright (indicating). That is the Planet plug, that is the wrapper that is used on the Planet Plug (indicating).

Now, we get down to the Burley type, what we call our G2X, which is made into the blend of the cigarettes of the Beech-Nut and the Camels, and of the Lucky Strikes and Chesterfield. That class of tobacco that goes into that blend to make that class of cigarettes is the Turkish tobacco and the Virginia tobacco, which I will show you later.

This is a class of Burley which we rate as our CL, which is made usually in the case of fine cut chewing tobacco, such as Pioneer Fine Cut, our Sweet Burley Fine Cut, made by Liggett & Myers, or Spalding & Merrick, of Chicago.

There are types of Havana tobacco, which is used in connection with Between the Acts, Little Cigars, and our Muriel cigar, in the blend.

This is what we call the Connecticut, C2 (indicating). That grows in any size up into the wrapper, the binder, that is what we call a C2, used as a filler, and also used in connection with making Beech-Nut chewing tobacco.

Q. Beech-Nut chewing?

A. Yes, that is part of the blend. Here is Porto Rico filler. I have none of the Porto Rico leaf here, because of its duty being on the leaf, it is usually stripped in Porto Rico and they usually send it stripped because labor is cheap in that country. This is what they call the Havana filler (indicating). That is the term, I can't just think of the term they call it there in Cuba. There is a bunch of it, the Havana, showing you how close they work on the scrap there—they gather the small leaves and tie them in that condition (indicating). Here is WF, No. 1, that is Wisconsin tobacco. That is used in Beech-Nut chewing and the blend.

You see by these various tobaccos, (these are binders), that is where they get the scrap—those are the most perfect leaves that come out of the crop, and when the cigarmaker takes that, you will notice that the operator will take the face of the leaf and will stretch it. He takes his knife and strips it so as to get it the shape of the cigar when they roll the cigar, so that you will get a smooth surface, and these cuttings and trimmings the cigarmaker sells for scrap, and that is why you get the very best tobacco that grows into this blend.

Q. Beech-Nut blend, you mean?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the Lorillard tobacco?

Q. Yes, we have competitors, outside manufacturers. That is from Porto Rico, some Porto Rico tobacco (indicating).

Q. What is that, Mr. Maloney?

A. This (indicating) is the bright Carolina, this (indicating) is what we call the old Belt of Virginia tobaccos; this is the foundation of the blend of these blended cigarettes. The proportion is greater in most blended cigarettes of this class of tobacco than either the Turkish or Burley which go to make the blend of cigarettes.

I bring these specimens to the Court to show that it requires skill and time, a long time, to gather this information to enable a man to supervise and clearly operate a tobacco plant. As I say, I have been fifty years in the business, I have made a success of the business, I made millions for the people who employed me as a young man, and it was my knowledge of this tobacco and the various types that raised me to the position which I have occupied for the last 25 years.

I was told at the time that the American Tobacco Company was formed—I was then the general superintendent of the Lorillard Company—some of my colleagues of the Lorillard concern said "we had better form a combination, any man who is not from North Carolina cannot live in that company,"—I said, "I never formed a combination, a group of any kind in my life, and I will take my chance."

Q. What is that tobacco, Mr. Maloney?

A. This tobacco here is broad leaf tobacco.

Q. What is that used for?

A. Used principally for binder and wrapper.

Q. And this (indicating)?

A. That is the same, only strip.

Q. Now, Mr. Maloney, outside of those tobaccos is also what is known as the Turkish leaf, isn't there?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is that tobacco grown?

A. It is produced in Greece and Turkey, and we buy most of ours from Sassoon, and we have had headquarters at Constantinople, Athens and Sassoon.

Q. And that Turkish tobacco is used in the Turkish cigarettes?

A. For straight Turkish cigarettes, yes, 100 per cent. pure.

Q. When you make blended cigarettes, what do you use?

A. Usually with Burley tobacco and Virginia and Carolina tobacco.

Q. That is a domestic tobacco and the Turkish in the blend?

A. Yes. If it were not, which has been proven time and again, the tobacco interests of this country would have been hurt tremendously—if it hadn't been for the percentage of Turkish tobacco that holds fire well to consume and burn with the domestic tobaccos.

Q. As I understand your testimony up to this point, tobacco is a highly specialized industry, is it not?

A. I would consider it so.

Q. And the men who make a success in it are the men who have been brought up, born and brought up in it from the start?

A. I have been acquainted with most every man for the past 25 years that has been in the tobacco business who has made a success at all, and every one of them has come up from the ground. The men who are operating our plants today, some came in there as boys from Jersey City to me, from Louisville to me, from Middletown, and they have grown up into foremanships, assistant superintendentships, and superintendents, and to buyers. It takes years to bring them up. They must acquire the knowledge of these various grades. If they don't, how can they produce?

Q. Then you would consider, from your long and wide experience in the tobacco industry, that any experience gained in the manufacture of food products, chewing gum, jellies, hams or candies and things of that sort in the food line would not be of any particular or practical benefit in your business?

A. I don't think so.

Q. In other words, speaking from your experience, you would not put the superintendent of a food plant in charge of your tobacco, to make your Murads or your Planet, would you?

A. No, indeed. Even with our board of ten directors, with five officials and the other five directors of the board are all practical men in their departments, we haven't got what they call a dead man in our organization, either by pull or any other way. He is there on his merits.

Q. How about the other tobacco companies with which you are acquainted?

A. So far as I know they are on the same basis. There may be some that aren't, but not the heads.

Q. They are all practical men that are heads of the companies that you are connected with?

A. Mr. Duler, president of Liggett & Myers, is a practical man, and Will Reynolds is one of the most practical.

Q. Of R. J. Reynolds Company?

A. Will Reynolds of the R. J. Reynolds Company.

Q. The Camel cigarette people?

A. Mr. Reynolds has risen in his position in the tobacco business in the sales end of it. I don't think there was a man more familiar with the raw material or the manufactured process of the tobacco.

Q. Now, Mr. Maloney, can you produce for us from your knowledge and connection as president of the Lorillard Company, some figures showing the extent of the tobacco business or industry, so that the Court will have some idea of what this tobacco business is, that is, general statistics?

A. Yes. The number of acres used in growing tobacco in the calendar year 1922 was 1,725,000 acres.

The number of pounds in the crop for that year was 1,324,840,000. The value of the crop was $306,179,000.

The figures for the above three questions represent the aggregate of leaf grown in the United States in the year 1922, according to the official publication of the Department of Agriculture.

How many concerns engaged in the tobacco business—10,291. That counts men who get their license from the Government to enter the business.

Investment represented in these concerns $604,839,000.

How many cigarettes manufactured, in the year 1922, there were 53,582,028,983; cigars, large, 6,892,608,654; cigars, small, 634,671,847; smoking and chewing tobacco, 382,070,511 pounds. The snuff was 38,162,198 pounds. The figures showing the actual manufacture have not yet been published but will be practically the same as above.

The number of people employed from these figures here shows 157,097. The value of the products, $1,012,932,000. This is the last book issued by the Census Department of the Government.

Q. Mr. Maloney, can you give us some idea, and have you before the Court, simply for exhibition purposes, the principal brands that are put out by your concern, the Lorillard Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you name them, for instance the smoking and chewing tobaccos?

A. Yes. We have Climax as our leading plug brand. Planet comes next, in scrap tobacco, that is in the classification of scrap tobacco comes the Beech-Nut chewing and Honest is the second brand, with the brand of Bagpipe following close, if not probably leading Honest today at the rate it is going. In smoking tobaccos, our leading brand of smoking tobacco is Union Leader, and then comes Sensation, Omega, Mechanics' Delight and Long Cut, and Buzz and Red Cross.

Q. Just to be brief, this display which is before the Court here, running from this end of the railing—

A. Yes.

Q. —over to there (indicating), that is practically a good showing of the various tobacco products that the Lorillard Company puts out, is it not?

A. I would say yes.

Q. About what is the total approximate business of the Lorillard Company a year?

A. Between seventy and eighty million dollars.

Q. And how many people do you employ, all told, about?

A. I think at the present time about eight to nine thousand people. The introduction of machinery in the tobacco business since before the war has been tremendous. It has enabled the manufacturers of tobacco to almost cut their total labor in two. I will cite, for example—I will take that Polar Bear pack; I go back to before the machinery was introduced, a task, what was considered at that time before machinery came, a girl would pack 800 of those packs a day, that would be say, 100 pounds. She got probably a dollar and a quarter for doing that. We now put two girls on a machine and we get 100 gross from that machine, and there is 144 papers to the gross, so you can see what machinery has done, and with it all we have never had labor enough yet to go around, no matter how much machinery seems to be introduced into the business, we never cease, I mean we keep running constantly.

Q. How many factories have we, Mr. Maloney, about?

A. About twenty.

Q. They are located in various parts of the country?

A. In various parts, starting with New York City, Jersey City, Newark—

Q. What Newark and Jersey City factories have you?

A. A cigar factory which we own right here in Newark.

Q. What in Jersey City?

A. Two plants, a cigar factory on First street, and what we call the Marion branch on the west side of the hill.

Q. Can you make this Beech-Nut tobacco at the Marion branch?

A. Yes, making the Beech-Nut tobacco in three factories.

Q. Where?

A. Jersey City, Middletown and Louisville.

Q. Middletown, Ohio?

A. Middletown, Ohio.

Q. Mr. Maloney, has the Lorillard Company, to your knowledge, in the twenty odd years you have been president of it, ever manufactured or sold or had any connection with any concern manufacturing food products?

A. None.

Q. And in your wide experience in the tobacco industry did you ever know of any tobacco manufacturing concern which has also engaged in the food business?

A. No.

Q What is the retail price of this chewing tobacco, Lorillard scrap chewing tobacco?

A. You mean the Beech-Nut tobacco?

Q. Yes, that package there (indicating).

A. Ten cents.

Q. How many ounces are in there?

A. Two ounces.

Q. How many ounces in the usual scrap tobacco package?

A. From two and one-quarter to two and one-half ounces. Two and one-half is the maximum weight that I know of today in that class of tobacco.

Q. I understood your testimony to be that nothing but the highest grade tobacco is put into that cigarette, that you explained to the Court, and in the chewing tobacco, as you explained to the Court?

A. Tobaccos are classified, you see, in the cigar, as in the bright Virginia Belt and the dark Virginia as to wrappers, binders, fillers and what they call trashes.

Q. There is nothing but high class tobacco in them?

A Nothing but high class. We standardize as the best class of that tobacco in this country.

Q. What have you to say as to the plaintiff's charge that that Beech-Nut chewing tobacco of yours is a cheap tobacco?

A. I just think he doesn't know what he is talking about, he doesn't know tobacco, that is all.

Q. That tobacco has a good rating in the tobacco world?

A. I would like to ask the plaintiff a question, if they ever chewed Beech-Nut tobacco.

Q. That tobacco has a good rating in the tobacco world?

A. It is recognized in the trade as the standard.

Q. To your knowledge how does the volume of sale of this Beech-Nut tobacco compare with other chewing or smoking tobaccos on the market, the volume of sales or amounts sold a year?

A. I would say that the brand of Beech-Nut, according to the figures of 1922, was as large as nearly all other brands of this class sold. I think there was something about over sixty million pounds of scrap tobacco used, and I think there was over thirty millions of Beech-Nut.

Q. Mr. Maloney, speaking about this tobacco again and it being called scrap, I notice you have the word "chewing" on there. That is not a true scrap tobacco, is it?

A. No, that is made from long leaf. I say we do use some cuttings.

Q You showed the Court the cigar cuttings?

A. Yes.

Q. It is not sweepings that you take out of the factory or anything of that sort?

A. No. We own today probably the largest stock of raw material ever owned in the world by one company. We own today over one hundred million pounds of seed leaf tobacco today.

Q. Did you or your company ever have any of the intention or desire or idea this tobacco should sell upon the reputation of the Beech-Nut food products?

A. No, never.

Q. What, if any, instructions have you as president of your company given as to the preservation of formulas of tobacco wrappings and the like?

A. What is that?

Q. Have you ever given any instructions, or is your practice to preserve tobacco formulas, wrappings, wrapping materials?

A. Absolutely, yes.

Q. You always keep them?

A. Absolutely, there can be no destruction without the approval of the president of the company.

Q. You are willing to fill an order any time you receive an order for tobacco—

A. Any time.

Q. —from a reputable person.

A. Yes.

Q. Can you state, as president of your company and connected with the Luhrmann & Wilbern Company, whether you ever had any intention of abandoning that brand of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco?

A. Never. Brands are too scarce articles associated with the tobacco business to cast aside as of no value. That trademark today stands as worth millions.

Q. Mr. Maloney, there is one other thing I should like you to tell the Court, and then I will be through. In connection with the representation of the Twin Beech-Nuts which appear upon your chewing package, and also upon the cigarette package, can you tell the Court just exactly how that design of that Beech-Nut, the picture of the Beech-Nut came to be adopted, so far as your own knowledge goes?

A. Yes, I think I can shed some light upon that.

Q. I wish you would tell the Court.

A. It was either Mr. Ball or some of his associates in the sales department came in with a sketch. I said, "Who in the name of heavens ever brought that thing in as a beech nut," and whoever it was said, well, they stood by it, that that was the exact—I said, "I know better because I have a beech nut tree on my place."

Q. Where is your place?

A. Saddle River, New Jersey, here, and I said, "I will bring down some beech nuts, and I happened to have my secretary call because I had a number of foreign language newspaper men, who came to see me, and it happened to be on Sunday, call up on the telephone, wanted to see me, and I had my secretary at my home, and after I got rid of those men I said, "Come, Leo, go with me and we will get those beech nuts," and I wanted to run up to the farm a minute anyway, so we got in the car and brought down those beech nuts with us, and that is what the thing was about.

Q. You took down those two beech nuts?

A. I must have had a dozen of them. I brought some in an envelope.

Q. Will you show the Court some beech nuts from your farm of the kind you gathered?

A. (Witness hands beech nut to the Court.)

Q. Yes, they look just exactly like the picture that is on that.

Mr. Cavanagh: Those are all the questions I will ask you, Mr. Maloney.

Mr. Scott: There will be no cross examination, your Honor.

WILLIAM R. PERKINS, recalled:

Direct examinaton by Mr. Gifford.

Q. You have already testified in this case?

A. Yes.

Q. In Exhibit D. 18, there is a correspondence commencing on June 28th, 1918, and extending down to October 15, 1919; were you familiar with the circumstances surrounding that correspondence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what way did you become familiar with those circumstances?

A. As counsel for the Lorillard Company.

Q. Did you participate in any way to the matters related in that correspondence?

A. I participated in the conferences concerning them, and I drafted most of the letters, that is, so far as written by the Lorillard Company.

Q. Will you please state the circumstances surrounding that correspondence, taking up the letters in their order?

Mr. Scott: I object to that question, if the witness is to be asked he ought to let us know what circumstances these are.

(Question repeated.)

The Court: I don't think that is admissible.

Q. Will you please make any explanation that is within your knowledge and which you think important to the Court of the statements in this correspondence?

Mr. Scott: I object to that, your Honor.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. In the letter of June 28th, 1918, is the following paragraph, "On your part, there the matter was dropped, you having made no further reply or objection. On our part, we have continued to manufacture and sell tobacco products under the trademark 'Beech-Nut' until today it is one of the leading tobacco trademarks in this country."

Q. Can you point out here a specimen of the package which was there referred to?

A. It is the Beech-Nut package with the red radiating lines which was put up by the Lorillard Company in 1915, Defendant's Cross Exhibit 1.

Mr. Scott: The question is asked the witness to say what package this letter referred to?

Mr. Gifford: Yes.

Mr. Scott: And he points to this package?

Mr. Gifford: Yes.

Mr. Scott: I object to the answer and move it be stricken out.

The Court: I will permit that, he was referring to the chewing tobacco that is in issue in this suit. I understand. I should think you would admit that.

Q. In the course of this correspondence, the Beech-Nut Stogie Company is referred to, and the plaintiff called the attention of the defendant to the use by that company of the name "Beech-Nut," and in the letter of July 22, 1919, reference was made to calling the attention of the Lorillard Company to the matter and "let them take steps against the Beech-Nut Stogie Company." Were any such steps taken?

A. Why, there was, at that time, the information to the effect that the Stogie Company was applying for registration in Washington, of the brand Beech-Nut for cigars. They had been under stogie, but that is a form for cigars. And we investigated that and found out that was untrue. This Stogie Company had been doing business for some years over here in Pennsylvania, dating back to a time when there is a question whether the manufacturer of a chewing tobacco could stop another person from using the trademark for cigars. The Patent Office had not at that time held that the two were so near together that one embraced the other, and afterwards they embraced that decision and held otherwise and that is probably that situation.

Mr. Scott: I move to strike all this out after the answer to the question. The question was were any steps taken? There was a motion or so that answered it, and I move that the rest be stricken out.

The Court: Yes, I don't think this long explanation is necessary.

Q. In the letter of the Lorillard Company to the plaintiff, July 28, 1913, there is this paragraph: "We are now opposing in Washington an attempted registration by this concern of the name 'Brush-Nut' for some tobacco products. This is the beginning of measures which we hope will result in stopping the use of the name by this concern for tobacco products." What was done in that connection?

A. That is what I say was the information we had. And we took it up and found that that information was erroneous. We were informed they were going to do that, and took it up with our lawyers, but found out that they were not going to do it.

Q. In the letter of August 7, 1913, from the plaintiff to the defendant is this statement: "Our president, Mr. Askell, was here yesterday, and your letter of July 28th, was presented after the meeting of our Executive Committee. In discussing the situation a suggestion was made which probably has not occurred to you and therefore we submit it to you for your consideration; in view of the splendid success of your Brush-Nut scrap tobacco, would it not be worth while to stimulate your Brush-Nut scrap to have package in a wrapper for your cigarettes, etc." What do you understand to have been the Brush-Nut scrap tobacco package they referred to?

A. The same package I referred to before.

Q. That is, Defendant's Cross Exhibit No. 1. In the letter of August 27, 1919, to the plaintiff from the defendant is this statement: "Your letter of the 7th has been received and its contents noted, and we appreciate very much your suggestion of our use for the cigarette tobacco of the design now upon our scrap package. This thought occurred to us when we were originating a package of the cigarette and was tried out with the result that in our opinion the design was not adaptable to a package of the size of a cigarette package." What did that refer to?

A. The scrap package referred to the same scrap package I just referred to.

Q. And what was the package for cigarettes which is referred to there?

A. Well, the cigarettes had not at that time been put out. The package, the design was afterwards put out, but hadn't been put out at that time.

Q. This letter speaks of a design which was not adaptable to a package the size of a cigarette package. Is there any exhibit here of that design for a cigarette package?

A. Mr. Belt introduced that with his testimony. I have forgotten the exhibit number. It is marked D. 45.

Q. That is all.

No cross examination.

Mr. Cavanagh: Mr. Scott, we have a great number of exhibits or specimens, and you also have a set over here of your goods. It would be too much of a burden, I think, to try to put these in as exhibits. Would you be willing to stipulate that any time hereafter that we want to use them each party, upon an appeal, could use the same?

Mr. Scott: I don't know that it can be part of the record, because we are not going to put them in court.

The Court: You are not going to put them where?

Mr. Scott: If he is not going to put them in as exhibits, I don't see what effect the stipulation is going to have on them, but I can assure Mr. Cavanagh, if he simply wants to list these things, we will list ours and we will take them into the Court of Appeals informally, but I don't see how there can be anything binding about it, if they are not put in in the form of exhibits.

The Court: What are they here for now?

Mr. Scott: For the Court to look at; the exhibits that we introduced were simply to show the place where those labels were used, and the variety of products; I will have to leave it to Mr. Cavanagh for an explanation of his selection.

Mr. Milton: Can't we offer these exhibits as one, and furnish a list to the stenographer, what they consist of?

The Court: I should think so. Maybe the Court of Appeals would like to look at those things.

Mr. Cavanagh: Then, if your Honor please, defendant now offers in evidence, as one exhibit, the Lorillard collection of products which is here before the Court, and we will prepare a list of these various products and furnish a copy for the Court and for the plaintiff, if that is permitted by the Court.

(Received and marked Exhibit D. 48.)

The Court: Perhaps the other side will want a number for their products?

DISCUSSION RE EXHIBITS.

Mr. Scott: Plaintiff offers the collection of plaintiff's products present in the court room, and will furnish the reporter with a list thereof, it being understood that each party may withdraw these from the Court's custody—was that the understanding, or do you want to leave them here?

Mr. Milton: Well, I think we should leave them here.

Mr. Scott. All right. Just leave the offer unqualified.

Mr. Cavanagh: I think we might leave them here, and I would also suggest this, Mr. Scott, with the permission of the Court, that in case of the wear or tear of any of the packages we have on the list or in case any become lost or soiled, that we can replace them with duplicate packages, the same as we did with the stipulation throughout this long case. Packages rapidly become lost or soiled and we would like to substitute any in case one was not according to the list.

(Plaintiff's collection is marked P. 45.)

Mr. Cavanagh: If your Honor please, I would also like to offer as one exhibit, the collection of Mogul, Omar and Camel products as one exhibit.

(Received and marked Exhibit D. 49.)

Mr. Cavanagh: Now, your Honor, there is only one more point that I would like to ask Mr. Scott and counsel for the plaintiff about and that is this, that we have here the original Patent Office exhibits. Now, the stipulation in the Patent Office case in connection with this record is to the effect, and I think counsel will agree with me, and correct me if I am wrong, that all the testimony in the Patent Office case, plus the exhibits and the stipulations, are incorporated in this case, the same as if taken herein. Is that correct, Mr. Johnson?

Mr. Johnson: That is right.

Mr. Cavanagh: And as far as Patent Office exhibits go, I see no necessity, in view of that stipulation of reintroducing them as separate exhibits here. Is that correct?

Mr. Johnson: That is right.

The Court: If they are identified, there is no need of doing it the second time.

Mr. Cavanagh: They are identified. We have a list of them in the Patent Office case.

Mr. Scott: It must be understood that the Patent Office testimony is not reprinted in our large volumes, but there is a separate volume, two volumes, one of the Lorillard Company and one of the Beech-Nut.

Mr. Cavanagh: Defendant would also offer in evidence as Exhibit D. 50, a number of pieces of window display advertising, putting them in as one group exhibit, there being three pieces all told.

(Received and marked Exhibit D. 50.)

DEFENDANT RESTS.

Mr. Scott: We have no rebuttal.

(At this point an adjournment was taken to a date to be fixed by the Court for oral argument. In the meantime briefs are to be exchanged on or about December 1st, and if answering briefs are to be filed, they are to be filed by the respective parties upon the date of the oral argument.)

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, FOR THE DISTRICT OF NEW JERSEY.

IN EQUITY. No. 3056.

Beech-Nut Packing Company,
Plaintiff,

v.

P. Lorillard Company,
Defendant.

OPINION.
(Filed May 7, 1924.)

MESSRS. OFFIELD, BULKLEY, POOLE & SCOTT, solicitors for plaintiff, (WALTER A. SCOTT, ESQ., of counsel). CHARLES C. BULKLEY, ESQ., and JAMES R. OFFIELD, ESQ., and H. MCCLURE JOHNSON, ESQ., on briefs.

MESSRS. TREACY & MILTON, solicitors for defendant, (LIVINGSTON GIFFORD, ESQ., JOHN MILTON, ESQ., RICHARD B. CAVANAGH, ESQ., of counsel). J. GRANVILLE MEYERS, ESQ., and THOMAS L. PRESTON, ESQ., on briefs.

LYNCH, District Judge.

The plaintiff, a New York corporation engaged in the manufacturing and selling of food products, complains that the defendant, a New Jersey corporation engaged in the manufacturing and selling of tobacco, has damaged the plaintiff's reputation and good will by wilfully and fraudulently adopting the plaintiff's trade-mark "BEECH-NUT" as a label for tobacco products, for and on account of which the plaintiff prays an accounting for past damages and an injunction enjoining the defendant from further use thereof. The defendant, admitting the use complained of on certain brands of chewing tobacco and cigarettes, asserts a legal right thereto and prays a dismissal of plaintiff's bill. The word "BEECHNUT or "BEECH-NUT" was years ago adopted as a label by the predecessors in business of both parties to this action. A brief history thereof is advisable.

About 1897 the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, a Kentucky concern, adopted it for a combination smoking and chewing tobacco which was put up and sold in small packages. The tobacco was described as being of "superior quality Havana cuttings" and was what was and is known as a scrap tobacco. Following is a copy of the label adopted and used by Weissinger (Exhibit No. 17):

It will be noted that the word "BEECHNUT" is spelled without a hyphen; that the form of the label, in which not only the word "BEECHNUT" appears but a description of the contents and the name of the manufacturer as well, is square and that immediately underneath the word "BEECHNUT" is the print of a squirrel. The tobacco so labeled was sold on the market in Kentucky and adjoining states for a number of years subsequent to 1897. The right to make and sell it passed by assignments, stock transfers and otherwise from the Weissinger Tobacco Company first to the Continental Tobacco Company, next to the Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company, of Middletown, Ohio, and finally to the American Tobacco Company, where it resided when the latter company was dissolved by the United States Supreme Court during the year 1911. From 1897 to 1911 the tobacco continued to be manufactured, sold and dealt in by these various companies. For some years prior to 1911, however, the demand for it was gradually lessening, the output reaching a very low ebb in 1911. The decree dissolving the American Tobacco Company apportioned to the P. Lorillard Company, the defendant, a large number of tobacco trade-marks and brands, including the word "BEECHNUT." At that time the sale of "BEECHNUT" tobacco was practically nil. Up to that time, however, at least, the word had been continuously used as a trade-mark for smoking and chewing tobacco in substantially, if not precisely, the original form adopted by the Weissinger Company back in 1897, although, as we have indicated, the sales had almost completely fallen off. And up to this time (1911) the right to use the word "BEECHNUT" as a trade-mark in connection with smoking and chewing tobacco does not seem to have been assailed, certainly not by the plaintiff in this suit or by its predecessor in business.

That predecessor was the Imperial Packing Company, which, in 1892, adopted the word "BEECH-NUT" (spelled with a hyphen) as its label for a few food products, such as bacon and ham, which it then manufactured and sold. In about 1899 the Beech-Nut Packing Company was formed, succeeding the Imperial Packing Company. Thereafter the food product business of the plaintiff, growing rapidly, was extended to a variety of products, all relating to food, such as peanut butter, baked beans, chili sauce, tomato catsup, jams, jellies, vinegar, olive oil, ginger ale, mints, chewing gum, etc., in addition to ham and bacon, all of which were labeled "BEECH-NUT" and sold as the product of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. An illustration of the plaintiff's label follows:

It will be observed that this label is oval shaped; that within the oval are three pictures of beechnuts—one in the center and one on each side of the oval. Printed across the top will be found the words "BEECH-NUT BRAND" and across the bottom the name of the particular article which is contained in the package. From the smallest kind of a beginning in 1891 or 1892 the Imperial Packing Company and its successor, the plaintiff, built up a business which in the year 1919 approximated receipts of $12,000,000.

The Lorillard Company had been in the tobacco business for many, many years prior to 1892, utilizing a great variety of trade-marks and labels in the huge tobacco trade which it had succeeded in establishing. The name of brand or trade-mark "BEECHNUT" coming to it in 1911 was not at once utilized in the original Weissinger form or otherwise. Nor were any of the 1000 or more other trade-marks listed on typewritten sheets which the defendant company acquired at the apportionment which we have already referred to. The lists containing all of these names or brands were put aside for future reference.

In 1911 the defendant was manufacturing and distributing such well-known cigarettes as "MURAD," "MOGUL," "EGYPTIAN DEITIES," "HELMAR," "EGYPTIAN TROPHIES" and the well-known tobaccos "CLIMAX" and "SENSATION," besides a large number of other well-known brands. One of these other brands was known as "HONEST." There is testimony on behalf of the defendant company that the sales of this "HONEST" tobacco had, for a long time, been falling off. We think it is common knowledge that tobacco brands come and go. But, be that as it may, the defendant in or about the fall of 1914 conceived the idea of putting upon the market a new scrap chewing tobacco—a new brand. The formula therefor was worked out, the blend was perfected and a name was considered. The defendant quite naturally consulted its lists of names or trade-marks which a few years prior thereto had come to it from the dissolved American Tobacco Company. Names on that list which had theretofore been identified with scrap tobacco were of course first considered. There were but eight or nine of such names, among which were "BAG PIPE," "PANHANDLE," "METAL LEAF" and "SCRAP IRON." It was discovered that most of these "scrap" names were at the time being used as names for tobaccos then on the market, which fact limited the selection to two or three names. Among the two or three available was "BEECHNUT." So "BEECH-NUT" was selected and adopted. This new scrap tobacco, which was designed for chewing only, was not, however, put out in the old Weissinger "BEECHNUT" wrapper. That old wrapper described "BEECHNUT" as a chewing and smoking tobacco. It had not been manufactured for two or three years and there does not seem to be anything in the case to justify the conclusion that it had been sold during that period of time. It had just about died out, as tobacco brands often do. And as the new "BEECH-NUT" tobacco was of a different character, it was decided by the defendant company to change that old wrapper to one more in accord with the facts and the times. The wrapper decided upon follows:

LORILLARD'S
10¢
BEECH-NUT
ESTABLISHED 1760
CHEWING TOBACCO
EXTRA PICKED
BEECH

It will be observed that instead of a square label covering almost the entire package the changed wrapper has what has been termed a sunburst or radiating effect, in the center of which is an oval in shape somewhat similar to the oval of the plaintiff. Across the top of the oval inside the word "BEECH-NUT" with a hyphen was placed. Underneath the word "BEECH-NUT" the defendant placed the outline of a beechnut upside down. Other words placed by the defendant on its label were "CHEWING," "TOBACCO," "BEECH-NUT LEAF," "FULL WEIGHT," "EXTRA PICK" and across the top was printed "LORILLARD'S." The red band oval of the plaintiff was not adopted. Instead the defendant adopted an oval which was quite similar to ovals which were common at the time. (See the exhibits.)

This new "BEECH-NUT" scrap tobacco, introduced in 1915, within a few years was developed into a business of unbelievable proportions. Selling to the trade at less than the retail price of ten cents per package, its sales in 1919 amounted to $14,000,000 per year to the manufacturer—approximately $2,000,000 over and above the receipts of the plaintiff for its entire output. Many persons inquired concerning it. Some of them wrote to the plaintiff, the Beech-Nut Packing Company, regarding it and the plaintiff for a time turned these letters over to the defendant for attention. Then there developed some correspondence between the parties regarding the use by the defendant of this revised or revamped "BEECH-NUT" label. This correspondence, which contains a history of the case and the attitude of the parties, is important enough to be set out herein. It follows:

"Lorillard Co.,
"Middletown, O.

"Dear Sirs:

"We adopted many years ago as our trade name the word 'Beech-Nut' arbitrarily selected by us as the mark or name for our manufacturing output of food material. We also associated with such trade name 'BEECH-NUT' and as a part of the trade mark, an oblong or oval frame or border of a red color surrounding and enclosing a white oblong space with a picture or representation of a Beech-Nut centered therein.

"We have built up during the last quarter of a century a vast trade in our products and always with our trade name or trade mark associated therewith. We have expended a very large sum of money in so doing and the word or name 'BEECH-NUT' and our trade mark has become of vast value to us not only for these reasons but for the reason of a high quality and perfection of the various products manufactured by us to which this name and mark has been applied.

"So completely has this name and mark been attached to and associated with our goods during all of these years that the purchasing public has come to recognize this name and mark as our property as to origin and to purchase the manufacture and output to which this name and mark is applied without any further identification as to the origin of the word or name itself, believing that wherever they see our name and mark applied that we are the manufacturers of the product and purchase accordingly.

"We have from time to time added to the variety of our manufacturing commodities to which this name or mark has always been applied, as for example, a chewing gum product of somewhat recent production upon our part. While we have never as yet manufactured tobacco, the taking on of such manufacture in the future is by no means impossible or improbable. You will also see that the name or word 'BEECH-NUT' is a part of our corporate name. We have been thus particular to state this matter to you by reason of the acts upon your part which now follow.

"We have been shown a lined bag evidently employed for packing 'BEECH-NUT Scrap Tobacco,' apparently manufactured by one of your factories at Middletown, O. A prominent feature upon the bag is our trade name 'BEECH-NUT,' including the oval band and our characteristics burrs and nuts. It is difficult to believe that the presence of our trade name 'Beech-Nut' and mark upon the bag will not deceive the purchasing public in the belief that the contents of the bag are of our manufacture, and to us there is no other explanation to be given to the presence of our trade name 'Beech-Nut' and mark upon this bag except the intention on your part that the public shall be so deceived: and you will sell your tobacco by reason of the presence thereon of our name and mark. In other words, these acts strongly indicate to us intentional unfair trading.

"We have decided in the first instance to write you fully as to this matter and present to you our view of your acts and to request to you immediately to cease this use of our name and mark and give us written assurance of the same.

"We have confidence that now your attention is called to it you will recognize the justice of our position and that there will hereafter be no necessity of using any harsher course to enforce recognition of the same. We have been thus particular also for the reason that there can be no contention hereafter that we have not fully stated your position and ours in this matter. An early reply upon your part is requested and expected.

"Dear Sir:

"Your letters of June 11th and June 18th addressed to this company at Middletown, Ohio, relative to the use by us of the name 'Beech-Nut' for Scrap Tobacco, have been referred to me.

"Preliminary to any discussion of the matter, will you be good enough to let me know when you first began to use the name 'Beech-Nut'? I notice on your letterhead, 'Incorporated 1899,' but this of course does not necessarily mean that you began to put products on the market under the name 'Beech-Nut' at that time.

"The statement in your letter of June 11th, that you believe we are using the name 'Beech-Nut' with the intention that the public shall be deceived into thinking that our product is of your manufacture, is not only without the slightest warrant, but is little short of ridiculous. As a matter of fact, if such an impression should be formed, it would be to our detriment.

"Dear Sirs:

"Your favor of the 23rd ult. duly received.

"Our 'BEECH-NUT' trade mark and trade name has been used by ourselves and our predecessors since and prior to the year 1891. Both our trade mark and our trade name 'BEECH-NUT' has been used continuously since that date in our business and to such an extent and in such manner that both the name and the mark long since came to have a 'secondary significance and meaning'; that is, wherever the mark and name 'BEECH-NUT' is seen and no matter with what product it is associated with, it has a 'secondary significance' and means only the product and products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

"You are woefuly mistaken and entirely misinformed in your assumption and, indeed, your statement that the public is not deceived by your clients use of our trade mark and name 'BEECH-NUT.' We know as an absolute truth what is apparent on the face of the facts that the general purchasing public is deceived by your use of our 'Beech-Nut' trade mark and trade name and, indeed, this could not well be otherwise, but we know further that your salesmen and agents deliberately push your goods and trade under this identity of use of their mark and name.

"We beg to call your attention in this connection to our former communication to you in this matter and to again urgently request that you immediately stop the use in every way and manner of our trade name and mark 'BEECH-NUT,' in your business without further action upon our part.

"Gentlemen:

"We have your letter of July 2d, further with reference to our use of the name 'Beech-Nut' on scrap tobacco, and informing us that you and your predecessors have used the name since and prior to the year 1891.

"That the name 'Beech-Nut' has acquired a secondary significance and meaning in the packing industry and is associated in the public mind with goods of your manufacture may be perfectly true, but this would not give you the right to the name for all purposes. The authorities are overwhelming on the subject. You seem to proceed upon the assumption that we have recently begun to use the name on the tobacco. This is not the case. This Company and its predecessors in ownership of this brand have used it continuously since prior to the year 1898, as shown by records in my office. I have not made a search beyond that time, but I have no doubt that I can find that the brand is very much older.

"We would not desire to have it thought that our 'Beech-Nut' tobacco is made by your Company, and if you can give us the name of any salesman of ours who has made such a representation, we would be very glad to have it, and we can assure you that if he did make such a representation, his discharge will immediately follow. It could be of no conceivable advantage to us to have the public think that our tobacco product was manufactured by a packing establishment. Our concern has been in business for more than one hundred and fifty years, and in that length of time has built an enviable reputation for the excellence of its tobacco products.

"Though you may turn out an excellent quality of bacon, it does not follow that you could turn out an excellent quality of tobacco, or steel rails, or pianos or aeroplanes. If your contention were true, we, who have a brand of tobacco called 'Climax,' could enjoin the use of the name on a well-known threshing machine which is sold in the Western States, or we could enjoin the use of our name on the Lorillard Refrigerators. It has never occurred to us to attempt either.

"If you will look at our package of Beech-Nut Tobacco, you will see that the name 'Lorillard' is prominently displayed thereon. This was done with the desire that people should know the tobacco is coming from the Lorillard Company. It has been our belief that the fact that Lorillard made it would of itself be of value to the brand.

"It is difficult to see how you can seriously claim that there is the slightest similarity in the marking of the package and the fac-simile of your mark as displayed on your letterhead.

"If you desire me to point out to you authorities which I consider completely sustain my view as expressed herein, I will take pleasure in doing so.

"F. E. BARBOUR, ESQ.,
"BEECH-NUT PACKING COMPANY,
"Canajoharie, N. Y.

"Dear Sir:

"I have been able to locate some old price lists which contain our Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco and enclose them herein. I am also sending you an old package showing the use of the name 'Beech-Nut' and our present package.

"Beech-Nut chewing and smoking tobacco (scrap) was made by Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, of Louisville, Kentucky. This Company was bought out by The American Tobacco Company some time in 1903. Prior to the acquisition of the Weissinger Tobacco Company by the American Tobacco Company the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company of Middletown, Ohio, was acquired by the Continental Tobacco Company. In 1904 the American Tobacco Company and the Continental Tobacco Company were merged into a new company formed for that purpose and known as The American Tobacco Company.

"Under a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, the so-called Tobacco Combination, which included The American Tobacco Company, was split up. In this disintegration proceeding the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company, which had always been maintained as a separate entity, was acquired by P. Lorillard Company. In the meantime some of the brands formerly manufactured by the Weissinger Tobacco Company had been taken over and manufactured in the Luhrman & Wilbern factory in Middletown, and after the acquisition by our Company of the Luhrman & Wilbern business, including these brands, we continued to operate it as a separate Company until about two years ago, when we dissolved it, taking over all of the business and brands directly in our own name.

"I give you this history so that you may understand the various price lists in the name of Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company and the package in the name of Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company. I do not know the exact date of the old package, as the stamp is not legible, but it was prior to 1903.

"The price lists that I send you are dated January 2, 1904; May 6, 1907; July 1, 1910, and November 3, 1910.

"It is difficult for me to see how anyone can claim that there is any similarity in our products and yours, or in your label and ours, other than the name 'Beech-Nut.' Your claim that we would not have the right to use the name 'Beech-Nut' on tobacco products must find its basis in the idea that you can appropriate the name 'Beech-Nut' for all products of whatever character.

"That the law does not permit of such a claim is elementary. If your claim were maintainable, then the Lion Brewery in New York could enjoin the manufacture of Lion brand collars, or vice versa. Suppose that the J. B. Williams Company should tomorrow put out a new brand of shaving soap called 'Beech-Nut.' Do you argue that you could stop it because you have first used the name on ham and bacon? It seems to me that your argument must lead to this conclusion. The law of unfair competition, so far as it assumes to protect the public, assumes to protect the purchaser of average intelligence. It is difficult to believe that a person of average intelligence who enters a store for the purpose of buying 'Beech-Nut' hams or bacon could be deceived into thinking he was getting either if he were handed a package of 'Beech-Nut' chewing tobacco, or that the 'Beech-Nut' chewing tobacco was manufactured by the manufacturer of the hams and bacon. It is no more the custom in this country for a packer to manufacture chewing tobacco than it is for a manufacturer of beer to manufacture collars, and the purchaser of average intelligence perfectly well knows this.

"We have tried to make it evident on our package that our 'Beech-Nut' chewing tobacco is of our manufacture, by stamping across the top of the package, before the name, 'Beech-Nut' 'Lorillard's'. We have also on the other side of the package, plainly printed that it is manufactured at Middletown, Ohio. There is nothing in the get-up of the label, whether in design, color or wording, which could suggest to a person of average intelligence that it was of your manufacture, or in fact the manufacture of anyone except the Lorillard Company.

"As I have written you before, we consider it of immense value to the brand itself that it is manufactured by the Lorillard Company, and we desire the consumers of tobacco to know this, because we believe that the Lorillard name carries with it a vast amount of good-will and a guarantee of excellence. We are justified in this belief by reason of the immense increase in the sales of 'Beech-Nut' Scrap since we took the former manufacturer's name off and put 'Lorillard's' thereon.

"I think this covers the situation except with respect to any representations which you claim that some of our salesmen made, to the effect that our 'Beech-Nut' Scrap was a product of your Company. I have written you before that if you will give me the name of any salesman who has made such representation, and that fact can be determined, his discharge will be immediately forthcoming, as he can be of no service to us. If you will point out to me anything in the conduct of our business which tends to create a belief in the trade that our 'Beech-Nut' Scrap is made by you, we will thank you, so that we may rectify it. I assure you that we are just as anxious as you are, if not more so, to prevent any impression that our tobacco is made by you. Will you let me have a copy of the letter you received from the merchant in West Virginia making inquiry of you for 'Beech-Nut' tobacco?

"On this general subject, if you have not already done so, you might consult Nims on Unfair Business Competition, pages 200 to 300; therein I think you will find a very complete and satisfactory discussion of the law governing this subject. I will quote you paragraph 117 on page 236:

> " 'Property in a place name for all purposes cannot exist in one person, under ordinary circumstances. The defendant must be using it in the same or a similar business as the plaintiff. Large amounts of rubber as well as licorice might be found in Anatolia. If there were, the rights which the complainant has acquired in the use of the name in the licorice business, would not prevent another under certain conditions from acquiring a sole right to use the name in the rubber trade.'

"There is no distinction so far as the principle here laid down is concerned between a place name, a generic name, or a fanciful name. You might also consult the cases of Bordens Ice Cream Company against Bordens Condensed Milk Company, 201 Fed. 510, and Wells v. Ceylon Perfume Company, 105 Fed. 621.

"I apologize for the length of this letter. I desire to give you the facts fully, together with our views, and I sincerely hope that this will satisfy you as to the law and our entire good faith. We are as proud of our good-will and the excellence of our products in the tobacco business as you are of yours in the packing industry, and we believe with good reason.

"Dear Sir:

"We have your very interesting letter of Sept. 15th together with the price lists referred to and the package of tobacco.

"Your letter is a very interesting one and before giving a definite reply to same, desire to review the matter as presented by you so that we can give you an intelligent reply.

"At this time, however, we may express our agreement with you that the name Lorillard carries with it a vast amount of good will and unquestionably a guarantee of excellence. So does the name 'Beech-Nut Packing Co.' and we take the view that the increase in sales of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is due to the exploitation of the name 'Beech-Nut' with the oval label, and we cannot help but assume that the general impression is that these goods are manufactured by this Company rather than by Lorillard, at least to a considerable degree, for since writing you last we have another inquiry, and this time from Wm. Edwards Co., of Cleveland, O., asking us to ship them five cases of Beech-Nut scrap tobacco. The previous inquiry came from New River Gro. Co., Hinton, W. Va.

After this correspondence terminated in 1915 no action of any character was taken by the plaintiff as against the defendant. For four years thereafter there was inactivity on the part of the plaintiff during all of which time the defendant continued to deal in this

"BEECH-NUT" scrap chewing tobacco on a very large scale.

In 1919 the Lorillard Company planned to put on the market a "BEECH-NUT" cigarette and again there ensued some correspondence between the parties relative to this. (See correspondence, Record, p. 15, etc.) Negotiations between the parties relative to the right of the defendant to use "BEECH-NUT" as a label for cigarettes terminated without result. Thereafter the Beech-Nut Packing Company decided to apply for registration of "BEECH-NUT" for cigarettes, which application was published in the Patent Office Gazette and the Lorillard Company, upon learning of it, filed a notice of opposition in the Patent Office, where a hearing was had. The proceedings, a copy of which is by stipulation a part of this case, resulted in the denial of the plaintiff's application from which the plaintiff did not appeal.

In May, 1921, the plaintiff instituted its present cause of action, alleging that the defendant has injured its business good will—has appropriated the good will of the plaintiff to its own uses.

One of the defenses interposed is that of estoppel, the following extract from the opinion of Judge Mayer in the case of Valvoline Oil Co. v. Havoline Oil Co., 211 Fed. 189, being called to our attention:

> "It cannot be equitable for a well-informed merchant with a knowledge of a claimed invasion of right to wait to see how successful his competitor will be and then destroy, with the aid of a court decree, much that the competitor has striven for and accomplished, especially in a case where the most that can be said is that the trade-mark infringement is a genuinely debatable question."

To the point of estoppel the plaintiff replies that the testimony taken in the Patent Office proceedings first revealed to it that the defendant had abandoned the "BEECHNUT" label or trade-mark which was acquired in 1911; that it, from 1915 on, relied on the representation of the defendant as to facts which were peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendant and inaccessible to it, which upon their face (as furnished by the defendant) gave the defendant the indefeasible right to go on with the "BEECH-NUT" scrap tobacco; that the Patent Office proceedings disclosed that there was no continuous use of "BEECH-NUT" as a label for tobacco as the defendant had stated to it in 1915 but that the label "BEECHNUT" so allotted in 1911 had been abandoned and that some years thereafter a new trade-mark containing the word "BEECH-NUT" was adopted —the facts showing that there was a clear intention on the part of the defendant to abandon the old "BEECHNUT" label and to substitute for it one similar to that used by the plaintiff.

Did the defendant abandon "BEECHNUT" as a label for tobacco by permitting the word to lie dormant for three or four years and then reviving it in the manner which has already been described?

In considering this question it should be constantly kept in mind that the right to use a word for trade-mark purposes is usually, if not always, confined to "merchandise of the same descriptive properties." The limitation of the scope of trade-marks "to merchandise of the same descriptive properties" (Sec. 5 [b] Trade Mark Act, February 20, 1905) was adopted in the statute as an expression of the scope designated in the decisions of the Court under the common law (Hanover Star Milling Co. v. Metcalf, 240 U. S. 403, 412-14), and the classification of the Patent Office by which "tobacco products" were placed in Class 17 by themselves, is an expression of legal scope by an authority which raises a presumption. Likewise, the placing of "foods and ingredients of foods" in a class by themselves, No. 46, raises a presumption that the scope of trade-marks adopted for foods and ingredients of foods is not to extend over other classes. If any cases are to be found which seem to depart from this rule, examination will show either that they involved facts showing actual fraud or bad faith or the equivalent thereof (Peninsular Chem. Co. v. Levinson, 247 Fed. 658), or that the two articles of merchandise are habitually used in conjunction, as was the case of the flour and syrup in Aunt Jemima Co. v. Rigney Co., 247 Fed. 407, C. C. A. 2, of steam apparatus and steam traps to be used therewith in Simplex v. Gold, 43 App. D. C. 281, of electric lamps and incandescent mantles in Anglo Co. v. General Co., 43 App. D. C. 385, and of automobile tires and automobiles in Akron-Overland Tire Co. v. Willys-Overland Co., 273 Fed. 674.

In Peninsular Chemical Co. v. Levinson (C. C. A., 6th Cir.), 247 Fed. 658, the Court held as stated in the first point of the syllabus:

> "Where the certificate of registration of a trade-mark recited that it was used for chemicals, medicines and pharmaceutical preparations, the trade-mark did not include cigars, for they cannot be said to be of the same descriptive properties as the specified articles, even though they are usually sold at drug stores."

As we shall see, the fundamental doctrine in this country, as declared by the Supreme Court of the United States in the Hanover Star Milling Company cases (240 U. S. 403, 412-414) and reiterated by that court in the Rectanus case (248 U. S. 90, 97), is that there is no such thing as property in a trade-mark except as a right appurtenant to the established business or trade in connection with which the mark has been applied so that a trader has no property in the mark per se but only in reference to his trade, and cannot prevent another trade from applying this mark to goods which are not of the same description.

Indeed the books are full of cases illustrating and applying the well-settled doctrine that in this country the same mark may be used by different concerns for different articles, notwithstanding these articles are packaged and sold in the same stores.

Examples are:

Candy and breakfast foods (Paul F. Baich Co. v. Kellogg Co., 49 App. D. C. 186, 262 Fed. 640).

Milk and ice cream (Borden Ice Cream Co. v. Borden's Condensed Milk Co., C. C. A. 7th, 201 Fed. 510; Borden's Condensed Milk Co. v. Eagle Mfg. Co., 47 App. D. C. 191).

Cereals and macaroni (Quaker Oats Co. v. Mothers Macaroni Co., 41 App. D. C. 254).

Cheese and butter (Lawrence v. Sharpless, 203 Fed. 762, affirmed C. C. A., 3d, 208 Fed. 886).

Fountain pens and hair brushes (National Picture Theatres v. Foundation Film Corporation, C. C. A., 2d, 266 Fed. at p. 211, note).

Soap and hair tonic, hair dye, perfumery and dentrifice (Barclay v. Casell Barrie, 5 T. M. Rep. 86).

These cases are but an application of the broader doctrine that in this country there is no such thing as a universal trade-mark which would be the practical result of adopting the position taken by plaintiff's counsel. For under modern conditions for purposes of sanitation, convenience and attractiveness to the consumer, all sorts of commodities are packaged and sold in the same stores, even over the same counters, regardless of their inherent qualities or conjoint use, as for instance, handkerchiefs and hairpins, pens and playing cards, razors and rubber goods, candy and candles, soap and soup, tomatoes and tobacco.

Many instances of the use by one concern of a word as a trade-mark for tobacco and the use by a different concern of the same word as a trade-mark for products of a different character have been called to our attention.

There are "MOGUL" cigarettes and there are "MOGUL" food products, such as evaporated milk, tapioca, sugar, red pepper, almond flavor and peppermint.

There are "CAMEL" cigarettes and there are "CAMEL" food products, such as canned corn, tomato catsup, rolled oats, oysters, ginger and sweet pickles.

There are "OMAR" cigarettes and there are "OMAR" food products, such as vanilla, plums, waxed beans, sauer kraut and coffee.

There is "STAR" tobacco and there are "STAR" soap and washing fluid.

There are "SUNSHINE" cigarettes and there are "SUNSHINE" biscuits.

There are "POLO" cigarettes and there are "POLO" canned goods.

There is "CLIMAX" tobacco and there are "CLIMAX" chocolate dates.

There is "APPLE" tobacco and there is "APPLE" chewing gum.

It will thus be observed that the distinction between tobacco and food products has for a long time been quite generally recognized.

Next we shall refer to the law of "abandonment."

In Baglin v. Cusenier Co., 221 U. S., at pages 597-8, the Court said:

> "But the loss of the right of property in trade-marks upon the ground of abandonment is not to be viewed as a penalty either for non-user or for the creation and use of new devices. There must be found an intent to abandon, or the property is not lost;"

In Saxlehner v. Eisner, 179 U. S. 31, the Court says:

> "To establish the defence of abandonment it is necessary to show not only acts indicating a practical abandonment, but an actual intent to abandon. Acts which unexplained would be sufficient to establish an abandonment may be answered by showing that there never was an intention to give up and relinquish the right claimed."

In Brown on Trade Marks, Sec. 681, it is said:

> "A person may temporarily lay aside his mark and resume it without having in the meantime lost his property in the right of user. Abandonment, being in the nature of a forfeiture, must be strictly proved. . . . A defence of abandonment is abhorrent even in an action at law and the assertion of title on the ground of abandonment by the prior owner must be established by the strongest proof. Mere lapse of time does not per se warrant the conclusion of abandonment. The circumstances of the case, other than mere lapse of time, almost always give complexion to the delay and either excuse or give it a conclusive effect."

And in Hopkins on Trade Marks, (3rd) p. 213, appears the following:

> "The length of time during which a trade mark is not used is, as we have seen, merely a circumstance to be considered with all the other facts in the case in determining whether there was an intention to abandon its use. Thus, defendants have been restrained from using a mark that has lain in disuse for periods of one year, three years, four years, nine years, ten years, and even twenty years. The vital question is the intention of the owner of the mark and the burden of establishing abandonment lies upon the party who affirms it."

In a comparatively recent case of Wallace & Co., v. Repetti, 266 Fed. 307, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, speaking through Judge Manton, said:

> "In order that an abandonment may be established as a defense, it is essential to show, not only acts indicating practical abandonment, but an intent to abandon. Thus, where the appearances may be sufficient to indicate an abandonment, this may be satisfactorily explained by showing a want of intention to relinquish the right claimed. Saxlehner v. Eisner & Mendelson Co., 179 U. S. 19, 21 Sup. Ct. 7, 45 L. Ed. 60. There is no penalty which inflicts the loss of right of property in trade-marks by non-usage, unless there also be found an intent to abandon" (p. 308).

In Monson & Co. v. Boehm, L. R. 26 ch. D. 398, a leading case here (See Saxlehner v. Eisner, 279 U. S. at 31) as well as in England, the court held as stated in the syllabus:

> "In order to deprive a manufacturer of his right to a trade-mark, the use of which has been practically given up for a period of five years, mere discontinuance of user for lack of demand, though coupled with non-registration and non-assertion of any right, is not enough; there must be evidence of distinct intention to abandon."

In Baglin v. Cusenier Co., supra, the Supreme Court said, as we have seen, that abandonment was not to be viewed as a penalty for the "creation and use of new devices."

When the defendant received the list containing these trade-marks including "BEECHNUT" in December, 1911, it filed that list with its records. There is undisputed testimony in the case that trade-mark names are valuable, have unlimited values, and so far as appears, the only tangible thing received by the defendant at the time was the list of words, including

"BEECHNUT." That list was not destroyed but was put away where it was consulted from time to time.

On three different occasions at least the defendant took from this list names for use as labels for tobacco products, to wit: "COMET," "PIONEER" and "YACHT CLUB." Reviewing the conduct of the defendant, one must conclude, it seems, that it intended to retain all of these listed names and avail itself of them from time to time as the situation of its business suggested. For three years there was no act on the part of the defendant which would tend to indicate in the slightest degree that the word "BEECHNUT" had been or was to be abandoned. When it is remembered that there were a thousand or more names on the list, the mere non-usage of one word for that period would not in itself amount to abandonment. So we find that in the fall of 1914 there had been no abandonment of "BEECHNUT" on the part of the defendant.

The other aspect of the question is whether in reviving the use of "BEECHNUT" as a label for its tobacco products, there was effected an abandonment because the defendant in 1914 changed both the old Weissinger formula and the old label in favor of a new kind of tobacco and a different label.

Change of formula has never indicated abandonment. The contrary is the ruling of the courts.

In Royal Milling Co. v. J. F. Imbs Milling Co., 44 App. D. C. 207, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, says:

> "The trade-mark is not to be vitiated by change in the species of wheat used any more than it would be vitiated by an important change in the process of making flour."

In Ball and Gunning Milling Co. v. Mammoth Spring Milling Co., 48 App. D. C. 243 (1918), the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, following its earlier ruling in Royal v. Imbs, supra, said:

> "Appellant first contends that Appellee has abandoned or forfeited its mark, because prior to 1907 it used the mark on its highest grade flour, but about that time produced and sold under another name a better grade of flour. There was no contention in the Patent Office, nor is there here, that the standard of quality of the 'Golden Gate' brand was lowered; in other words, there is no evidence that the Golden Gate brand is not as good today as it was when the mark was adopted. These facts bring the case within the ruling in Royal Milling Co. v. J. F. Imbs Milling Co. (44 App. D. C.) where a mark that had been used on flour made from soft wheat was used on flour made from hard wheat of the same grade and it was held there had been no misrepresentation."

The defendant acquiring the right to use the word "BEECHNUT" for tobacco purposes found that the particular formula of tobacco which had been sold for both smoking and chewing purposes by the predecessors who controlled the trade-mark was practically dead. The defendant, under the circumstances, certainly had the right to endeavor to revive this old tobacco, if it could, and it seems to the court that it also had the right to improve it, if it could, improve the tobacco in any way which would make it marketable. Tobacco is tobacco, but there are many, many blends, mixtures, etc. Adopting a new formula, therefore, did not, in the opinion of the court, work an abandonment. Next, as to the right of the defendant to change the label:

In the case of United Barber's Service Co. v. Canalaito, 12 T. M. Rep. 265, a case before the Commissioner of Patents for cancellation of a registered trademark, "X-Ray," it appeared that the owner and registrant had proven use of the mark since 1914, while the plaintiff or petitioner proved use since 1915. The commissioner dismissed the petition, holding

> "The fact that the first labels were in manuscript and printed labels were used only from 1918, does not matter, as the use was continuous.
> "Nor does the fact that the printed labels used in 1918 first showed the picture of a woman, though use was claimed since 1913, . . . , as the word 'X-Ray' is the essential feature of the mark."

This decision was affirmed by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, January, 1923. Vol. 13 T. M. Reporter, p. 137.

In Hier v. Abrahams, 82 N. Y., 519-525, the Court held:

> "But where the trade mark consists of a word it may be used by the manufacturer who has appropriated it in any style or print or form of label and its use by another in any form is unlawful. . . . The trade mark consisted in the word simply and the plaintiff might have printed it on any form of label they might fancy without losing the protection of the law."

Hopkins on Trade-Marks (3rd), p. 214, says:

> "the adoption of a new label or brand is, of course, an abandonment of all the distinctive features of the old label or brand not preserved in the new one."

In the instant case the defendant did not actually copy the plaintiff's trade-mark. We do not think it is contended that the defendant used an exact reproduction of the plaintiff's oval or colors. If it did, the question involved might be quite different. An examination of them will demonstrate that they do not resemble each other closely.

There is nothing in the record to indicate that the old Weissinger squirrel label was attractive to any purchaser either because of its color or design. Whatever sales were effected do not appear to have been effected because of the label. Although it carried the picture of a squirrel, the tobacco was always referred to, so far as we are aware, as "BEECHNUT" and not otherwise. There does not appear to be any particular reason why a squirrel should appear under the word "BEECHNUT" rather than the picture of a beechnut. The old formula was not to be dealt in any longer and it seems to us that the change in the formula justified a change in the decorative feature of the package which was to contain this new blend or mixture. So the label was modernized, made attractive. Is it not common knowledge that many old standard tobaccos are now ornamented considerably differently than they were years ago? Boxes, containers and packages for tobacco have undergone many improvements during the past twenty years. To hold that the rightful owner of an established trade name may not redecorate or reornament or, to use a somewhat inelegant phrase, polish it up, would be, in our opinion, unreasonable. So the defendant, availing itself of the right to redecorate and reornament its label, adopted as the main change, as a comparison will promptly disclose, what has been called a sunburst or radiating effect. Nothing like this sunburst or radiating effect appears on the labels of the plaintiff and the fact that the defendant adopted it demonstrates conclusively, it seems, that there was no attempt on the part of the defendant to copy or imitate the standard mark of the plaintiff. Not only was there a sunburst or radiating effect placed upon this new label, which, by the way, overshadows most of the other features of it, but instead of there being three colored photographs of a beechnut, the defendant placed the red outline of one in an inverted position. The plaintiff argues that the two trade-marks are so similar that the public thinks that they are the same. If one should eliminate the word "BEECH-NUT" from both labels, it would be extremely difficult to locate any similarity at all between them. And each party has the right to the word "BEECH-NUT" for its distinct product. It may be that what the defendant did in changing the old Weissinger label has amounted to an abandonment of the squirrel and other decorative features of that old label which have been omitted from the revised label, but the court is unable to agree that the word "BEECH-NUT" was abandoned simply because a hyphen was utilized in addition to the adoption of different decorative features, the main feature of which is a sunburst or radiating effect unknown to any label of the plaintiff which has been called to our attention.

What we have said relative to the defendant's right to use the word "BEECH-NUT" in connection with tobacco applies also to the cigarette feature of this cause. Cigarettes contain tobacco and are smoked. The trade-mark acquired by the defendant was for smoking and chewing tobacco and, as we have already pointed out, it is our opinion that the blend or formulas could be changed and the labels could be redecorated without effecting an abandonment of the word.

There being no abandonment on the part of the defendant, the bill should be dismissed.

I, GEORGE T. CRANMER, Clerk of the District Court of the United States of America, for the District of New Jersey, in the Third Circuit, do hereby certify the foregoing to be a true copy of the original decree on file, and now remaining among the records of the said court, in my office.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed the seal of the said Court, at Trenton, in said District, this 17th day of December, nineteen hundred and twenty-four.

GEORGE T. CRANMER,
Clerk, District Court, United States.

ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS.

And now comes the plaintiff, Beech-Nut Packing Company, by its solicitors, having prayed to appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, for the Third Circuit, from the decree of the District Court of the United States for the District of New Jersey, made and entered the seventeenth (17th) day of June, 1924, and respectfully makes and files this its assignment of errors; that the said District Court of the United States for the District of New Jersey erred in the following particulars:

1. The Court erred in making and entering its decree dismissing the bill of complaint.

2. The Court erred in not finding that plainaiff's common law rights and statutory rights in its "Beech-Nut" trade-mark include the exclusive right to use said trade-mark upon and in connection with tobacco and tobacco products.

3. The Court erred in not finding that the use of the "Beech-Nut" trade-mark by defendant upon tobacco and tobacco products in and since the year 1915 infringed plaintiff's common law and statutory rights in its "Beech-Nut" trade-mark.

4. The Court erred in not finding that the use of the "Beech-Nut" trade-mark by defendant upon tobacco and tobacco products in and since the year 1915 constituted unfair competition with plaintiff's business.

5. The Court erred in not finding that defendant before using the "Beech-Nut" trade-mark upon tobacco or tobacco products had abandoned any rights which it might ever have possessed in the "Beechnut" trade-mark previously used by the Luhrman & Wilbern Company and its predecessor, Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company.

6. The Court erred in not finding the discontinuance of use by the Luhrman & Wilbern Company of its "Beechnut" trade-mark in the year 1910 and the nonuse at any time thereafter of said trade-mark by either said Luhrman & Wilbern Company or defendant to have constituted abandonment thereof.

7. The Court erred in not finding that the unanimous and uncontroverted testimony of the many ultimate purchasers who were examined as witnesses that they believed defendant's product bearing the "Beech-Nut" trade-mark to be plaintiff's product establishes the fact that plaintiff's right to the exclusive use of said trade-mark extends to and includes its use upon tobacco and tobacco products.

8. The Court erred in not finding the intention by defendant to abandon the Luhrman & Wilbern Company "Beechnut" trade-mark in defendant's adoption in the year 1915 of a trade-mark containing the word "Beech-Nut" with an accompanying design substantially identical with plaintiff's trade-mark and unlike the Luhrman & Wilbern Company "Beechnut" trade-mark in every particular.

9. The Court erred in not finding the intention by defendant to abandon the Luhrman & Wilbern Company "Beechnut" trade-mark in defendant's admitted knowledge that its use of the "Beech-Nut" trade-mark adopted by it in the year 1915 caused confusion in trade and induced the purchasing public to believe that defendant's goods bearing said trade-mark were the product of plaintiff.

10. The Court erred in not finding that defendant did not acquire from the Luhrman & Wilbern Company any title or rights of any kind in the "Beechnut" trade-mark which is alleged to have been used by said Luhrman & Wilbern Company in and prior to the year 1910.

11. The Court erred in not finding that the owner of a trade-mark is without right in law to separate out a single element of his trade-mark and combine the separated element with an imitation of the trade-mark of another and thereby cause confusion in trade and induce the purchasing public to believe that his goods are the goods of such other party.

12. The Court erred in not finding that, regardless of abandonment or non-abandonment of the Luhrman & Wilbern "Beechnut" trade-mark by defendant, defendant had no right in law to so use a single element of said Luhrman & Wilbern trade-mark as to cause confusion in trade and induce the ultimate purchasers to believe that defendant's goods were the product of plaintiff.

13. The Court erred in not finding, regardless of the abandonment or non-abandonment of the Luhrman & Wilbern "Beechnut" trade-mark, that defendant had no right in law to use the single word "Beechnut," however spelled, with such accompanying decorations and accessories as to cause the ultimate purchasers to believe that the goods upon which said word was so used was the product of plaintiff.

14. The Court erred in dismissing the bill of complaint, and finding that defendant has the right to use plaintiff's "Beech-Nut" trade-mark by reason of defendant's alleged acquisition of the Luhrman & Wilbern Company's "Beechnut" trade-mark, in the absence of any evidence whatsoever that a single purchaser of tobacco thought or believed that said trademark as used by defendant indicated that the goods so marked were the product of the successor of Luhrman & Wilbern Company, or of Luhrman & Wilbern Company, and in the absence of the evidence of any ultimate purchaser that he even remembered that any scrap tobacco or other tobacco or tobacco product had ever been made or sold by anyone under the trademark "Beechnut," spelled or printed in any manner whatsoever, prior to the adoption by defendant in the year 1915 of the "Beech-Nut" trade-mark for tobacco, and notwithstanding and in disregard of the evidence of the large number of ultimate purchasers of tobacco who testified unanimously and without exception that they believed that defendant's tobacco bearing the "Beech-Nut" trade-mark was the product of plaintiff.

15. The Court erred in not finding as a matter of law that ownership of and right to use a trade-mark can exist only in the party who is believed by purchasers to be the producer or vendor of goods bearing such trade-mark, and in not finding that such ownership cannot exist in a party whose use of such trademark causes purchasers to believe that goods so marked are the product of another.

16. The Court erred in not finding that the common law right of the owner of a trade-mark to the exclusive use thereof, and the statutory right of the owner of a registered trade-mark to the rights and privileges granted by the statutes of the United States extend to and include the right to the exclusive use of such trade-mark upon all goods of such descriptive properties that the use of such trade-mark upon or in connection therewith will cause the purchasing public to believe that all such goods bearing such trade-mark are of the same origin, or made or sold by the same party.

17. The Court erred in not finding that defendant deliberately and fraudulently misled plaintiff to plaintiff's detriment and damage in the statement made by defendant to plaintiff in the year 1915 that defendant had used the name "Beechnut" as a brand on tobacco "continuously since prior to the year 1898," and in not finding that defendant by the employment of said fraudulent misrepresentation caused plaintiff to defer assertion of its rights to its great damage.

18. The Court erred in not finding that defendant had the right under the law to rely upon the representation made to it by defendant in the year 1915 that defendant had used the brand "Beechnut" on tobacco continuously since the year 1898; in not finding that defendant intentionally made such misrepresentation for the purpose of preventing plaintiff from asserting its legal rights; in not finding that defendant utilized plaintiff's inaction induced by said fraudulent misrepresentation for the purpose of establishing and conducting a large and profitable business in the manufacture and sale of tobacco and tobacco products which were sold with defendant's knowledge that such tobacco and tobacco products were believed by the purchasing public to be the product of plaintiff.

19. The Court erred in not granting to plaintiff the relief prayed for in the bill of complaint.

Wherefore the plaintiff prays that the said decree be reversed and that such other and further relief to the plaintiff be granted as may be just and proper

Beech-Nut Packing Company,
Plaintiff-Appellant,

v.

P. Lorillard Company,
Defendant-Appellee.

APPEAL FROM THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, FOR THE DISTRICT OF NEW JERSEY.

OPINION OF THE COURT.

(Filed September 11, 1925.)

Before BUFFINGTON, WOOLLEY and DAVIS, Circuit Judges:

DAVIS, Circuit Judge.

The Beech-Nut Packing Company brought suit in the District Court against the P. Lorillard Company for alleged infringement of its trade-mark, "Beech-Nut," and for unfair competition, and prayed for profits and damages. Defendant admits the use of the trade-mark on a brand of its scrap tobacco and on a brand of cigarettes, but insists that it has the right so to use the trade-mark and that such use does not constitute infringement of the trade-mark or unfair competition.

This is an appeal from the decree of the District Court dismissing the plaintiff's bill on the ground that the defendant had not infringed the trade-mark.

The word "Beech-Nut" as a trade-mark for food products was originated by plaintiff's predecessor, the Imperial Packing Company, in or about 1891. In 1899 the Beech-Nut Packing Company, the plaintiff, was incorporated and acquired the assets, including the trade-mark, of the Imperial Packing Company. At first the word was used on ham and bacon only, but its use was gradually extended to other products, such as peanut butter, baked beans, chili sauce, catsup, jellies, mints, chewing gum, etc., until today it is used on most all leading food products. From a very small beginning in 1891, the business grew until, in 1921, its total sales amounted to more than $12,000,000.

The trade-mark is used in connection with a label which is oval-shaped with a red and white border. Within the upper part of the oval and correspondingly curved is the word "Beech-Nut," generally in large blue letters. Below this, in the center of the oval, is the picture of a beech-nut. There is also the picture of a beech-nut in the red border on each side of the oval. Within this border, at the top, in large white letters, are the words "Beech-Nut Brand," and at the bottom, is the word, "Bacon," or the name of the particular product contained in the package to which the label is attached.

The defendant and its predecessors have been in the tobacco business since 1760. In 1897, the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, of Louisville, Kentucky, originated a brand of scrap tobacco, called "Beechnut Chewing and Smoking Tobacco," and registered the word, "Beechnut," as its trade-mark. This brand of tobacco was sold under this trade-mark by that company and its successors until in the year 1910. The Weissinger Company, however, in 1903, sold and transferred its entire assets, including its business, good will, and the "Beechnut" trade-mark, to the Continental Tobacco Company, a corporation of

New Jersey. The Continental Tobacco Company, in that year, sold and transferred the trade-mark and other assets, to the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company, of Middletown, Ohio, for its issued share capital. The next year, the Continental Tobacco Company was merged with the American Tobacco Company. The Government began a suit in equity in 1907 under the Anti-Trust Act of July 2, 1890, against the American Tobacco Company, and its affiliated companies, as an unlawful combination, in restraint of interstate commerce in tobacco. It prevailed and in accordance with the directions of the decree dissolving the American Tobacco Company, in 1911, the defendant company was organized and to it was transferred in that year the capital stock of the Luhrman & Wilbern Company, and the trade-marks and brands belonging to it, including the "Beechnut" trade-mark. From the small beginning of Pierre Lorillard, in 1760, the business constantly grew, until, in 1919, the retail value of the defendant's output was over $80,000,000.

The demand for particular brands of tobacco seems to rise and fall in accordance with the changing tastes of consumers. The defendant company, after personal investigation, discovered, in 1914, that the sweeter brands were the more popular and that sales of brands not so sweet were decreasing. Consequently it decided that it would "get up" a new and sweeter brand which would suit the changed taste of consumers at that time. After experimenting quite a while it worked out what seemed to it to be the "ideal product to put out."

It was then confronted with the problem of selecting a suitable name and label for the new brand. It examined the list of brands it received from the American Tobacco Company. It had before selected names for brands from that list, such as "Comet," "Pioneer" and "Yacht Club." On the Luhrman & Wilbern list there were the names of "Bagpipe," "Beechnut," "Honest Scrap," "Natural Leaf," "Old Nut," "Polar Bear" and "Scrap Iron." All of these were actively selling except "Beechnut" and this was a dormant brand, not having been sold since 1910. "Beechnut" was thereupon selected and used on this new brand of "scrap" tobacco. The word had been written without a hyphen between "Beech" and "Nut," but the defendant added one and wrote it "Beech-Nut." This change made the trade-mark identical with the plaintiff's.

For a label it selected an oval with a small deep blue border from which extended on all sides red bars or stripes called a sunburst. At the top of the label written in blue letters is the word "Lorillard's." Within the oval at the top is the trade-mark "Beech-Nut" in large blue letters. In the middle of the oval is the picture of two beechnuts, inverted, and below them the word "Chewing" and at the bottom, the word "Tobacco." Weissinger's label was rectangular. Near the center was the picture of a squirrel eating a nut. At the top, printed in large white letters, was the word "Beechnut," and below the squirrel the words "Chewing and Smoking Tobacco." The oval shape of the label which the defendant adopted "had been used on many brands of tobacco in order to give more space for the name." If a circle had been used, the defendant would have been compelled "to pinch the name of the brand down to a point where it would make it less conspicuous." The twin beechnuts, represented in the center of the oval, were actually copied from beechnuts picked up on the New Jersey farm of the president of the defendant company.

The "Beech-Nut" brand of tobacco came out early in 1915 and met with great success. The sales of this single brand, a ten-cent package, have exceeded year by year since 1916 the sales of all the combined products of the plaintiff. In 1919 the sales of the plaintiff's entire output amounted to $8,979,586.35, while the sales of the "Beech-Nut" scrap chewing tobacco amounted to $14,650,865.63.

It appears that some people thought that the plaintiff was putting out the "Beech-Nut" scrap tobacco and cigarettes and wrote, inquiring about it. These inquiries for a time were sent by the plaintiff to the defendant. Correspondence arose between them regarding their rights in the use of the word "Beech-Nut" as a trade-mark for their commodities. Their respective contentions resulted in this litigation.

The Act of February 20, 1905 (35 Stat. 724; Compiled Statutes Section 9490), authorizing the registration of trade-marks, provides that the owner of a trade-mark may obtain registration of it by filing in the Patent Office an application therefor addressed to the Commissioner of Patents, specifying, among other things, "the class of merchandise and the particular description of goods comprised in such class to which the trade-mark is appropriated." It further provides, "That trade-marks which are identical with a registered or known trade-mark owned and in use by another, and appropriated to merchandise of the same descriptive properties . . . shall not be registered." Merchandise of the same descriptive properties is merchandise of the same class. The implication in the statute is that a trade-mark which is identical with a registered trade-mark owned and in use by another may be registered if it is not appropriated to merchandise of the same class. Therefore the owner of a trade-mark does not have the exclusive right to the use of a name as a trade-mark, except in the class of merchandise to which it is appropriated in an existing business. A trade-mark is merely a protection of good will, and not the subject of property except in connection with an existing business.

Hanover Star Milling Company v. Metcalf, 240 U. S. 403, 413, 414. Judge Woolley in his comprehensive exposition of the law of trade-marks said with reference to the property right of an owner in the mark: "If property, it is property of a qualified nature, for it is settled that no absolute ownership in or exclusive right to use a name as a trade-mark is vested in anyone." Rosenberg Bros. & Co. v. John F. Elliot, Fed. . In other words, what gives the owner a property right in a trade-mark is its connection with an existing business of the class to which it is appropriated. "The general rule of law on this subject is that the owner must have used his trade-mark on the same class but not necessarily on the same species of goods as the alleged infringer in order to entitle him to its protection against infringement." Layton Pure Food Co. v. Church & Dwight Co., 182 Fed. 35, 37. In the case of Atlas Manufacturing Co. v. Street & Smith, 204 Fed. 398, the complainant registered the words "Nick Carter" as his trade-mark and in compliance with the requirement of the statute described the goods to which it was appropriated as "a weekly periodical devoted to fiction." The Court held that he might not restrain the use of the term "Nick Carter" as the name of a personage shown in moving pictures, because weekly periodicals and moving pictures do not belong to the same class of business. The owner of a trade-mark has the right to its exclusive use, not only on the goods which he has produced, but also on the goods of different species which he may desire in the future to produce if they belong to the same class. William Waltke & Co. v. George H. Schafer & Co., 263 Fed. 650. The reason why the same mark may be used by different persons when appropriated to different classes of goods is because the goods, being of different classes, do not come into competition with each other. Borden Ice Cream

Co. v. Borden's Condensed Milk Co., 201 Fed. 510; Atlas Manufacturing Co. v. Street & Smith, supra; Paul F. Beich Co. v. Kellogg Toasted Corn Flakes Co., 262 Fed. 640.

The crux, therefore, of the trade-mark branch of this case is whether or not the products of the plaintiff and defendant belong to the same class or belong to distinct and unrelated classes, not having the "same descriptive properties."

It is undisputed that the plaintiff and its predecessor in business have always dealt in food products only and that the defendant and its predecessors have always manufactured and sold tobacco and have never dealt in food products. All the witnesses at the trial in the District Court testified in the most positive terms that food and tobacco products belong to different classes. Foods and tobacco are classified as distinct and unrelated products under the Trade-Mark Act. Tobacco Products are in Class No. 17; while "Foods and Ingredients of Foods" belong to Class No. 40. The Treasury Department treats them as of different classes. It has always taxed tobacco products just as it did liquor products, but it has never taxed food products.

The Examiner of Interferences in the Patent Office found that tobacco and food do not possess the "same descriptive properties" and so belong to different classes. This view was also held by the examiner, the Acting Commissioner of Patents and the District Judge. Food promotes the growth of animal or vegetable life. There is no nutrition in tobacco. It is merely a narcotic. Foods are used by all mankind as a matter of necessity, but this is not true of tobacco. State v. Ohmer, 34 Mo. App. 115; Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. v. Cannon, 132 Tenn. 419.

The merchandise of the plaintiff and defendant belonged, therefore, to different classes. As the owner of a trade-mark, both on authority and reason, may not be restrained from its use on goods of one class, notwithstanding the identical trade-mark is used on goods of another class, we conclude that the defendant did not infringe plaintiff's trade-mark and so may not be restrained from using its trade-mark on tobacco products.

Although it did not infringe the trade-mark, is it guilty of unfair competition? Generically, the term "unfair competition," presupposes competition of some kind. Borden Ice Cream Company v. Borden's Condensed Milk Co., 201 Fed. 510, 514. And so courts have held that there must be a real, present or prospective competition; that is, an endeavor to get the same trade from the same people at the same time; and that endeavor must on the defendant's part be unfair. National Picture Theatres v. Foundation Film Corporation, 266 Fed. 208, 211.

There is no evidence that the defendant ever intended presently or prospectively to compete for the trade of the plaintiff. It could not have done so as long as they continued their distinct and unrelated lines of business and there is no evidence that a change was ever contemplated by either. There was, therefore, no competition between them unfair or otherwise.

We are aware, however, that equity may be invoked without market competition. Emphasis should be placed on the word "unfair" rather than "competition." If by unfair and fraudulent means, the plaintiff is injured and the public deceived, equity will enjoin whether the injury comes through competition or in some other way. Aunt Jemima Mills Co. v. Rigney, et al., 247 Fed. 407; Vogue Co. v. Thompson-Hudson Co., et al., 300 Fed. 509, 512. Within the principles announced in these cases, or in any other way, has the defendant injured the plaintiff in its property or reputation?

We are satisfied that it has not. It has not tried to palm off its products as those of the plaintiff. It would not have been profitable to do so. The evidence shows that no company ever combined the manufacture and sale of food and tobacco. They belong to unrelated classes and the union of the two would be incongruous and historically contrary to the experience and business judgment of those engaged in manufacturing or selling either class. In the correspondence between the parties defendant wrote plaintiff: "It could be of no conceivable advantage to us to have the public think that our tobacco product was manufactured by a packing establishment. Our concern has been in business for more than 150 years and in that length of time has built an enviable reputation for the excellence of its tobacco products." The plaintiff's evidence on this subject consisted of indefinite and unauthorized statements of unidentified persons alleged to be defendant's salesmen. The evidence shows that its goods have in no way been confused with those of the plaintiff so that when a purchaser desired a certain brand of plaintiff's goods, he in fact secured those of defendant. Defendant carefully made prominent in its label the Lorillard origin of its products. The difference between their labels is so great and distinct that any purchaser paying ordinary attention need not and should not be mistaken and certainly not deceived. In his opinion in the District Court, Judge Lynch said: "If one should eliminate the word 'Beech-Nut' from both labels, it would be extremely difficult to locate any similarity at all between them. And each party has the right to the word 'Beech-Nut' for its distinct product."

The only injury, real or fancied, which the evidence indicates the plaintiff might sustain is that some of its customers are prejudiced against the use of tobacco and made inquiry to ascertain if it had embarked in the tobacco business and threatened to stop dealing with it in case it had. This resulted from the similarity of trade-marks on distinct and unrelated classes of merchandise. But from confusion and injury caused by similarity of names, courts will not relieve. The defendant had the right to use its trade-mark if it did so reasonably and honestly. It is not the use, but dishonesty in the use, that is condemned and it is a question of evidence in every case whether the name or trade-mark has been used honestly or fraudulently. In other words, where persons or corporations have the right to use a name or trade-mark, Courts will not interfere where the only confusion results from a similarity of names and not from the manner of the use. "The essence of the wrong in unfair competition consists in the sale of the goods of one manufacturer or vendor for those of another, and if defendant so conducts its business as not to palm off its goods as those of complainant, the action fails." Howe Scale Co. v. Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict, 198 U. S. 118, 140. Mr. Justice Strong, in the case of Canal Company v. Clark, 13 Wall, 311, 327, said:

> "It is only when the adoption or imitation of what is claimed to be a trademark amounts to a false representation, express or implied, designed or incidental, that there is any title to relief against it. True it may be that the use by a second producer, in describing truthfully his product, of a name or a combination of words already in use by another, may have the effect of causing the public to mistake as to the origin or ownership of the product, but if it is just as true in its application to his goods as it is to those of another who first applied it, and who therefore claims an exclusive right to use it, there is no legal or moral wrong done. Purchasers may be mistaken, but they are not deceived by false representations, and equity will not enjoin against telling the truth."

These principles founded alike on reason and authority, when applied to the facts of this case, are decisive of the issues involved. The evidence, in our opinion, conclusively shows that both parties have acted in perfect good faith. Both have used the word "Beech-Nut" on their respective, but very different labels because they thought that they had the legal right to do so. The plaintiff adopted its trade-mark without knowledge of the "Beechnut" trade-mark of the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company. The defendant naturally adopted the "Beech-Nut" trade-mark for its products because it owned the old Harry Weissinger trade-mark and thought it was acting within its legal rights. The plaintiff is proud of its "position substantially at the top of a highly competitive industry." The defendant is one of the great tobacco companies of this country, with a Lorillard reputation stretching back into three centuries. Neither needed nor desired the reputation of the incompatible business of the other.

The evidence does not disclose anything on which infringement of the trade-mark or unfair competition can be based. This conclusion relieves us from the consideration of much that was pressed upon us at the argument.

The decree dismissing the bill is accordingly AFFIRMED.

Gentlemen:

Owing to the nationwide agitation against smoking and from the standpoint of self preservation all persons interested in the Tobacco business must get together and inaugurate a campaign to combat the work of the "Anti-Ites."

To accomplish this and bring about a better understanding with the general public and thereby enroll their support in advancing the slogan "Tobacco is Harmless" it has been decided to hold the Allied Tobacco Industries Exposition in Chicago next September where manufacturers will have the opportunity of exhibiting their cigars, cigarettes, tobaccos, pipes and allied lines to jobbers and dealers from all parts of the country, as well as to the general public.

It is also essential that manufacturers of machinery, appliances and accessories used in producing, packing and marketing of cigars, cigarettes, tobaccos, pipes and allied commodities should exhibit for the benefit of the visiting producers of these products.

During the week of the Exposition important conferences will be held, in which all trade associations have been invited to participate. The Exposition and Conferences will be advertised very extensively and everything done to bring out the greatest gathering ever held of manufacturers, jobbers, distributors and retailers.

To make the Exposition thoroughly representative of the entire industry we want your company to make an exhibit, not only for the large amount of new business you will secure, but also to help us impress upon the minds of the general public the magnitude and importance of this great industry now being bitterly attacked.

Trusting to hear promptly from you in order that we may submit diagram showing arrangement, dimensions and cost of exhibit spaces for your further consideration, we remain

Yours very truly,

ALLIED TOBACCO INDUSTRIES EXPOSITION,

P. LORILLARD COMPANY

New York City, N. Y., June 22, 1921.

TAYLOR, MCLEISH & Co.

Gentlemen:

We are now prepared to accept orders from our customers located in your State for BEECH-NUT 20s/200 cigarettes, our new brand, foil packed, which will be invoiced to our customers at $6.00 per M, less 10%, less the usual 2% cash discount, and are intended to go to the retailer at $6.00 per M less 2% for cash and to the consumer at 15¢ per package of 20 cigarettes.

As we anticipate working and advertising this brand throughout your territory effective as of July 5th, we strongly recommend that you place your order promptly for a small quantity of BEECH-NUT Cigarettes, but under no circumstances do we desire BEECH-NUT Cigarettes offered to the retail trade prior to the date herein referred to.

In the event that you do place an order for this brand we offer as an extra inducement for your salesmen to secure an immediate distribution, commencing July 5th, on BEECH-NUT Cigarettes and for them to induce retail dealers to display the same prominently on their counters, 25¢ per M or 5¢ per carton, on their sales of BEECH-NUT cigarettes during the months of July and August, 1921. However, we wish to call your particular attention to the fact that this offer is made exclusively for the benefit of your salesmen and if used otherwise, payment with be withheld. Furthermore, we respectfully request that none of your customers be sold at any one time a quantity in excess of 5M BEECH-NUT cigarettes, and at the expiration of the period referred to, we would appreciate your mailing a report of the sales made by each individual salesman, addressing the same to BEECH-NUT CIGARETTE DEPARTMENT, P. Lorillard Co., 119 West 40th St., New York City.

Please note that such report is to be mailed us on or before September 10, 1921, and as we have not arranged to supply blanks for this purpose, we would thank you to simply furnish by letter the names of the individual salesmen and the quantity sold by each.

We will very much appreciate your co-operation as well as such support you may see fit to give us in placing BEECH-NUT Cigarettes favorably before the public.

Very respectfully,

E. J. BUSH

For P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.

P. S. As BEECH-NUT Cigarettes have not been offered to the trade in the States of Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Kentucky (except Covington and Newport) or the Northern Peninsular of Michigan, we would thank you to make no shipments or deliveries either directly or indirectly to dealers in those States until advised it will be satisfactory to do so. Your co-operation in this respect will avoid considerable embarrassment to us.

Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 12-B.

[Letterhead of
P. LORILLARD COMPANY,
119 West 40th Street.]

EJB/MJO New York, August 4, 1921.

At the time BEECH-NUT Cigarettes were introduced in your territory we offered your salesmen, as an extra inducement for them to assist in securing a quick distribution and prominent counter displays on the brand, 25¢ per thousand on their sales of BEECH-NUT Cigarettes.

On account of the very great interest and enthusiasm manifested by jobbers' salesmen in such offer and due to our having received from our customers numerous requests to renew the same, we are prompted to offer your salesmen as an extra inducement to interest dealers in selling and displaying the brand, 10¢ per thousand, or 2¢ per carton, on their sales of BEECH-NUT Cigarettes, the same effective as of this date, August 4, 1921, and continuing for a limited time only. In order to avoid congestion, we respectfully request however, that none of your customers be sold at any one time a quantity in excess of 10,000 BEECH-NUT Cigarettes.

Promptly upon receipt of notice of withdrawal of this offer, please mail to the BEECH-NUT CIGARETTE DEPARTMENT, P. Lorillard Company, 119 West 40th St., New York City, report showing the names of your salesmen and the quantity of BEECH-NUT Cigarettes sold by each during the period this offer is in effect As we will not supply blanks for such report of sales, we would thank you to simply furnish the desired information by letter.

We will make no payment of this allowance on any BEECH-NUT cigarettes reported by you under the offer in excess of the total quantity of BEECH-NUT Cigarettes shipped by us for your account during the life of the offer—therefore, in order that your salesmen may participate to the fullest extent on their sales, it will be necessary that you have shipped by us for your account during the life of the offer as many BEECH-NUT Cigarettes as you report sold by them.

Inasmuch as BEECH-NUT Cigarettes have become firmly established in your territory and in view of the present demand for the brand, we feel that the offer of 10¢ per thousand herein mentioned will result in as much, or greater benefit to your salesmen as did our previous offer to them.

Trusting our action meets with your entire approval, and thanking you for the support you have rendered in the marketing of BEECH-NUT Cigarettes as well as for a continuation of such support, we remain,

Very respectfully,

E. J. BUSH

July 19, 1921.

My Dear Mr. Van Wie:

I have written the enclosed editorial, which appears in the Oakland Enquirer today. This publication goes into the homes of twenty five thousand and is read by over one hundred thousand daily in this very important trans-bay section.

While owner and publisher of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, for a period of eight years just before I took over the San Francisco Morning Call, I had the "powers to be," while the legislature was in session at Olympia, come over to my home in Seattle on a Saturday night a few days before the adjournment, to discuss the anti-cigarette law, which I considered a ridiculous and uncalled-for piece of legislation.

I personally was instrumental in having the law repealed, for I insisted before the Post-Intelligencer supported other measures they would have to repeal this act. I believe you are familiar with these facts.

I have always felt very close to the tobacco people throughout the East as well as the Pacific Coast and have always been against this uncalled-for freak tobacco legislation.

I trust these few remarks in the Enquirer today will meet with your approval and support.

If at any time I can be of help to you and your Company, irrespective of any advertising, do not hesitate to advise us for the Enquirer which is published in this transbay section of over four hundred thousand prosperous people is a very important factor in this community.

Very truly yours,

W. W. CHAPIN,

CRAZY LEGISLATION.

The State of Utah is making a strong bid for national leadership among the communities which tell the world that they do not desire enterprising men of common sense to come there to live or invest their money.

The writer was instrumental in having repealed a similar attempt of fanatics in the State of Washington to "Compound for sins they are inclined to by damning those they have no mind to." His efforts were put forth not because of any personal grievance, but because he happened to be in a position to learn how injurious to the community's growth and advancement is such silly lawmaking. The injuries of such crazy legislation are tenfold more probable now than then.

Business all over the country confronts the same condition. It's a "buyer's market," for both trade and investment. Men with money to invest are not hunting opportunities. They have no need whatever to take chances in communities which by fanatic attacks upon any legitimate business virtually serve notice that no line of business or form of property is safe from confiscation through public toleration of cranks who insist upon persecuting all disagreement with their personal ideas, and are armed with the power of a penal statute.

The sum of the matter is that the tobacco business is entirely legitimate, and the cigarette end of it is notoriously conducted with scrupulous regard for public safety through cleanliness and sanitary surroundings. It has never been proved that the cigarette use of tobacco is more injurious than any other. The weight of medical testimony is the other way. Hence, anti-cigarette laws, such as those of Nebraska, Nevada, and especially Utah, may well be regarded as notice to all that these States are dominated by crazy fanatics who may be expected to go on to any excess against personal or property rights.

The Enquirer is not directly concerned with the follies of Utah. But it is directly concerned to resist, now and always, any further spread of the contagion of crazy legislation to California.

DOWN WITH NICOTINE!

In the opinion of the W. C. T. U., my Lady Nicotine has always been a woman of easy virtue—a fit associate for none except poor old Jack Barleycorn. So it is not surprising to find the present annual convention taken up with the problem of abolishing tobacco in all its forms.

I wonder why women of a certain type are so inimical to tobacco? Is it because of a certain masculine attitude toward the weed expressed by Kipling in the immortal insult:

"A woman is only a woman,
But a good cigar is a smoke"?

Whatever it be, certain it is that some women hate tobacco with the deadly hatred of King James I who wrote the famous bit of anti-nicotine propaganda called "A Counterblast Against Tobacco."

So intent are the white ribboners on downing the weed that one suspects them of intending to use their one million members—if they get them—to exterminate the cigar, the cigarette, the pipe and the quid, to say nothing of the wicked pinch of snuff.

Can you imagine the United States without tobacco? Or rather, can you imagine the condition which would be brought about should another amendment to the Constitution forbid tobacco as the eighteenth amendment forbids liquor?

Think of the smuggling that would go on between Cuba and this country! Think of the surreptitious sales of tobacco in the nicotian equivalent of the bootleg joint! And think, oh think how the price of Bull Durham would go up, and how we should cultivate the lucky man who had a humidor full of illegal perfectos!

The shock troops of the W. C. T. U. have their work cut out for them in this drive against the weed. But these are Amazons not easly dismayed. The "wild women" of the suffrage agitation were more speclacular but not more determined than the followers of Frances Willard.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. 7/19-1921.

MR. BARTLETT ARKELL, President
Beech-Nut Packing Co.,
Conajoharie, New York.

Dear Sir:—

Your many products suitable for our plan, prompted me writing you. Particularly, Beech-Nut Cigarettes and Beech-Nut Gum. These two articles, if entered at once would be exclusive in their line.

The Pittsburgh Post and The Pittsburgh Sun, will award cash prizes amounting to $5,000.00 in gold to Schools, Hospitals, Churches, Lodges and Charities in Pittsburgh and surrounding territory, receiving the largest number of votes by saving the wrappers, labels, cartons, etc., from the manufactured products entered in this gigantic selling campaign.

The prime motive of the unusual campaign is to develop the sale of certain manufactured products used daily in every home, office or on the street, and to establish new fields of direct distribution, with the assurance of your goods moving rapidly from the retailer's shelf.

Beginning September—and closing sixteen weeks thereafter, large newspaper copy similar to the rough lay-out enclosed will appear in the morning, afternoon and Sunday issues of the Post and Sun, during September, October, November and December. Approximately $7,000.00 worth of newspaper space will be used containing an illustration of your products. The Post and Sun also agree to give its news columns to such an extent as to sustain a lively and continued interest among the organizations participating for this large sum of money.

The manufacturer's share of the expenses in this campaign is $475. One half to be paid upon the representation of the Post and Sun, showing the first announcement in the September issue; the other half within sixty days thereafter. Each product entered will be exclusive in its line.

Retail order blanks will be issued by the Post and Sun, to secure stores not handling your products. Certain days will be devoted in clubbing three or four articles together and offering extra bonus votes. This alone will stimulate and show positive proof of splendid results.

This campaign will be run by the newspaper's regular staff men, thus avoiding doubtful contacts and unworthy advertising promoters. Only thirty to thirty five products are essential to defray all expenses and I shall remain East until sufficient contracts are secured, at the same time take my regularly summer vacation. Kindly return the copy lay-out to the below mentioned address, but send package of your product for illustration in all campaign copy to the newspaper direct.

Yours truly,

Gentlemen:

Here is a marked copy of Drug Trade News. You will be interested in page 6.

That's the difference between an advertiser like yourself and the 6,700 druggists and confectioners who get Drug Trade News. You are chiefly interested in your own advertisement or article and those of your competitors. But the 6,700 dealers are interested in every page of Drug Trade News.

It is kept newsy, readable and as full of human interest as possible. We are glad to see it quoted every little while by Drug papers in other parts of the country. That sort of advertising helps us all.

It is this reader interest which makes Drug Trade News different to the usual sort of Trade paper. We are trying—(and we think we are succeeding in doing it)—to make Trade News a mighty valuable advocate of better retail salesmanship as well as a dependable "second barrel" for the advertiser's shot gun. Your Journal advertising brings down the consumer—your Journal copy and your article appearing again in Drug Trade News gives you a shot at 6,700 dealers.

All baymen know, and most amateurs admit, that the second barrel makes the bag bigger.

If you have any suggestions as to how we can make Drug Trade News more effective in backing up your New York Evening Journal advertising, we shall be glad to get them and see if we cannot follow them out.

Very truly yours,

WILLIAM N. CALLENDER,

Subject:

BEECHNUT PACKING CO
Canajoharie, N. Y.

Dear Sirs:

In making my territory as salesman for Arbuckle Bros I do considerable advertising by tacking signs. I also notice that Beech Nut Chewing gum is advertised heavily to the extent that Beech Nut Chewing gum signs are pasted on over my signs. As my advertising is not doing me any good when some one covers it up I will ask you if there are any steps that can be taken by you to prevent this.

It seems like the one that is doing that should have regard for another mans advertising. If I see a place taken up with other advertising I pass it up and hunt a place where I will not have to cover any one else up. Please let me hear from you in regard to this. This happened chiefly in Clinton, Ind.

Dear Sir:

Following our letter of October 18, in answer to yours of October 16, we will be pleased to have you give us an idea of just what Beech-Nut Advertising signs are being placed over those put up by yourself.

We were not aware that any of our men had any material for advertising Beech-Nut Gum and if it is advertising for Beech-Nut Scrap Chewing Tobacco we would like to know it.

Your good attention to this matter will be appreciated by us as we have no desire to have our men put up advertising material to the detriment of other concerns.

Gentlemen:

I have been looking about for a Tobacco Firm to become interested to the extent of making a cigarette named after Ed Wynn—"The Perfect Fool."

This comedian is now ranked among the foremost entertainers in America. Mr. Wynn opens in his latest musical riot, which Mr. A. L. Erlanger chooses to call "The Perfect Fool" at the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York City, Monday night, November the 7th. After closing in New York, which we hope will be a few months away, Mr. Wynn tours the country from coast to coast. I have several ideas in mind for the distribution and sale of a cigarette or a cigar named after Ed Wynn, The Perfect Fool.

If you are interested I would be pleased to hear from you, at your convenience.

Attention: Advertising Manager

Gentlemen:—

As an enthusiastic user of Beechnut Bacon and some of your other products and as an advertising man, I am doubly interested to know whether your company is in any way connected with Beechnut Cigarettes.

I bought one package of these cigarettes on the strength of your Beechnut trade name, being under the impression that these cigarettes were one of your products, although, I must confess, it was surprising to me that you should add a cigarette to your products.

While I might have discovered sooner or later that another company's name appeared on the package, I did not do so at once and not until it was called to my attention. Incidentally I might say that the cigarettes, in my mind, did not come up to the high standard of your Beechnut products.

I am very much interested to know whether the Beechnut Packing Co. is in any way connected with this cigarette and if not whether they are contemplating any action in what seems to be an attempt to capitalize the name which has a very high commercial value.

Yours very truly,

Gentlemen:—

For sometime past, the writer has been more than pleased with the very excellent quality of your products, having used your gums, candies, etc., etc., In fact, I have been a real booster for "Beech Nut" merchandise.

The other day, I deviated from my usual practice and purchased a package of Beech Nut cigarettes expecting to receive a product of unusually high standard.

After smoking three or four of these cigarettes, and passing a few around to some friends, we have all reached the conclusion that the "Beech Nut" standard has been greatly reduced.

I believe you will accept this criticism from a constructive view point, and beg to remain

Gentlemen:

At last the tobacco industry is to have an exposition such as all other industries have and it is expected that the good accruing therefrom will do the same amount of good to our industry as does the auto show, shoe exposition, chemical show and numerous other expositions do to their respective industries.

The program will be highly educational and will be such as to attract men from all branches of the tobacco industry as well as the general public. The decision of the executive committee to hold the Allied Tobacco Industries Exposition starting June 10 and continuing until June 17 was reached after a careful survey was made by taking the matter up with a great many people prominently identified with the industry.

On the back of this letter will be found diagram showing spaces, arrangement, cost, etc. We request that you let us have your first, second and third choice as spaces will be allotted in the order in which we receive applications. Spaces one to forty inclusive have already been reserved.

FARM FOR SALE
IN THE TOWNSHIP OF MAYFIELDS, N. Y.
Just the place for a young married couple starting farming

Everything romantic and suggestive of the honeymoon. Nothing to do but listen to the tinkling of cow bells and the twitter of the robins. Everything that loves dose for them by the proprietor

With his own hands he has gathered up the stones, placed them on piles and painted them green. Nothing grows about that either. You see the farmers are so used to seeing stones scattered over a farm, that if they couldn't see any on the surface they'd think that they couldn't raise white beans there. And the cattle—nothing but yellow cows. If you should buy a white cow for a pet, and let her feed on this farm, the grass is so rich in butter that it would turn her hair yellow. And such butter balls of sweetness and delightful pungency and sufficiency—they are pale when placed beside the fragrant unctuous substance. There is only one drawback to butter making on this farm. The milk is so rich that in the process of milking the agitation causes the butter globules to form and separate from the milk, and it is for expensive and inconvenient to work the butter in the pail, but this will be remedied in time by patent sufferers, and the operation of making butter and forcing it into rolls ready for distribution will be done in the process of milking

Any other information concerning this picturesque farm will be cheerfully given by applying to Query.—What is the difference between a friend and a Methodist?

A PSALM OF LIFE.
(A HIND WAS AFTER UNSPEECHLOW.)
Tell me not, in sorrowful numbers,
Life is but an empty dream!
For the soul is dead that doesn't,
And things are not what they seem.

Life is real! Life is earnest!
And the grave is not the goal;
If we advertise, still and wisely,
We will get there sweet and soul.

Not enjoyment, and not sorrow,
Is our destined end or way,
Advertise that each to-morrow
Finds us richer than to-day

In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of life,
Be not like dumb drivers cattle!
Be a leader in the strife

Trust no future however pleasant!
Let the buried past bury its dead!
Advertise in the living present!
In that way you'll forge ahead.

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make the paths our there,
If we advertise ourselves
Make a business bright advertise

Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Advertising and still hoeing,
Let the other fellows wait

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

Extract within the vestibule and heart Sweet, tuneful voices called up in song. The scent of evergreens was in the air and from with eager into erupting lungs and merry interplade of speech revolved The fair and feast, for this was Christmas Eve, and this their song

Ring out wild bells, to the wild sky,
The flying cloud, the frosty light;
The year is dying in the night;
Ring out wild bells and let him die.

Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring happy bells across the snow:
The year is going, let him go;
Ring out the false, ring in the true.

The store is every decked the aisles,
The merry bells are ring above,
The Christ is coming to our hearts,
Let us prepare to meet Him there.

Ring out the darkness of our life,
Ring in the light that is to be.

The store is fair is far away,
We do not always hear their song
We store grow dim in the distance,
The path is rough, the way is long
Till Christ is found the crowds come up

So enters the choir for Heaven opens
Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Christ puts the queen to our hearts
And peace with light on earth to you.
We find our song and light to true

A. E. WOOLSEY—DIX.

DIXIE—1891.

"Yes, its the same old Canajoharie, but how changed

The hills is sweeping around the curve near the Fire mansion. An old gentleman intently gazes at the village opposite. Evidently he is not quantizing about it, and wants to know more. Let us approach him

"You seem to be interested in the village yonder

"I ought to be. I was born and brought up in Canajoharie. I left it in '58, and have never seen it since."

Our heart-strings are at once discordant. A few extra throbs of that organ attract to our poly fee a stab were inflicted twenty-six years ago from the bogclad hills and walnut groves of Canajoharie.

"If you will stop over a day or so we shall be glad to show you about the town. It will do you good to see the improvements that have taken place since you left it."

The old gentleman is willing. Forth with the bell rings, the wheels toots, and we are at the depot. Alighting from the train we are soon pursuing our onward and upward flight to the bridge.

"Now depot, but name old stairs," muttered the Ancient.

We are upon the bridge—across it.

"Great change, great change, we used to go across on those flats to a row boat every spring, and wade up to our waists after every hard shower. I remember I carried a girl across those flats on my back once, and just as I reached the bank I fell. The Lutherans used to own that property—a little white church with galleries all around and a wide door open to boat it. I remember a cake of ice one spring"—we interrupt him, and tell him of the new Lutheran Church—of its beauty and completion—of the Memorial Room, containing so many reminders of Senator Webster Wagner—of the new organ, and "Well, I'm lost," says the Ancient "I don't know the canal! That, like the soil, remains, and like the soil, is as dirty as ever

After we cross the bridge, the Ancient is silent several minutes, occasionally giving utterance to a word or two of pleasure or surprise. We point out the new brick block, which rose from the ashes of that disastrous fire of April 20, 1877. Here, over the stores stood Henry Hallenbeck's little fish market—since supplanted by the Saylon Block, which was again succeeded by the present Stumpfel Block. Then came the Bart. Smith and Stafford Blocks.

"The Kirby House is gone too" says the Ancient.

We give a history of that property. We tell him of the Nellis House and its proprietors, and how as age crept on they sold it to other parties, and brought a home with daughters in the great city of the west. We tell of the changes made by the new proprietors, point out the magnificent plate-glass windows just put in, and show him the gilded letters "Mohawk" by which name the stately structure is now known. Across the street he views the substantial block now owned by A. M. Hodge, Christ Sticht and Mrs. Arrions. "Another land-mark gone" remarks the Ancient, as we looks into Hatter's beautiful windows. "Oh, yes, you are thinking of Mark Hong's meat market." "I remember Mark well. One day my little boy was sent there for a roast. He asked for some roast beef. Mark said he didn't have any but he had a good piece of raw beef, and he could take it home and let the folks roast it. Good judge, Mark was."

We notice the changes in other buildings along the street. Now stories added to the Mitchell and Hawley buildings, a fourth story just added by Lewis S. Davis to accommodate his increasing business—in fact the Ancient noticed improvements to every building we passed on Church street. At the railroad crossing we waited fifteen minutes for a freight train to demonstrate the absurdity of a few West Shore curves. Then we came to the sleeper block—another Phoenix, rising from the ashes—just raising for eagerly waits into the limitless ether. We tell him about it, of course

"So that's Charley Shaper's is it? He used to quarry stone and run a time kiln. I heard of buying him out once." We gently insinuate that his present appearance doesn't indicate that he possesses sufficient dust to buy out Mr Shaper now, whatever he might have done once upon a time.

You remember Gottlieb's store shop, by the bridge? You notice a change there, too, I presume."

"Yes, the old lot known as the "Easter triangle" was bought by a prosperous butcher who built that fine block, and put his name upon it—Bettle Block.

Now for the town-pump and the Eldridge House—the Ancient fairly shook with wonder as he witnessed the grand transformation.

"It's a dream," he muttered. He stood silent before the beautiful pile—the work of an artist as well as an architect—the pride of the village. It is an ideal hotel—a home for wanderers—a refuge from the noise and dust of travel—grateful, comforting. Upon its front bearing the gilded letters of an honored name, it stands a monument to the enterprise and public spirit of Webster Wagner. In Henry Joy, the present owner, the Hotel Wagner has an ideal landlord.

We must hasten on with the Ancient. We glance at the Hennemonth and O'Connor buildings, and over toward the Courier building with "no stairs to climb." He removes a tear as he views the handsome entrance to the Washington Hotel—quarters which stood for a century or two at the foot of the Academy Hill. Then we proceed to clamber up the Acropolis.

"Where is the Academy?"

"Dust and ashes" principally dust, however, and—come to think of it—no ashes at all. They tore down the substantial halls of learning, and—well, come around in a few years and we'll show you our Parthenon—grander by far, to us, than all the Athenian wonders from Pericles to Prince George. Our school has been our pride for many years and we intend to imitate it in one of the finest school-buildings of modern times.

So onward we go. Up Cliff street to Adam Reith's pleasant home, and beyond—both sides of a former wilderness lined with other pleasant homes—up Walnut street, noting the renewed Catholic Church, with stained-glass windows breaking the light into warm and mellow tints—on every side evidences of general thrift, prosperity and happiness. Crossing over to Orange street, the story is suspended. New houses, old ones refitted, new and three an exceptionally elegant home—all suggests to render the Ancient speechless. We descend to Mill street and the Ancient listens to the story of the Flour Sack with the extensive plant of Arkell & Smiths at hand to corroborate the narrative. We show him the works of the Mohawk Valley Silk Fabric Co. Then down Mill street to the new grist bridge—another eye-opener for the Ancient—and here we pause a moment. The old blacksmith shop on the left has been replaced by the tasteful cottage of W. F. Cook. The jumble of shops and tenements opposite have been removed, giving a noble view of Mrs. Joseph Dygert's graceful dome flanked by her special protege, the Episcopal Church and Rectory.

We walk slowly up the hill. The old Mohawk glistens in the sunlight of the realtime, milk-wards, and cedar bushes is gone. Yonder upon a terrace, in the new home of A. P. Heldermont—a marvel of architectural skill. Further up the hill appears another "shapely mass of stately stone"—the home of Wm. J. Arkell. "I see you are moved" says the Ancient. "He sent me a Judge once." "Yes, I don't doubt it he is a very."

"Well, well, here's another dream" said the Ancient. He was looking at the little park, with its velvety lawn, its banks of flowers, its miniature lake filled with rare aquatic plants, and shrubbery arranged to conceal the art which shaped it all.

"Think of the contrast. Then a common, and a very common common. With cows, pigs, and small boys in active league to—to—to—to everybody ex—we—now, a thing of beauty not to be described but to be enjoyed."

Again we turn our eyes eastward. Surely if palaces are ever to adorn our grand, the residence before us may be justly termed palatial! Like the park it is something to feast ones eyes upon. With its walk artistically blended in nature's own colors are rocks from the Adirondacks, from the St. Lawrence, and even from beyond the Lakes. The combinations of color in those rough brown stones give the edifice a singular undefinable artistic attractive, and make it to be one of the handsomest homes in the valley. It is fitting that the close-handed, ingenious and enterprising head of the leading industry of Canajoharie should dwell in such a home. No one will question that to him more than to any other man Canajoharie owes its present prosperity, and to their estimation of comparative values of services rendered to the village his neighbors would ascribe the first place to Hon. Jas. Arkell.

The Ancient is weary—so is his guide. Hurriedly we move on through Barclay street. We are in the old "cedar lot." now divided into many cottage lots upon which stand elegant homes. Would Mrs Moyer know the old farm now? Another opportunity to clamber up the Acropolis of Time! We approach the "Old Fort"—no longer left to neglect and decay but owned and occupied by the Mohawk Valley Historical Society, who have thoroughly repaired it and consigned to its quaint interior many curious and valuable relics of the Past.

Suddenly our old friend leaves us and we are left alone to muse upon the changes which have taken place in our village. Looking backward through the quarter century we see only advancement on every hand. During that time two new churches have been erected and the others have been modernized and beautified. The old Reformed Church, at this moment, is undergoing repairs which will transform it into a most attractive and pleasant place of worship. With elegant memorial windows as arched ceiling, a

BEECH-NUT PACKING CO.
EARNING NEARLY $9 SHARE.

COMPANY IN STRONG FINANCIAL CONDITION—
LARGE WORKING CAPITAL.

Beech-Nut Packing Co. is at present earning at the annual rate of nearly $9 a share on its common stock, based on net earnings for the first three months of 1923, which amounted to, before preferred dividends, $595,737, against $392,291 reported for the corresponding period in 1922. Net earnings in 1922 amounted to $1,937,480, which, after preferred dividends, was equivalent to $7.42 a share on the common stock. These earnings are in sharp contrast with the present $2.40 annual dividends being paid on the common shares.

PRODUCTS WELL KNOWN.

The Beech-Nut Packing Company does a general meat and fruit business and its products are widely diversified. The business includes the curing of meat products, preservation of fruits, manufacture of ketchup, peanut butter, macaroni, jams, jellies, sauces, chewing gum and confections; bottling of vinegar and ginger ale, and the marketing of these products; and the company has more recently added the manufacture of cigarettes and smoking tobacco and candy. Practically all of these products are distributed under the trade-name, "Beech-Nut," and are widely advertised and reputably known all over the world. The company was incorporated in 1899, and owns the stock of subsidiary companies, as follows: Fairmont Box Co., Oscar & Co., Beech-Nut Co. of Calif., Montgomery Electric Light & Power Co., Canajoharie Supply Co., and Beech-Nut Foil Co., Inc. Beech-Nut Packing Company operates two plants at Canajoharie, N. Y., one at Rochester, N. Y., and another at Brooklyn, N. Y. The Canajoharie plants consist of 23 buildings having a total floor space of 328,766 square feet; the Rochester plant is made up of 14 buildings with 123,233 square feet of floor space; and the Brooklyn plant consists of 70,000 square feet of floor space in the Bush Terminal Building, 47,000 square feet of which is utilized in the making of Beech-Nut chewing gum and the balance is sublet to the Beech-Nut Foil Co., Inc., for the manufacture of tin foil.

CAPITALIZATION—DIVIDENDS.

The company has no funded or bonded indebtedness. Ahead of the common stock which is of $20 per share par value and outstanding at 250,000 shares, there are two preferred stock issues, Class "A" being 7 per cent cumulative $100 par, and outstanding at $4,500, and convertible, on a share-for-share basis, into Class "B" preferred, which is also 7 per cent cumulative, $100 par, and is outstanding at $1,119,500. The preferred dividends have been paid at the regular prescribed rate since organization. Common dividends are now being paid at the rate of $2.40 per share annually.

STRONG FINANCIAL POSITION.

The company enjoys a strong financial position. Its balance sheet as of December 31, 1922, shows total current assets of $5,420,482, compared with $4,785,062 at the end of the 1921 year, and against total current liabilities of only $781,892, leaving a net working capital of $4,638,500. Net working capital at the end of the previous year amounted to $4,105,085. The company has about $800,000 in cash.

PLAINTIFF'S EXHIBIT NO. 41.—CERTIFIED COPY, DECISION OF EXAMINER OF INTERFERENCES IN PATENT OFFICE TRADE-MARK OPPOSITION NO. 2805.

Final Hearing
May 4, 1921

IN THE UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE.

Opposition No. 2805.

P. Lorillard Company v. Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Application No. 119,930, filed June 25, 1919, published Sept. 9, 1919.

CIGARETTES.

Messrs. MEYERS, CUSHMAN & REA, and MEYERS, CAVANAGH & HYDE, for P. Lorillard Company.

Mr. JAMES R. OFFIELD for Beech-Nut Packing Company.

This is an opposition filed under the provisions of section 6 of the Trade-Mark Act of February 20, 1905, and involves the right of the applicant to obtain the registration for which it has made application.

In the drawing forming part of the application involved herein is disclosed the word "Beech-Nut" and is for use on cigarettes.

The grounds of the opposition are set forth in eleven paragraphs but they all relate to use in trade by the opposer of a substantially similar mark upon tobacco. Both parties have filed testimony and briefs. These facts are very fairly stated in the briefs of both parties.

The conflict exists as in the interpretation of these facts.

The record shows that in about 1891 the predecessor of the applicant, namely, the Imperial Packing Company, was engaged in general meat-packing business. In 1899 the business of the Imperial Packing Company was taken over by the applicant which was then incorporated under the name of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. The latter concern seems to have been very active in extending its business in various lines, from 1899 to the present time. The goods sold by this company are quite numerous and include a varied line of groceries, meat products, candy and chewing gum. On each and all of these products the word "BEECH-NUT" has been employed, and it is the symbol of a very valuable good will associated with the business of the applicant. This business is said to amount to about a million dollars monthly.

The business of the opposer is that of manufacturing and selling tobacco. It is the owner of some of the oldest and most valuable brands now on the market and has been continuously engaged in the tobacco business for more than a century. It clearly appears that in February, 1915, it placed on the market a scrap tobacco having a label thereon like its Exhibit No. 16. The dominant feature of the mark shown thereon is the word "BEECH-NUT." It further appears that this tobacco has since been extensively and continuously sold by the opposer in very large quantities. At the present time it amounts to about a million dollars monthly, which approximates in amount the entire business of the applicant on all its products.

It further appears that the opposer in 1913 acquired from the Luhrmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company all the business of the latter company together with certain brands which it in turn had acquired from the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company through the Continental Tobacco Company. Among the brands which have been in use by predecessors of the opposer is that shown by opposer's Exhibit No. 17. This discloses as a prominent feature thereof the word "BEECHNUT," associated with the representation of a squirrel. The record clearly shows (see opposer's Exhibit No. 1) that considerable quantities of this tobacco were sold by Luthmann & Wilbern Tobacco Company during the years 1904, 1905, 1906, and 1907; that in 1908 the sales thereof commenced to decrease rapidly, so that in 1910 but 25 lbs. were sold and during the years 1911 and 1914 none whatever was sold by either the opposer or its predecessors in business.

The opposer seeks to carry its use in trade of the word "BEECH-NUT" back to 1896 or 1897, the date which it is claimed its predecessors in business, the Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, adopted the mark disclosed in its Exhibit No. 17. The applicant contends that the mark disclosed in opposer's Exhibit No. 17 had become abandoned in 1915, the date when the opposer commenced to use its Exhibit No. 16. The opposer contends that the inference of abandonment is not justified and is rebutted by the following circumstances; viz., the existence during the period in question of tobacco suitable for use, the formula, wrappers and packages and willingness to fill any order if it had been received. The examiner is unable to attach thereto the significance that opposer does. For the keeping of wrappers might be either accidental or intentional. If intentional it would be accounted for as an act of caution, considering the evanescent character of tobacco brands. The tobacco could and presumably was used in the manufacture of other brands and formulae are kept even of brands which become abandoned. In connection with the willingness to fill orders, the inherent probability of obtaining such an order must be considered.

What seems to the examiner of more significance is the character of the label found on opposer's Exhibit No. 16 when considered in connection with opposer's Exhibit No. 17. Considering the great care which is exercised by traders generally to keep intact the dress and style of the label for the purpose of preserving any good will that may be symbolized thereby, the difference between the label found on Exhibits 16 and 17 seems highly significant. The record fails to show any of the circumstances which resulted in the adoption of the design found on opposer's Exhibit No. 16, although Boykin, one of the managers for the opposing company, was cross-examined somewhat at length relative thereto (see pages 60 to 72, inclusive). If the originator of the label shown on opposer's Exhibit No. 16 was aware at the time of its adoption in 1915 of the label found on opposer's Exhibit No. 17, Exhibit No. 16 is mute testimony that its originator deemed the good will that was at one time symbolized by opposer's Exhibit No. 17 to have in 1915 little or no value. The further circumstance that the opposer carefully preserved the dress of other brands which it had acquired from its predecessors tends to emphasize this significance of Exhibit No. 16 (see Beech-Nut Cross-exhibits 1, 1*a*, 2, 2*a*, 2*b*, 2*c*, 2*d*, 3 and 4 in connection with the deposition of Bowman, a witness for the opposer).

It seems to the examiner that in February, 1915, the trade-mark right evidenced by opposer's Exhibit No. 17 was not merely sleeping but actually dead and abandoned. The circumstances of this case resemble those found in the case of Levering Coffee Company v. Merchants Coffee Company, 181 O. G., 1075; 1912 C. D., 547; 39 App. D. C., 151. In view of conclusion just referred to whatever rights the opposer may have to use the work "BEECHNUT," it is believed, must be predicated on its use which was commenced in February, 1915. The character thereof is evidenced by opposer's Exhibit No. 16.

The opposer contends that in 1915 it had a right to use the mark disclosed in its Exhibit No. 16 because tobacco possess different descriptive properties from any goods which were then manufactured and sold by the applicant. The record shows that in 1915 and just prior thereto the applicant was selling meat products, groceries, candy and chewing gum.

There is no reasonable doubt in the mind of the examiner that, generally speaking, a mark can be used on tobacco which is identical with the mark used by another on meat products, groceries, candy, or chewing gum without any confusion of origin occurring (Johnson Educator Food Co. v. Sylvanus Smith & Co., Inc., 175 O. G., 268; 37 App. D. C., 107; The Quaker Oats Co. v. Mother's Macaroni Company, 198 O. G., 899; 41 App. D. C., 254; Paul F. Beich Company v. Kellogg Toasted Corn Flakes Company, 271 O. G., 361; 49 App. D. C., 186; Rueckheim Bros. & Eckstein v. Texas Gum Co., Inc., Vol. 119, p. 28). Therefore it is believed that tobacco does not possess the "same descriptive properties" as either meat products, groceries, candy, or chewing gum.

The applicant in effect contends that the goods just mentioned do possess the same descriptive properties, since in the case at bar it appears from the testimony that in some instances at least confusion of origin has actually occurred (see "Correspondence" exhibit of applicant; also see the testimony of Wood, Q. 12; Sharpe, Qs. 14-15, and X-Qs. 30 to 37, inclusive; Weevel, Qs. 5 to 13, inclusive, and Yunkers, Qs. 14 to 23, inclusive). The examiner recognizes that if goods do possess the same descriptive properties that confusion of origin will necessarily follow. The converse of this proposition, namely, if confusion of origin exists then that the goods possess the same descriptive properties, does not, however, necessarily follow. For confusion in origin may and sometimes does occur as a consequence of the significance to the public which a particular symbol has acquired. Thus, for instance, the examiner has no doubt that confusion of origin could occur by reason of the use in trade of the symbols "Ford" or "Coca Cola" on goods which possess descriptive properties which are clearly different from either automobiles or beverages. Such confusion of origin could not occur if another symbol having no such significance were substituted for these symbols. Thus, for instance, if the word "Ajax" were substituted for the symbols just mentioned, such confusion of origin would not occur. This shows that if the marks are identical, confusion of origin does not necessarily result merely from the descriptive properties of the goods on which the marks are used.

In the case at bar the record shows that the symbol used by the applicant has behind it a very extensive advertising campaign which is national in extent, coupled with the circumstances that the goods of the applicant are of excellent quality. This accounts for the significance of the symbol as used by the applicant and sufficiently explains the result shown by the testimony relied upon by the applicant to show actual confusion.

It seems to be contended in effect by the applicant (see bottom of page 22 of brief) that these meritorious efforts of the applicant are relevant and material to the determination of the question whether the goods do or do not possess the "same descriptive properties." With this contention the examiner is unable to agree. For the determination of the question whether two specific goods do or do not possess the same descriptive properties seems to the examiner to be inherently of such a nature as to turn solely on the properties of the goods that are known to the trade. In this respect it is believed to resemble a determination made in a proceeding in rem rather than in personam.

At common law, the determination of the question whether certain goods do or do not possess the same descriptive properties involves not merely the rights of the particular parties to a proceeding but also the substantive rights of other traders. Certainty of definition of these rights is highly desirable if trade is to be encouraged. This certainty is no less desirable than it is in connection with the question of negotiability of a bill or note and for the same fundamental reasons.

The special significance that has been impressed upon the symbol by the efforts of the applicant is material and relevant to the question of confusion of origin and is considered by the courts in a certain type of unfair competition case. Since such special significance varies with the trader using the symbol, it is a transient factor. It is therefore inevitable that if this factor is considered as a basis for determination of the question of whether the goods do or do not possess the same descriptive properties, such determinations will necessarily be conflicting. In this type of unfair competition case, it is stated by a recent writer that "to reconcile the decision of the courts is hopeless" (Good Will Trade-Marks and Unfair Competition, Rogers, Chapter XXVI, page 255).

In the case at bar any diversion of good will resulting from this special significance of the symbol used by the applicant can be readily prevented through the control of a court by the manner of the use in trade of the mark disclosed in opposer's Exhibit No. 16. An example of such control is disclosed in the case of Elgin National Watch Company v. Illinois Watch Case Company, 179 U. S., page 665. For the reasons stated herein the examiner believes that this question of significance should not be considered as relevant or material to the question of whether the goods of the opposer do or do not possess the same descriptive properties.

Since it is believed that the goods in question do not possess the same descriptive properties, it seems clear to the examiner that the opposer in 1915 had the right to use the mark disclosed in its Exhibit 16 on tobacco subject only to the well established principles relating to unfair trade (Johnson Educator Food Co. v. Sylvanus Smith & Co., Inc., supra; The Quaker Oats Co. v. Mother's Macaroni Co., supra; The Rookwood Pottery Company v. The A. Wilhelm Company, 212 O. G., 1691; 43 App. D. C., 1; The Denver Gas & Electric Light Company v. The Alexander Lumber Company, 283 O. G., 182; App. D. C.; The Hump Hairpin Company v. The DeLong Hook & Eye Company, 190 O. G., 1032; 39 App. D. C., 484; G & J Tire Company v. G. J. G. Motor Car Company, 190 O. G., 550; 39 App. D. C., 508).

The conclusion just reached relative to the right of the opposer to use the mark disclosed in its Exhibit 16 on tobacco is believed to be not adversely affected by the circumstance that prior to 1915 the word "Beech Nut" was a prominent feature of the corporate name of the applicant. For, at common law the use of a corporate name is not a basis for legal damage unless it results in diversion of good will and such diversion, if any, can be readily prevented by control of the manner of use of a symbol without however stopping its use. Whether this circumstance would or would not prevent the opposer from obtaining registration is a question which is not determined since the opposer is not seeking registration and it is therefore deemed not to be in issue.

The applicant does not claim to have commenced using the word "Beech Nut" on any tobacco products prior to 1915, the date when the opposer commenced to use this word on tobacco products. Such use by the opposer is therefore deemed to be a bar to the application involved herein.

Accordingly the opposition is sustained, and it is adjudged that Beech-Nut Packing Company, the applicant, is not entitled to the registration for which it has made application.

PLAINTIFF'S EXHIBIT NO. 42.—CERTIFIED COPY, DECISION OF ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER OF PATENTS IN PATENT OFFICE TRADE-MARK OPPOSITION NO. 2805

Hearing:
Jan. 10, 1922.

IN THE UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE.

P. Lorillard Company v. Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Opposition No. 2805.

Appeal.

TRADE-MARK FOR CIGARETTES.

Application of the Beech-Nut Packing Company, filed June 25, 1919,

Serial No. 119,930, published Sept. 9, 1919.

Messrs. MEYERS, CUSHMAN & REA and Messrs. MEYERS, CAVANAGH & HYDE for P. Lorillard Company.

Mr. JAMES R. OFFIELD for Beech-Nut Packing Company.

This is an appeal from the decision of the examiner of interferences sustaining an opposition filed against the application for registration of "Beech Nut" for cigarettes filed by the Beech Nut Packing Company on June 25, 1919.

Under Section 7 of the trade-mark statute we are required to determine the question of the right of registration to the trade-mark. We are thus met in the beginning of the case with the question of whether applicant has such ownership in the mark as entitles it to registration. It is admitted that applicant has never manufactured cigarettes or other tobacco products. It is admitted that the only cigarettes or tobacco products in which applicant has dealt are 2,060 cigarettes which it purchased from the American Tobacco Company on an invoice dated July 12, 1919. These cigarettes were shipped by the American Tobacco Company in three lots, one to an officer of the company in New York City, another to a member of the firm of applicant's attorneys, of record here, at Chicago, and the third to the New Jersey Tobacco Company, Jersey City, N. J. The goods shipped to the New Jersey Tobacco Company had not been ordered, were not accepted, but were returned. There is no evidence that any of the Beech Nut cigarettes were ordered by the parties to whom they were shipped, nor is there any evidence that they were bought or paid for. It is admitted that aside from this single transaction applicant has never been in the tobacco or cigarette business. I am unable to see that this state of affairs is distinguishable from that condemned as not being sufficient to support a trade-mark registration in Phillips v. Hudnut, 1920, C. D., 164; 263 Fed. Rep., 643; 273 O. G., 629; 49 App. D. C., 247.

Applicant cites B. Fischer & Company v. Knickerbocker Mills Company, 1915, C. D., 71; 211 O. G., 955; 42 App. D. C., 570, but in that case apparently there had been a prior going business in the goods in issue. In Breitenbach et al. v. Rosenberg, 167 O. G., 763; 1911, C. D., 365; 37 App. D. C., 102, the business was a continuous business, although small in volume, but in the present instance applicant has no business at all in cigarettes.

Applicant claims that having made this sale of cigarettes it discontinued the business for the time being, awaiting the outcome of the present application for trade-mark registration which it was prepared to make. The present application was filed June 25, 1919, almost two weeks after applicant had discontinued its activities. No question of abandonment of the mark is involved here as applicant has never owned the mark for cigarettes.

Applicant has established that it was using "Beech Nut" as a trade-mark for a large number of miscellaneous articles, saying:

> "The Beech Nut Company in using its own label on cigarettes was operating within an exclusive right it has always had; this being so, neither the extent nor the method of exploitation of cigarettes is of any legitimate interest to opposer."

Applicant seems to argue that inasmuch as it was employing a trade-mark on one class of goods it was free at any time to employ that mark on another class of goods, and that in order to obtain registration in the second class of goods it was not necessary to carry on a business as to the second class of goods. This argument is not supported by any cases that I can find and does not seem sound. A trade-mark right grows only from use in a business and the use of the mark in one business does not afford sufficient foundation for a registration of the mark for another business. Moreover, applicant did not apply to its cigarettes a label like that used on all its other goods.

In the argument and in the briefs many other interesting questions are urged, but since applicant has no business on which to base its registration, the Patent Office has no jurisdiction of its case and anything we may say

BEECH-NUT PACKING COMPANY

CANAJOHARIE, N. Y.

6/11/15

LORILLARD CO.,
Middletown, O.

Dear Sirs:

We adopted many years ago as our trade name the word "Beech-Nut" arbitrarily selected by us as the mark or name for our manufacturing output of food material. We also associated with such trade name "BEECH-NUT" and as a part of the trade mark, an oblong or oval frame or border of a red color surrounding and enclosing a white oblong space with a picture or representation of a Beech-Nut centered therein.

We have built up during the last quarter of a century a vast trade in our products and always with our trade name or trade mark associated therewith. We have expended a very large sum of money in so doing and the word or name "BEECH-NUT" and our trade mark has become of vast value to us not only for these reasons but for the reason of a high quality and perfection of the various products manufactured by us to which this name and mark has been applied.

So completely has this name and mark been attached to and associated with our goods during all of these years that the purchasing public has come to recognize this name and mark as our property as to origin and to purchase the manufacture and output to which this name and mark is applied without any further identification as to the origin of the word or name itself, believing that wherever they see our name and mark applied that we are the manufacturers of the product and purchase accordingly.

We have from time to time added to the variety of our manufacturing commodities to which this name or mark has always been applied; as for example, a chewing gum product of somewhat recent production upon our part. While we have never as yet manufactured tobacco, the taking on of such manufacture in the future is by no means impossible or improbable. You will also see that the name or word "BEECH-NUT" is a part of our corporate name. We have been thus particular to state this matter to you by reason of the acts upon your part which now follow.

We have been shown a lined bag evidently employed for packing "Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco," apparently manufactured by one of your factories at Middletown, O. A prominent feature upon the bag is our trade name "BEECH-NUT," including the oval band and our characteristics burrs and nuts. It is difficult to believe that the presence of our trade name "Beech-Nut" and mark upon the bag will not deceive the purchasing public in the belief that the contents of the bag are of our manufacture, and to us there is no other explanation to be given to the presence of our trade name "Beech-Nut" and mark upon this bag except the intention on your part that the public shall be so deceived: and you will sell your tobacco by reason of the presence thereon of our name and mark. In other words, these acts strongly indicate to us intentional unfair trading.

We have decided in the first instance to write you fully as to this matter and present to you our view of your acts and to request to you immediately to cease this use of our name and mark and give us written assurance of the same.

We have confidence that now your attention is called to it you will recognize the justice of our position and that there will hereafter be no necessity of using any harsher course to enforce recognition of the same. We have been thus particular also for the reason that there can be no contention hereafter that we have not fully stated your position and ours in this matter. An early reply upon your part is requested and expected.

Yours very truly,

BEECH-NUT PACKING COMPANY,
Canajoharie, N. Y.

Dear Sirs:

Your letters of June 11th and June 18th addressed to this Company at Middletown, Ohio, relative to the use by us of the name "Beech-Nut" for Scrap Tobacco, have been referred to me.

Preliminary to any discussion of the matter, will you be good enough to let me know when you first began to use the name "Beech-Nut?" I notice on your letterhead, "Incorporated 1899," but this of course does not necessarily mean that you began to put products on the market under the name "Beech-Nut" at that time.

The statement in your letter of June 11th, that you believe we are using the name "Beech-Nut" with the intention that the public shall be deceived into thinking that our product is of your manufacture, is not only without the slightest warrant, but is little short of ridiculous. As a matter of fact, if such an impression should be formed, it would be to our detriment.

Yours very truly,

Mr. Thomas S. Fuller.

Dear Sirs:

Your favor of the 23rd ult. duly received.

Our "BEECH-NUT" trade mark and trade name has been used by ourselves and our predecessors since and prior to the year 1891. Both our trade mark and our trade name "BEECH-NUT" has been used continuously since that date in our business and to such an extent and in such manner that both the name and the mark long since came to have a "secondary significance and meaning"; that is, wherever the mark and name "BEECH-NUT" is seen and no matter with what product it is associated with, it has a "secondary significance" and means only the product and products of the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

You are woefully mistaken and entirely misinformed in your assumption and, indeed, your statement that the public is not deceived by your clients use of our trade mark and name "BEECH-NUT." We know as an absolute truth what is apparent on the face of the facts that the general purchasing public is deceived by your use of our "Beech-Nut" trade mark and trade name and, indeed, this could not well be otherwise, but we know further that your salesmen and agents deliberately push your goods and trade under this identity of use of their mark and name.

We beg to call your attention in this connection to our former communication to you in this matter and to again urgently request that you immediately stop the use in every way and manner of our trade name and mark "BEECH-NUT," in your business without further action upon our part.

Yours very truly,

BEECH-NUT PACKING CO.,

BEECH-NUT PACKING COMPANY,

(Attention F. E. Barbour, Esq.)

Gentlemen:

We have your letter of July 2nd, further with reference to our use of the name "Beech-Nut" on scrap tobacco, and informing us that you and your predecessors have used the name since and prior to the year 1891.

That the name "Beech-Nut" has acquired a secondary significance and meaning in the packing industry and is associated in the public mind with goods of your manufacture may be perfectly true, but this would not give you the right to the name for all purposes. The authorities are overwhelming on this subject. You seem to proceed upon the assumption that we have recently begun to use the name on the tobacco. This is not the case. This Company and its predecessor in ownership of this brand have used it continuously since prior to the year 1898, as shown by records in my office. I have not made a search beyond that time, but I have no doubt that I can find that the brand is very much older.

We would not desire to have it thought that our "Beech-Nut" tobacco is made by your Company, and if you can give us the name of any salesman of ours who has made such a representation, we would be very glad to have it, and we can assure you that if he did make such a representation, his discharge will immediately follow. It could be of no conceivable advantage to us to have the public think that our tobacco product was manufactured by a packing establishment. Our concern has been in business for more than one hundred and fifty years, and in that length of time has built an enviable reputation for the excellence of its tobacco products.

Though you may turn out an excellent quality of bacon, it does not follow that you could turn out an excellent quality of tobacco, or steel rails, or pianos or aeroplanes. If your contention were true, we, who have a brand of tobacco called "Climax," could enjoin the use of the name on a well-known threshing-machine which is sold in the Western States, or we could enjoin the use of our name on the Lorillard Refrigerators. It has never occurred to us to attempt either.

If you will look at our package of Beech-Nut Tobacco, you will see that the name "Lorillard" is prominently displayed thereon. This was done with the desire that people should know the tobacco is coming from the Lorillard Company. It has been our belief that the fact that Lorillard made it would of itself be of value to the brand.

It is difficult to see how you can seriously claim that there is the slightest similarity in the marking of the package and the fac-simile of your mark as displayed on your letterhead.

If you desire me to point out to you authorities which I consider completely sustain my view as expressed herein, I will take pleasure in doing so.

Yours very truly,

Dear Sirs:

Please pardon the delay in acknowledging receipt of your favor of July 8th.

We will greatly appreciate it if you will send us samples of your product showing the manner of use of the word "BEECH-NUT" since the year 1898, copies of advertisements or of letter-heads showing your use of this name. We trust you will consider this a fair request as we would like to reach a prompt and friendly termination of the correspondence on this subject.

We also desire to take advantage of the offer contained in the last paragraph of your letter to point out to us the authorities which sustain your views.

Dear Sir:

Kindly refer to your favor of July 29th in which you advised that you would collect the information requested in our letter of July 26th after your return from a week's absence. Up to the present we do not seem to have heard from you and will greatly appreciate the information requested.

In this connection, we received to-day an inquiry from New River Gro. Co., Hinton, W. Va., asking the best jobbing price on Beech-Nut scrap tobacco, from which you will note that in the minds of some, at least, Beech-Nut scrap tobacco is credited to the Beech-Nut Packing Co.

Thanking you to favor us at your early convenience, we remain,

F. E. Barbour, Esq.,
Beech-Nut Packing Company,
Canajoharie, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

I have been able to locate some old price lists which contain our Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, and enclose them herein. I am also sending you an old package showing the use of the name "Beech-Nut" and our present package.

Beech-Nut chewing and smoking tobacco (scrap) was made by Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company, of Louisville, Kentucky. This Company was bought out by The American Tobacco Company some time in 1903. Prior to the acquisition of the Weissinger Tobacco Company by the American Tobacco Company the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company of Middletown, Ohio, was acquired by the Continental Tobacco Company. In 1904 the American Tobacco Company and the Continental Tobacco Company were merged into a new company formed for that purpose and known as The American Tobacco Company.

Under a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, the so-called Tobacco Combination, which included The American Tobacco Company, was split up. In this disintegration proceeding the Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company, which had always been maintained as a separate entity, was acquired by P. Lorillard Company. In the meantime some of the brands formerly manufactured by the Weissinger Tobacco Company had been taken over and manufactured in the Luhrman & Wilbern factory in Middletown, and after the acquisition by our Company of the Luhrman & Wilbern business, including these brands, we continued to operate it as a separate Company until about two years ago, when we dissolved it, taking over all of the business and brands directly in our own name.

I give you this history so that you may understand the various price lists in the name of Luhrman & Wilbern Tobacco Company and the package in the name of Harry Weissinger Tobacco Company. I do not know the exact date of the old package, as the stamp is not legible, but it was prior to 1903.

The price lists that I send you are dated January 2, 1904; May 6, 1907, July 1, 1910, and November 3, 1910.

It is difficult for me to see how anyone can claim that there is any similarity in our products and yours, or in your label and ours, other than the name "Beech-Nut." Your claim that we would not have the right to use the name "Beech-Nut" on tobacco products must find its basis in the idea that you can appropriate the name "Beech-Nut" for all products of whatever character.

That the law does not permit of such a claim is elementary. If your claim were maintainable, then the Lion Brewery in New York could enjoin the manufacture of Lion brand collars, or vice versa. Suppose that the J. B. Williams Company should tomorrow put out a new brand of shaving soap, called "Beech-Nut." Do you argue that you could stop it because you have first used the name on hams and bacon? It seems to me that your argument must lead to this conclusion. The law of unfair competition, so far as it assumes to protect the public, assumes to protect the purchaser of average intelligence. It is difficult to believe that a person of average intelligence who enters a store for the purpose of buying "Beech-Nut" hams or bacon could be deceived into thinking he was getting either if he were handed a package of "Beech-Nut" chewing tobacco, or that the "Beech-Nut" chewing tobacco was manufactured by the manufacturer of the hams and bacon. It is no more the custom in this country for a packer to manufacture chewing tobacco than it is for a manufacturer of beer to manufacture collars, and the purchaser of average intelligence perfectly well knows this.

We have tried to make it evident on our package that our "Beech-Nut" chewing tobacco is of our manufacture, by stamping across the top of the package, before the name "Beech-Nut," "Lorillard's." We have also on the other side of the package, plainly printed that it is manufactured at Middletown, Ohio. There is nothing in the get-up of the label, whether in design, color or wording, which could suggest to a person of average intelligence that it was of your manufacture, or in fact the manufacture of anyone except the Lorillard Company.

As I have written you before, we consider it of immense value to the brand itself that it is manufactured by the Lorillard Company, and we desire the consumers of tobacco to know this, because we believe that the Lorillard name carries with it a vast amount of good-will and a guarantee of excellence. We are justified in this belief by reason of the immense increase in the sales of "Beech-Nut" Scrap since we took the former manufacturer's name off and put "Lorillard's" thereon.

I think this covers the situation except with respect to any representations which you claim that some of our salesmen made, to the effect that our "Beech-Nut" Scrap was a product of your Company. I have written you before that if you will give me the name of any salesman who has made such representation, and that fact can be determined, his discharge will be immediately forthcoming, as he can be of no service to us. If you will point out to me anything in the conduct of our business which tends to create a belief in the trade that our "Beech-Nut" Scrap is made by you, we will thank you, so that we may rectify it. I assure you that we are just as anxious as you are, if not more so, to prevent any impression that our tobacco is made by you. Will you let me have a copy of the letter you received from the merchant in West Virginia making inquiry of you for "Beech-Nut" tobacco?

On this general subject, if you have not already done so, you might consult Nims on Unfair Business Competition, pages 200 to 300; therein I think you will find a very complete and satisfactory discussion of the law governing this subject. I will quote you paragraph 117 on page 236:

> "Property in a place name for all purposes cannot exist in one person, under ordinary circumstances. The defendant must be using it in the same or a similar business as the plaintiff. Large amounts of rubber as well as licorice might be found in Anatolia. If there were, the rights which the complainant has acquired in the use of the name in the licorice business, would not prevent another under certain conditions from acquiring a sole right to use the name in the rubber trade."

There is no distinction so far as the principle here laid down is concerned between a place name, a generic name, or a fanciful name. You might also consult the cases of Bordens Ice Cream Company against Bordens Condensed Milk Company, 201 Fed. 510 and Wells v. Ceylon Perfume Company, 105 Fed. 621.

I apologize for the length of this letter. I desire to give you the facts fully, together with our views, and I sincerely hope that this will satisfy you as to the law and our entire good faith. We are as proud of our goodwill and the excellence of our products in the tobacco business as you are of yours in the packing industry, and we believe with good reason.

Yours very truly,

Dear Sir:

We have your very interesting letter of Sept. 15th together with the pricelists referred to and the package of tobacco.

Your letter is a very interesting one and before giving a definite reply to same, desire to review the matter as presented by you so that we can give you an intelligent reply.

At this time, however, we may express our agreement with you that the name Lorillard carries with it a vast amount of good will and unquestionably a guarantee of excellence. So does the name "Beech-Nut Packing Co." and we take the view that the increase in sales of Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco is due to the exploitation of the name "Beech-Nut" with the oval label, and we cannot help but assume that the general impression is that these goods are manufactured by this Company rather than by Lorillard, at least to a considerable degree, for since writing you last we have another inquiry, and this time from Wm. Edwards Co. of Cleveland, O., asking us to ship them 5 cases of Beech-Nut scrap tobacco. The previous inquiry came from New River Gro. Co., Hinton, W. Va.

BEECH-NUT PACKING COMPANY,
Canajoharie, New York.

Gentlemen:

Some four years ago, there occurred a correspondence between the two companies begun by your Mr. F. E. Barbour's letter of June 11th, 1915, complaining of our use of "BEECH-NUT" for tobacco products. Several letters having intervened, we wrote you on September 15th, 1915, setting forth at some length the title to and use of this trade-mark for tobacco products, asserting our ownership of it for tobacco products and denying that you had cause or right to call this ownership in question. Your response was an acknowledgment, dated September 20th, 1915, characterizing our letter as very interesting and stating that before giving definite reply you desired to review the matter presented by us so that you could give us an intelligent reply.

On your part, there the matter was dropped, you having made no further reply or objection. On our part, we have continued the manufacture and sale of tobacco products under the trade-mark "BEECH-NUT" until today it is one of the leading tobacco trade-marks of this country.

On or about the 17th of this month information came to us of small shipments to two jobbers in this locality of cigarettes bearing the trade-mark "Beech-Nut" and your name, but manufactured by The American Tobacco Company. Our counsel immediately by phone took the matter up with Mr. Junius Parker, counsel for the Tobacco Company and, on being told by Mr. Parker that the Tobacco Company did not claim any title to the trade-mark, but was manufacturing cigarettes under it for your account, our counsel asserted our ownership of the trade-mark for tobacco products and demanded that the Tobacco Company cease making these cigarettes. We now have Mr. Parker's letter dated June 25th, 1919, stating that the Tobacco Company has "easily and definitely concluded" not to manufacture any tobacco products under the name "Beech-Nut". We do not enclose copy of this letter, as we take it for granted that the Tobacco Company has made you fully cognizant.

We very much hope that further consideration will bring you to a like conclusion, as we must and do insist that you respect our rights and cease using "Beech-Nut" as a trade-mark for cigarettes. You have never heretofore used this trade-mark for tobacco products. Indeed, you have never heretofore manufactured or sold any tobacco products, but always goods of an entirely different class. "BEECH-NUT' has been used by ourselves and our predecessors in title for many, many years as a trade-mark for tobacco products, and under numerous decisions this gives us ownership of the trade-mark "BEECH-NUT' for cigarettes.

We are mailing a duplicate original of this letter to your New York Office.

Dear Mr. Arkell:

Pursuant to our interview, I am sending you by registered mail, under separate cover, a sample of the old package for BEECH-NUT cigarettes, also one showing color scheme for the new package.

The new package will carry the same printing and gilt as the old package, except that the printing on the reverse side of the new package will be: "Cigarettes of this quality have never before been offered to the public. Guaranteed by P. Lorillard Company (Established 1760)." in lieu of that now appearing on the old package.

The color scheme we have adopted for the new package is not only strikingly different from the old package, but it is a distinctly new color, in so far as we know. Our lithographer tells us it is a recently "created" color.

In making this change we are destroying wrapping and advertising material that cost us $10,231.36. I mention this, as I feel sure you will not permit us to suffer such a loss in accommodating ourselves to your wishes.

Dear Sir:

In reply to your letter of June 10th, the fact that you were aware of the existence of the Beech-Nut Stogie Company and have actually filled their orders with your goods without making any complaint will, of course, have a bearing upon the question of damages in the event you sued them, but I doubt if it would have any bearing upon your right to stop the use by them of your mark. Of course, the time to have taken the matter up was upon the first shipment but that is now past and I think it would be a good idea to call this matter to the attention of the Lorillard Company and let them take steps against the Beech-Nut Stogie Company as they are in a much better position to do so than the Beech-Nut Packing Company.

Dear Mr. Arkell:

I have your letter of the 25th, enclosing letter from your counsel, Mr. Offield, to your son, Mr. William Clark Arkell, in reference to the Beech-Nut Stogie Company.

We are now opposing in Washington an attempted registration by this concern of the name "Beech-Nut" for some tobacco products. This is the beginning of measures which we hope will result in stopping the use of the name by this concern for tobacco products.

I also received your letter of the 17th, with respect to the sample package sent you, and as to which I hope you will find yourself in position to reply at an early date.

You state you do not understand the last paragraph of my letter of the 15th. Should we change from the label we had adopted for "BEECH-NUT" cigarettes, it will result in our being unable to use the labels and advertising and wrapping material which we had procured for this brand of cigarettes, and which cost us the figures stated in my letter. Mr. Perkins mentioned this to you—though not the figures—in our interview when you were here. There was no discussion of the point. It seems to me that we should not stand this loss and that you would not wish us to stand the loss, inasmuch as any change that we might make would be simply to accommodate ourselves to your wishes.

Mr. Thomas J. Maloney.

Dear Sirs:

Our President, Mr. Arkell, was here yesterday and your letter of July 28th was presented at a meeting of our Executive Committee.

In discussing the situation, a suggestion was made which possibly has not occurred to you, and therefore we are submitting it to you for your consideration. In view of the splendid success of your Beech-Nut Scrap Tobacco, would it not be worth while to simulate your Beech-Nut scrap tobacco package in a wrapping for your cigarettes: in other words, use for your cigarettes a form of label which will immediately apprise the prospective purchaser that the cigarettes are made by the same company making the popular Beech-Nut tobacco, and tie up the advantage and publicity you have already gained through the merchandising of that product. Our thought in regard to the above is prompted by the procedure of the Patterson Co. in connection with their Lucky Strike Smoking Tobacco and Lucky Strike Cigarettes.

Should you not care to follow the suggestion offered above, we hope you will abandon the red background and change the same to blue or some other color, and we would like to see the words "Beech-Nut Brand" a straight line instead of a curve, provided you could work out this idea to your satisfaction.

Mr. Arkell has no recollection of hearing mentioned the advertising matter or wrappings you have provided for your Beech-Nut cigarettes, and while Mr. Lipe recollects some mention made of it, no reference, as far as he can recall, was made in regard to the quantity and neither of these gentlemen gained the inference that you would expect the Beech-Nut Packing Co. to absorb the cost of these supplies.

MR. F. E. BARBOUR, Secretary,
Beech-Nut Packing Company,
Canajoharie, New York.

Dear Sir:

Your letter of the 7th has been received and its contents noted, and we appreciate very much your suggestion of our use for the cigarette package of the design now upon our scrap package. This thought occurred to us when we were originating the package for the cigarette and was tried out, with the result that in our opinion the design was not adaptable to a package the size of a cigarette package.

The matter of the oval upon the package was mentioned by Mr. Arkell, but he did not press the point against our objection, the only things remaining for discussion between us being the color of the background of the package and the wording as respects "BEECH-NUT" quality. In the light of this interview the sample which we sent you made changes in both these respects, and we still very much hope that it will prove acceptable.

Indeed, your averseness to assuming the loss which a change in wrapping material would occasion us indicates that the matter is of such small importance to you as not to justify further consideration, for you could not expect us to bear the loss of changes made just to accommodate ourselves to your wishes.

As we are anxious to get along with this matter, will you not let us have your prompt and full answer.

Very truly yours,

President.

Mr. Thomas J. Maloney.

Gentlemen:

Your letter of the 27th is received and the same will have prompt consideration.

Yours very truly,

MR. BARTLETT ARKELL, President.
Beech-Nut Packing Company,
Room 1818, 120 Broadway,
New York City, New York.

Dear Mr. Arkell:

Although from my interview and correspondence which ante-dated your application for the registration of "BEECH NUT" for cigarettes, makes me feel sure that you did not intend to press this application, the appearance of a notice of it in the "Official Gazette" of September 9th compels us to file a formal opposition in order that the registration may not become complete through our default.

I am writing you in advance of the filing of this opposition, so that you will understand the circumstances.

I hope that you may be able to let me hear at an early date something further as to the proposed package for "BEECH NUT" Cigarettes.

Very truly yours,

(Sgd.) T. J. MALONEY,

President.

New York City.

Dear Sir:—

I take the liberty of acknowledging receipt of your courteous favor of the 17th inst. which has arrived during Mr. Arkell's absence from the city.

It is expected that Mr. Arkell will return to the city the forepart of the coming week, at which time your letter will be placed before him for his attention.

Yours very truly,

M. E. Carroll,
Secretary to Mr. Arkell.

MR. THOMAS J. MALONEY, President,
P. Lorillard Company,
119 West 40th Street,
New York City.

My dear Mr. Maloney:

I appreciate, and understand thoroughly, your courteous favor of the 17th inst.

I take it for granted that the application for registration of Beech-Nut Cigarettes was a procedure advised by our Legal Department. I understand that Mr. Offield, who has offices in Chicago, and who has these matters in charge, has been in California and for that reason there has been this unusual delay. Or it may be that we felt that our suggestions as to your package should have been regarded in a more favorable light by you.

Yours sincerely,

BARTLETT ARKELL.

BEECH-NUT PACKING COMPANY

Oct. 8, 1919.

Mr. THOMAS J. MALONEY,
Pres. P. Lorillard Co.,
119 West 40th St.,
New York City, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Maloney:

We have just had a communication from our attorney regarding our application for the registration of our trade-mark "Beech-Nut" for cigarettes. It is his opinion that this application should stand in the Patent Office in order to preserve the rights of the Beech-Nut Packing Company and that no doubt your attorneys will advise the filing of a formal opposition against this registration to preserve any rights that you may have, and that it would be unwise for us to abandon this application for registration without contest unless we reach some definite agreement.

Up to the present time we have come to no final understanding and as the matter stands to date you have agreed to make certain changes in your label and submit your proposed changes to us, but have asked us to assume the loss which your company will incur by reason of making such change.

We do not feel disposed to reimburse your company for losses sustained by reason of adopting trade-mark and common law property which rightfully belongs to this company although such adoption may have been a mistake on the part of those in your employ who prepare such illustrative matter.

Briefly stated, our position is this—That regardless of the trade-name or mark "Beech-Nut" your company adopted our oval trade-mark and our general color scheme and other embellishments for your cigarette package, and this your company had no right to do regardless of any rights that you may have had in so far as the name "Beech-Nut" is concerned.

From a pure equitable standpoint we therefore believe that you should make the necessary changes so that there will be no similarity as to designs or marking upon the package other than the name "Beech-Nut."

The mistake, we believe, is due entirely to your organization and therefore this company should in no wise contribute to its correction. On the other hand, we are advised that for a sum less than the amount which you have suggested we contribute to reimburse you for the necessary changes, our legal rights could be determined and regardless of what the court might hold as to our respective rights in the trade-name "Beech-Nut" we are assured that a court would sustain our contentions as to the subject-matter which we now ask you to abandon.

Of course we know that lawyers cannot always foretell the outcome of any litigation on any given set of facts, and contests of this kind are undesirable to both parties.

The matter has been given very thorough consideration by us and we feel that your package should be changed and that such changes should be made at your expense. Our other differences, such as the opposition proceeding, can be very readily adjusted after we have definitely agreed upon the main issue, and we should be pleased to hear from ~~you~~ further.

Very truly yours,

BEECH-NUT PACKING CO.,

F. E. Barbour.

October 15, 1919.

Mr. F. E. Barbour, Secretary,
Beech-Nut Packing Company,
Canajoharie, New York.

Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter of the 8th inst., this Company has not adopted any trade-mark or common-law property or design or color scheme or other embellishments belonging to your Company, nor have we agreed to make changes in our labels.

When knowledge of your attempted marketing of a "BEECH NUT" Cigarette reached us, we at once wrote asserting our ownership of the trade-mark "BEECH-NUT" for all tobacco products and asked your Company to respect this ownership. There followed an interview with Mr. Arkell and Mr. Lipe. In this interview it developed that the only real matters in difference as respects our use of the trade-mark "BEECH NUT" for cigarettes were the color of the background and the wording of the catch-phrase on our proposed package of "BEECH NUT" cigarettes, and we promised to submit a sample package with a different background and a different catch-phrase, in an endeavor to see if these differences could not be amicably adjusted, stating to you at the time, however, that if we did come to an agreement in this respect it would involve the loss of material we had already bought and that this loss should be borne by your Company. We subsequently submitted the sample as promised.

What we did and said in this connection was without any waiver of our rights and without recognition of any right in your Company to require any such change; but solely as explained in the interview and as we have tried to make plain in our correspondence, in a friendly endeavor to get together in this matter. Our ownership of the brand "BEECH NUT" for all tobacco products is clear and we are exercising our ownership of this brand, including the proposed package for "BEECH NUT" Cigarettes, in an entirely legal manner.

If we have failed in this endeavor, as your letter seems to indicate and which we sincerely regret, will you kindly return the sample package which we sent you.

Very truly yours,

President.
